DRAUGHT BEER UP FIVE CENTS

Two bits will no longer purchase a nine-ounce glass of draught beer in the province.

The Liquor Administration Branch today announced a five-cent increase to 30 cents for each glass immediately.

LAB general manager Bill Bruce said the premises which offer entertainment may apply to the branch for further increases. The branch is also reviewing a breweries' request for wholesale price increases.

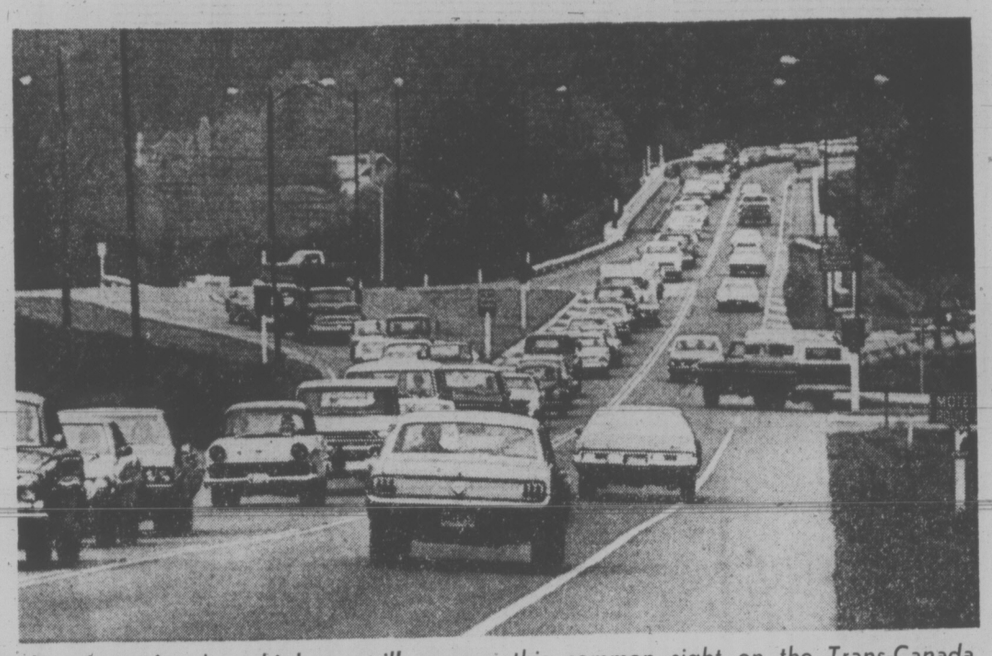
The 5-cent increase is not expected to please the B.C. Motel Association. The association earlier pushed for a floating price to cover increased costs of wages and taxes.

Commenting on the increase, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said, "Every decision we make is always based on economic facts, whether pleasant or unpleasant."

The price has not increased since 1971 when a glass of brew went from 20 to 25 cents.

DOUGLAS ST. TO THETIS LAKE

Trans-Canada Widening Set



Plans for a four-lane highway will remove this common sight on the Trans-Canada

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Work will probably start late next year on widening the Trans-Canada Highway between the Thetis Lake interchange and the Town and Country shopping centre, Highways Minister Graham Lea said Thursday.

But Lea said the widening of that section of the Trans-Canada from two to four lanes will be only an interim measure to handle traffic needs over the next five years.

His department is basing its long-term planning on the principle that the artery eventually must have at least an eight-lane capacity to cope with future growth irrespective of other transportation improvements such as a transit system.

When that stage is reached and the minister didn't make any predictions on dates the four central lanes will be reserved exclusively for "inter-regional" or through traffic and buses, with the flanking lanes handline local commuter and other traffic.

Lea said extensive land acquisitions will be necessary for a highway of such width, but those still lie some years ahead. In the meantime his department will "safeguard" the right-of-way by ensuring that no development in conflict with the plan occurs on land fringing the highway.

Dick Readshaw, director of highway designs and surveys in Lea's department, said the eight-lane capacity would have to be provided over the entire stretch of highway from the Town and Country centre to Langford, in the vicinity of the Trans-Canada-Spencer intersection.

At that location it would revert to the standard four-lane inter-regional route.

Lea, Readshaw and deputy highways minister Howard Sturrock were discussing in a Times interview the problems already affecting the Trans-Canada (see page 19), those stemming from continued residential growth over the next quarter-century and the possible remedies.

Lea said he agreed with the highway planners' view that this artery poses "probably the most unique and complex transportation problem in North America . . . because we have no other options open" (in the form of alternative transportation corridors).

"At the moment we feel we have only a five-year solution between Town and Country and Thetis, if we can get going next year with a start on our four-lane program," he added.

Readshaw estimated that if work could start on the widening project in late 1975 it would take at least another two years to complete.

Under the improvements, he said, the ramps at the Thetis Lake interchange and the intersections along the route at Helmcken, Burnside and Tillicum would be redesigned to ensure smoother traffic flow.

The light-controlled intersections would be upgraded to about the standard of those on the Pat Bay Highway, while other minor intersections would probably have to be eliminated because access from them to a four-lane highway would be too dangerous.

Readshaw said the roads in question are mainly those joining the Trans-Canada in the Portage Inlet area, and special "service roads" would have to be provided as a replacement.

Sturrock said the widening job would be co-ordinated with the other major project of extending Blanshard to line up with the Trans-Canada, via an 800-foot tunnel beneath the

Trustees Charge Pressure

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

School trustees in B.C. are charging the provincial government bowed to "pressure tactics" and illegal strikes by teachers in the emergency arbitration legislation introduced Thursday.

"The B.C. Teachers' Federation was clearly the ghost writer of the interim legislation," said B.C. School Trustees' Association president Eileen Madson.

She said the legislation shows the government has been "remiss in its duties to the children and taxpayers of this province."

The legislation was presented by Education Minister Eileen Dailly to solve the impasse in teacher-trustee negotiations for their 1975 contracts.

It first extends the deadline for conciliation by two weeks to Nov. 29 in the hopes more districts will reach settlements before the date for mandatory arbitration.

Secondly, it states that when the contracts finally go to arbitration, it shall be done on a district by district basis and no arbitrator shall be ap-

Emergency Wheat Limits Plan Agreed

Times News Services

ROME — Canada and other major grain-producing countries have agreed to consider an emergency plan limiting foreign wheat sales to make seven million tons available to ward off starvation in Asia and Africa over the next eight months.

Addeke Boerma, director-general of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, presented the plan to a closed meeting earlier this week of the principal wheat-exporting countries and some of their biggest customers.

Besides Canada it was attended by the United States, the Soviet Union, Australia, Argentina, the European Common Market countries and China.

Boerma asked for a response by next Tuesday.

A U.S. spokesman said that because of the large amount involved and low wheat stocks available, Boerma's plan obviously poses delicate problems.

The seven million tons needed until the 1975 harvest begins normally would cost $1.5 billion, including the cost of transporting it to the needy countries.

Sources at the food conference said Boerma in effect asked the exporting nations to limit supplies available to such major industrialized importers as Britain, West Germany, Japan and Italy and make the grain available on favorable loan terms or as outright grants to countries unable to pay for it.

The U.S. has decided to commit additional quantities of food assistance to Egypt, following earlier agreements on tobacco and wheat.

U.S. officials also said here Thursday that the Middle East countries are expected to receive about 15 per cent of the total U.S. food assistance package in this fiscal year.

Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz confirmed that he would fly to Cairo Saturday, see President Anwar Sadat, sign a new food-aid agrement and then go on to Syria for talks.

At the general conference meeting Thursday, China attacked the economic policies of the world's major trading powers.

Vice-Agriculture Minister Hao Chung-shih blamed the world food crisis on mass exploitation of developing countries by industrialized nations, principally the Soviet Union and the United States.

Without mentioning either country by name, he denounced "the ugly features of social-imperialism," and "superpower speculation and profiteering."

★ FOOD OR— DRINKS

ROME (UPI) — The delegate from Bangladesh stood up solemnly and warned the world food conference that mass starvation could lead to a cataclysmic degeneration of human society.

But only a smattering of delegates showed up at the conference hall to hear him. Many skipped the grim speech to attend a glass-clinking cocktail party hosted by Ghana in a room next door.

Bangladesh Agriculture Minister Abdus Samad Azad looked out at the nearly empty hall Thursday night and said failure to combat the threat of famine would be "a long-lasting crime against man and God."

"Looking beyond the immediate, one may discern that starvation and malnutrition are not only eroding the efficiency of the work force in the developing world, but are also leading to a genetic degeneration," he said.

Only about 50 of the more than 1,000 delegates showed up to hear Azad warn of a world with "two classes of human beings — one affluent, aggressive and authoritarian, the other depressed, servile and degraded."

Two Killed In Another Pub Blast

LONDON (Reuter) — Two men died and nearly 30 persons were injured, some seriously, when a bomb explosion ripped through a bar used by off-duty servicemen in southeast London.

Among those injured in the blast were two women soldiers and at least six other service personnel.

Early today a spokesman for a new left-wing extremist group, called Red Flag 74, telephoned a newspaper saying it had planted the bomb.

Red Flag 74 claimed responsibility for a series of bomb attacks recently, including two blasts at bars used by servicemen in the south England town of Guildford in which five army recruits died and 65 people were injured.

A member of Scotland Yard's bomb squad said today it was believed that the bomb, weighing five to 10 pounds, might have been thrown through a bar window by two women and a man seen outside in a car.

A witness said the interior of the bar was devastated and strewn with broken bottles and smashed furniture.

"There was a young man with a hole in his stomach and others with horrible wounds in their faces and bodies," he said.

In England, 24 persons have lost their lives since February, 1972, in bomb attacks directed against servicemen.

$250M Fisheries Plan To 'Rehabilitate' Rivers

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Recreation and Conservation Minister Jack Radford said today the basic objective of a proposed $256,000-million federal fisheries program is to rehabilitate and restore the productivity of British Columbia's salmon streams and rivers.

Hatcheries are not a major factor in the program, he said.

"We would like to get our damaged rivers into shape in order to restore the salmon population to the levels of the 1800's," he said.

Radford was commenting on a federal fisheries department announcement that a program is being prepared to increase the production of spawning salmon from 25 to 50 million a year.

The minister said the program would have to be approved by federal and provincial governments, and if accepted, would be carried out over a period of 20 years.

He explained while the federal government had jurisdiction over commercial fisheries the province had jurisdiction over land surrounding rivers and streams and watersheds.

"There has to be a mutual agreement," he said. "We are prepared to co-operate in the implementation of such a program. We have ignored our valuable fisheries resource far too long."

Radford said in the long run, economically, the fisheries resource was as valuable, perhaps more so, than logging.

"Logging is renewable every 70 years," he said. "That is once you have cut the trees you have to wait 70 years for another crop. But salmon is renewable every two and five years."

"You don't have to spray them, protect them against fire and build costly roads," he said. "They are also a valuable source of protein."

Radford cited as an example the Adams River, north of Shuswap Lake, where more than one million salmon spawned this year.

"This is one of the most valuable 300 acres in the world," he said. "The river produces tons of fish."

Two internationally-known salmon experts said the federal fisheries program was a breakthrough in the fight to save B.C. salmon streams and rivers.

Roderick Haig-Brown, a member of the International Salmon Commission, said the program was good as long as it didn't "deteriorate to building hatcheries and show pieces."

"It means money would be used to repair damage to such rivers as the Stellako, near Prince George," he said. "This is the river on which Williston allowed log driving, against the recommendations of the fisheries department, except the one he cooked up."

Howard English, a member of the commission's advisory committee, agreed with Haig-Brown that the program was "excellent."

"Rivers are the most economical way of producing fish," he said. "But apart from that by preserving rivers, you preserve the quality of life."

Major Project Said Delayed by Bank

BY ROB BULL

MONTREAL (FP) — The Star says a mammoth construction project by Canadian Pacific has been delayed at the request of the Bank of Montreal which it says is in financial difficulties.

The bank has denied it is having money problems.

Demolition of the downtown Laurentian Hotel scheduled for closing in mid-November, has been put off for 18 months, the paper said, at the demand of the bank which had planned to use part of the planned development as its new head office.

The newspaper says the bank is heavily committed to a $160 million project in Toronto, that its shares dropped from a high earlier this year on the stock market of $21 to $12, and quotes an analyst at Wood Gundy as saying the bank has a capital problem and would have difficulty raising money by a debenture issued today.

The Star also says there has been talk in the financial community of the bank's losses on its entry into the Master Charge credit card scheme.

The newspaper says further that the Bank of Montreal, like Lloyds Bank of England and the Franklin Bank of New York, has suffered heavy losses in foreign exchange dealings.

While both the bank and Canadian Pacific agree that no long-term commitment has been made between the two, a bank spokesman says "The bank's financial position has no bearing on these negotiations."

"The bank," he added, "has not suffered losses in foreign exchange in any manner whatsoever. That is categorical. We had, moreover, a $50 million debenture issue in August which was successful."

He said the Master Charge program was "away ahead of schedule" and had already obtained the number of cardholders and merchants for the plan which its organizers had previously postulated would belong in five year's time.

"There has been an acceleration of the cost of this program along with its accelerated growth," he said, "but I wouldn't call this losses."

Fines Proposed to Replace Prisons

OTTAWA (CP) — A radical system of fines, restitution and compensation which would see prisons become more of a last resort is proposed in the latest working papers of the Law Reform Commission of Canada.

The commissioners say the system would see the law for the first time give some real consideration to the victim of crime.

It would introduce fines based on income in place of unproductive imprisonment of non-violent offenders, a system that would make the burden of the penalty equal for rich and poor.

Where restitution was inadequate or impossible, such as when the offender is not caught, the government would step in with compensation in many cases — paying from a "reparation chest" into which the revenue from fines was placed.

The two papers, released Thursday, also introduce the concept of working in place of fines or restitution, but do not spell it out fully.

The concepts are radical and show the commissioners joining a growing number of experts who are finding prison is not the answer to much non-violent crime and that the victim must have some consideration in law. In the case of the geared-to-income fines, the commission drew heavily from Swedish law.

The commission says it is nonsensical that the convicted offender rarely is made to pay for the damage he has done.

"Isn't it surprising that the victim generally gets nothing for his loss?"

The commissioners come to this conclusion: "If the lawless wilfully break the rules that protect our social values they ought to be held accountable and provided with the opportunity to restore the harm done to the victim and the social fabric."

They say attempting to reform the prisoner into a productive participant in society is a costly undertaking, the effectiveness of which remains in doubt.

So they make suggestions under which the perpetrators of most non-violent crimes, once found guilty, would be ordered to make restitution. This could cover psychological, physical or financial loss, and include an apology, monetary payment or work order.

When full restitution was not possible, state compensation would apply in cases of personal injury and property

Real Estate Market Sours

After a banner year, the local real estate market has gone sour, according to figures released today by the Victoria Real Estate Board.

Sales under the multiple listing service during October totalled $7.2 million, down $1.8 million from September and $700,000 below the total for October, 1973.

Total sales in September had been $9 million, about the same as September, 1973. Average property sale in October was $44,200, down from $45,000 in September.

After 10 months, the total MLS sales are $500,000 ahead of the first 10 months of 1973, but most of the strength came during the first nine months. At the end of September, the sales had been $1.2 million ahead of 1973.

During October there were 491 new listings received by MLS, up from 473 in September.

The Victoria Real Estate Board, in releasing the figures, said the downturn was the result of the extremely tight mortgage money market.

Volume of real estate sales would pick up as soon as more mortgage funds became available, the board said.

Further depressing the real estate market is a record total of 90 newly-completed houses which have not yet been sold in the Victoria area. Normally only about 20 homes lie vacant after completion.

Across British Columbia, the average property price during the first nine months was $42,595, about 41 per cent higher than the average price of $30,314 in the first nine months of 1973, according to figures released by the Canadian Real Estate Association.

Total sales volume during the first nine months in B.C. was $636 million, up 22 per cent from $520 million in the same period of 1973.

The average property price in Ontario during 1974 was $46,899, up 32 per cent from 1973. The average price for all of Canada was $40,999, up 32 per cent.

While the nine-month figures are strong, the third quarter results show a gradual tapering of the real estate market across Canada and the final quarter is expected to show a general downturn in the market.

SUGAR CROP DAMAGED

MANILA (UPI) — A series of typhoons is threatening to sour the Philippines' booming sugar export business.

President Ferdinand E. Marcos suspended the trading and export of sugar Thursday pending the completion of an official survey on damage caused to the country's sugar cane plantations.

As one of the world's 10 or 12 biggest sugar exporters, the Philippines has been enjoying an unprecedented bonanza because of soaring prices of the commodity caused by its scarcity.

This year, industry sources projected a record annual production of about 3 million tons with foreign exchange earnings expected to surpass the $1 billion mark.

pointed to more than two boards.

With 74 districts in the province and at least six likely to be settled, 34 different arbiters could be appointed by the school trustees.

The dispute has centered around the number of conciliators and in turn, the number of arbiters the school trustees should appoint to deal with the new contracts.

A hand-delivered note to the office of Education Minister Eileen Dailly, written by Victoria School Board Chairman Peter Bunn expressed the board's reaction to the move.

"The Greater Victoria school board greatly regrets your action in introducing legislation contrary to the wishes of this board and 67 other school boards," the note said.

"It is sad to see how powerful the teachers union has become — so powerful in fact that even the minister is unable to withstand its pressure, and that we, the people's representatives are unable to carry out the people's wishes. Today is a black day for democracy and education.

"Your action in this matter raises the question of our confidence in you as minister of

Traditionally each district has bargained individually and each chosen its own three-man arbitration board, but this year the trustees hoped to bargain on a province-wide basis.

Trustees later agreed to a compromise by Dailly to appoint 17 conciliators to bargain on a regional basis, but the teachers argued that the law requires individual bargaining.

BCTF president Jim Macfarlan said the interim bill, which is to deal with this year's contract only, means the government has upheld the law in providing for individual district-by-district bargaining and arbitration.

If the trustees follow the "spirit" of the legislation, he said, the two-week extension will allow many districts to settle their contracts before arbitration.

The legislation will likely mean the end to any further work stoppages by teachers, he said, provided again that trustees see the "spirit" of the bill as supporting district-by-district bargaining.

But Madson said the trustees view of the "spirit" of the legislation may be quite different and a meeting will be held by the BCSTA Monday to decide on a strategy.

Looking further ahead still, he said it was conceivable that Craigflower, increasingly popular as a commuter route to town for Colwood and Langford residents, might have to be widened to four lanes at some future date.

Lea emphasized the measures his department is planning are only the minimum that will be required, and will have to be complemented by other transportation improvements — specifically by some form of transit system.

"The point we'd like to make is that we are not dedicated to highways," he said. "Besides, we can't afford them. We are saying that we have to get into public transportation but in the meantime there is an interim period for which we have to provide better highway facilities.

"We feel it's a good approach for us to let the public know what problems we face, so that we can worry about them together. Because there's not getting around the fact that we have a severe transportation problem in this area."

Less Prison Use Urged

loss, although there would be no compensation for corporations.

In some cases the act of restitution would be considered punishment enough. In others fines would be added.

These would not be of the so-many-dollars or so-many-days variety. The commission would virtually end the prison alternative to fines.

In cases of fines of more than $25 the judge could use "day-fines," defined by the commission as a thousandth of the convict's gross annual income. Thus a rich man earning $50,000 a year and sentenced to 20 day-fines would pay $1,000 while a person earning $5,000 would pay $100.

Arrangements could be made for installment payment. Failure to pay would result in a set of responses including refinancing or a wage garnishee. Prison would be a last resort, ordered only when it is shown a judge that the person could pay but wouldn't.

Even if a person eventually did go to prison, the commission looks forward to the day when he could work off restitution and-or fines at acceptable rates of pay there.

Saanich Candidates

Six candidates, two of them incubent aldgrmen and another two with previous service on council, are bidding for one of four two-year aldermanic seats in the Nov. 16 Saanich municipal election.

Casilio

Mary Casilio, housewife, of 1150 Union, is the former Mary Peden, well-known in athletic circles in earlier years.

She wants the taxpayers to have a stronger voice in decisions involving the development of their own areas and says she would make a point to talk to residents prior to public hearings when rezoning is being planned in their area.

Mrs. Casilio says she would support the police department in its task of "establishing order in our permissive society" and advocate more traffic officers be used if necessary.

She advocates stricter control of municipal finances in order to cut down on excessive spending.

Couvelier

Ald Mel Couvelier, businessman, of 3987 Gordon Head, is completing a one-year term on council.

"There are limitations to what an individual alderman can hope to accomplish," he concedes, adding:

"After one year's experience I believe some progress is attainable in limiting the bulk of future townhouse developments; assuring our main roads do not become fluorescent strips and explaining the background to council decisions and debates to the people."

Saying residential growth is inevitable, Couvelier warns:

"It must be planned and orderly and, most important of all, must protect present life styles and property values.

"Our rural-residential mix is a priceless asset. The delicate balance between these contradictions must be preserved."

Goodman

Charles Goodman, businessman, of 1519 Winchester, claims an elected official should reflect the views and wishes of the electorate, asserting some aldermen on council are not doing this.

Goodman, who polled 3,010 votes in an unsuccessful bid in 1973, says:

"My platform still stands. We must put an end to spot zoning and resist the expansion of medium and high density housing into single-family neighborhoods.

"On the other hand, new construction of townhouses and apartments must achieve high standards of design and construction with good landscaping."

He endorses the proposal for a Saanich design panel.

McDonald

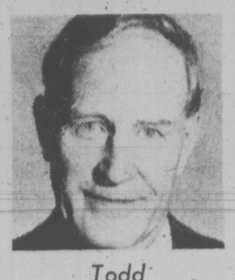
Ald. John McDonald, bakery manager, of 3647 Doncaster, is completing a two-year term as alderman.

He supports the establishment, in the next 18 months, of an official community plan for the municipality.

"Items of real concern are roads, sidewalks, drainage improvements and recreational facilities, including a second ice surface," he says.

"I feel I can offer a meaningful contribution to the sound judgment and decision-making needed to establish the priorities and components for such a referendum.

"It is my belief that the taxpayer should be able to vote on capital project items individually, rather than all lumped together as was the case in the previous referendum attempt."



Todd

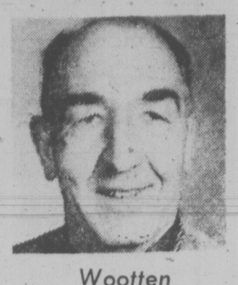
Harold C. Todd of 1402 Anrews, a retired federal civil servant, served on Saanich council from 1957 to 1969.

He says his years on council, in a time of rapid growth and development, gave him practical experience on every council committee.

"We must continue careful fiscal policy," he says, "exercise the utmost care in zoning matters, try to improve subdivision bylaws and, in general, practise good housekeeping."

A long-time Saanich resident, Todd promises to make his aldermanic duties a full-time responsibility if elected.

Employed mainly in the postal department, he took early retirement from the federal civil service in 1973.



Wootten

Roy Wootten, of 635 Brookleigh, a former councillor and recently retired after many years as a municipal employee, says it is imperative Saanich maintain its "excellent police, fire and recreational services at the same high level without further burdens on home-owners.

A means of doing this, Wootten claims, is to encourage small businesses.

"It may be necessary for the municipality to buy and lease lots in order to accommodate these people," Wootten says. "This could enable them to operate economically, vacate residential areas and encourage them to stay in the municipality, thereby creating employment and broadening our tax base."

He lists proper financing, planning and zoning as Saanich's top priorities.

DISTRICT 63

Four candidates are vying for two Central Saanich seats on Saanich school board in the Nov. 16 municipal elections.

Running for a two-year term are:

WALTER TANGYE of 2534 Newman, a teacher at Mt. Douglas senior secondary school.

Tangye was appointed to fill a vacant Central Saanich seat on the board in January.

An engineer, he says he knows schools and how they are designed, built, inspected and paid for.

"I know that we sometimes lack control over our projects," he says. "The tennis courts at Mt. Newton (school) are not good and the school board must provide better supervision in future."

Tangye says he has broad experience in public schools and was a master instructor at the B.C. Institute of Technology for five years.

ERIC VICKERMAN, 9145 West Saanich Rd., is an auditor-accountant with the department of national revenue.

Vickerman says he wants to be of service to the area where he has lived 28 years, and he believes vacancies for public office should be contested, not won by acclamation.

He is a founding member of the Sidney Senior Citizens Housing Society and an officer of the Public Service Alliance.

JAMES LANG, 61, of 10173 Mellissa, employee of the federal job creation branch.

Lang, who was a trustee in Prince George for four years, is concerned about the rising cost of education and the fact that many students today "cannot spell, let alone write in good intelligible English."

He says teachers "are being influenced by a militant B.C. Teachers' Federation executive, and that they take too big a slice of the school operating budgets, already too small for what they are designed to do.

"If we are forced to grant another 20 per cent increase this year, we must realize that it will be the students who will be short-changed," he said.

HARRY M. TOBIN, 62, of 1744 Cultra, federal immigration officer.

Tobin, resident in the school district 22 years, plans to retire early in 1975 so says he will have time to devote to school board work.

He served on the board from 1970 to 1972, working to improve learning conditions and to plan Parkland secondary school.

Elected to the board by acclamation were Dr. Gerry Kristianson in Saanich ward, incumbent Lois Walsh in North Saanich, and incumbent Norma Sealey in Sidney.

Sooke Trustee Hopefuls

Running for two seats in Belmont ward are:

Irene Lane, 48, of 3810 Duke Rd., mother of six.

Mrs Lane thinks the district must plan carefully for the influx of children coming into the area.

She supports the idea of holding public meetings so parents, students, teachers and trustees can discuss issues such as discipline, and smoking in schools.

The school district should offer parents the choice between less-structured and more-structured schools, at least at the elementary levels, she says.

Littler, board chairman this year, says he'd like to see through to completion construction of the new high school in the district, which will draw some students from Belmont-Fisher school, now an "unwieldy monster" with an enrolment of 1,600.

He says he is concerned with students who reach high school and find themselves unable to cope "because they can neither read, write, spell or calculate properly."

Children should be examined for possible learning disabilities as early as kindergarten so the defects can be corrected, he says.

Mrs. Reader is seeking her 11th two-year term on the board.

She says she had a checkup with her doctor who told her she is in good health, and she feels she still has something to offer the school board.

Seeking his second term on the board, Doniecki says that in spite of rising costs "efficient financial management has kept the cost to the taxpayer down without curtailment of the so important education of our children."

He promises that improvements in transportation for students will continue.

Ernest Knott, 4810 Sooke Rd., a woodworker.

Knott supports strict efficient financial control and better long-range planning for the board, and removal of school taxes from property.

He wants greater Canadian content in school texts, and thinks unwieldy schools like Belmont-Fisher must be avoided.

"Teachers cannot do a good job on their educational tasks if they have to spend their time on litter, discipline and traffic problems, which really are the responsibility of parents and other authorities," says Knott.

Children Can Enjoy A French Play Sunday

A French language play for children will be presented in Victoria Sunday by a professional theatre company from Quebec.

The company is Dandelion Theatre (Theatre des Pissenlits) and the play is entitled Ti-Jean Margoton et le Mauvais Genie. Sponsoring the production is Le Club Canadien Francais de Victoria under a special grant from the Interprovincial Council for the Diffusion of Culture.

Ti-Jean will be performed at 301 Richmond Road at 7:30 p.m.

Artistic director of the company is Jean-Yves Gaudreault, a graduate of Quebec Conservatory of Dramatic Arts. He has studied theatre for children in various European countries. The cast consists of conservatory graduates.

Following the performance, players meet with the child audience and parents to discuss the play. To date the company has given 1,000 performances for over 40,000 children across the country.

Dabbling in Answers

No wonder there was so little crowing from the government side of the house of commons when October unemployment figures went down everywhere except British Columbia. Since the cabinet receives Statistics Canada reports four days before they are made public — an unsavory practice from the point of view of potential manipulation — the ministers were well aware that the cost of living figures were about to overshadow marginal employment gains. At least three cabinet ministers have repeatedly said that hard times were ahead, and the public hardly blinks when the monthly litany of rising prices makes a one-day story.

But figures are always sobering. The consumer price index rose almost one per cent in October indicating that inflation is gathering speed, if anything. In the 12 month period to the end of October the food index is up 15.7 per cent. The housing index rose 10.3 per cent during the year and transportation and clothing gained by 9.8 per cent. Consumer items that cost $100 in 1961 cost $172.20 in October.

Part of the current double digit inflation is simply a reflection of world wide problems brought on by high oil and fuel prices plus insatiable demand for commodities which are growing scarce. Yet it is still eminently fair to ask what the Canadian government is doing to alleviate domestic inflation. The answers have not been heartening since the July election. Almost immediately the government lifted the federal milk subsidy and the price of milk has predictably climbed four cents per quart and it will probably scale even greater heights by spring. Beryl Plumptre's food and prices review board has suprisingly unearthed some scandalous marketing policies and retail pricing systems which should be scrutinized by the Combines Investigation branch. But her board has no official clout and the lady is threatening to resign again.

In his first speech in the house of commons last Friday Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet called for a hardline Combines Investigation Act codifying severe fines and even jail sentences for company executives convicted of price fixing. Meanwhile the government's exceptional trade practices amendments to the Combines Investigation Act — at best a soft bone thrown to howling consumer groups — has not become law. If there are excess profits being taken, the government is not too anxious to be faced with such evidence, it would seem. In the housing realm one project to help prospective home owners has run out of funds, and the outright $500 grant program is inadequate.

To date the government has dabbled where it should have delivered at least some respite. Few people expect Finance Minister John Turner's budget to be an economic panacea but in view of spiralling inflation that is approaching crisis proportions the finance minister should offer some relief to Canadians who are being ground down in a vicious circle of price and wage increases.

"... I wouldn't trust that brand ... it hasn't gone up in price for the last four days ..."

Prolonging the Agony

On Wednesday Education Minister Eileen Dailly said her intention was to provide legislation that would prevent any further crisis in the current teacher-trustee bargaining dispute. On Thursday she introduced legislation that appears to prolong the agony. The minister emphasized that she was not interfering in the process of negotiation and conciliation. But the bill extends the conciliation period for two weeks, from Nov. 15 to Nov. 29. A second amendment proposes that no arbitrator may sit on more than two boards — if the impasse is not solved, the Public Schools Act has provisions for compulsory arbitration.

At present the B.C. school trustees, who originally wanted one negotiator to represent all school boards in the province, have agreed to negotiate on a regional basis with 17 government appointed conciliators. The B.C. Teachers' Federation refuse to bargain regionally, and say the trustees are breaking the law if they won't negotiate on a local basis. By local bargaining the B.C.T.F. has a decided advantage. They can point to one good local settlement and use it as a precedent in other areas. For the trustees part, one negotiator is equally advantageous because it would do away with the "divide and conquer" strategy they have been faced with over the years.

To date only six of 74 school districts have initiated bargaining. The impasse on how the other 68 settlements will be achieved, either regionally or locally, is what the dispute is all about. By saying that no arbitrator may sit on more than two boards Dailly is in a sense imposing a compromise on the compromise of regional bargaining which the school trustees brought up. It is also true that the minister's solution of what is essentially 34 arbitration boards goes half way in the direction of local bargaining. The proposed solution is sure to make the trustees mad and the teachers smug.

By next spring the all-party Select Standing Committee of the Legislature will rule on the local, regional or provincial basis of teacher-trustee bargaining. That's not much help at this juncture, when the education minister could see the problem looming on the horizon like a tornado last summer. During the two-week extension period a further compromise may be worked out. If not "the orderly process for ultimate resolution" which the minister talked about may be wishful thinking.

PAUL WHITELAW

Ball in Democrats' Court Now

WASHINGTON — American voters have severely punished the Republican party for Watergate and rampant inflation. But there is also a clear warning signal for the victorious Democrats in the implicit challenge to do a better job.

By questioning the ability of President Gerald Ford and his party to come to grips with the economy — the number one issue now that the Watergate maelstrom is subsiding — the voters have shifted some of the responsibility for dealing with the problem away from the White House.

The vastly-increased Democratic majority in congress will now be riding the inflation roller coaster side by side with Gerald Ford, and it will share more equally the blame or the credit for what happens during the next two years.

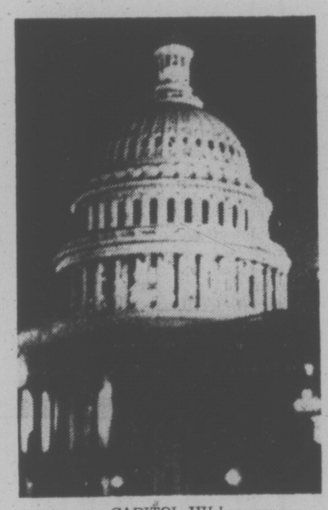
Jingoistic Debate

Whether the increased Democratic majority in the senate and the house of representatives has the answers to relieve the voters' discontent is now a central question in Washington. The Democratic campaign leading up to the Tuesday elections certainly didn't provide a ready answer.

Indeed, there was surprisingly little debate on the critical questions facing the United States, not only regarding the economy, but also energy, defence and foreign policy. While Ford criss-crossed the U.S. warning the voters about the dangers of a veto-proof congress and criticizing Democrats as big spenders, the Democrats responded with equally jingoistic arguments.

While Democrats attacked the size of the U.S. defence budget, the party was selectively blind about other aspects of federal government spending — notably social programs. Oil company profits were also a favorite target. But that hardly came to grips with the larger issue of long-range energy shortages and the inevitable inflationary effect of this problem.

John Rhodes, the house Republican leader, neatly summed up the effect of the election when he remarked: "The whole country has apparently told the Democratic party they should go ahead with a legislative program of their own. And I would assume they will try ... The ball is in their court."



CAPITOL HILL
... have Democrats the answers?

The message of the voters was also clear to Democrat Carl Albert, the powerful house speaker. He feels his party can meet the challenge and outlined the prescription that he believes can restore economic health.

This includes enacting "a real housing program," passing a national health insurance bill before next summer, tax reform legislation. He also called for a new stress on public service employment to stimulate production, reduce unemployment and attack inflation without creating more of a recession.

While President Ford couched his post-election statement on his willingness to co-operate with the new Congress, it was clear that he believes the voters may have taken some of the heat off the White House.

"The mandate of the electorate places upon the next congress a full measure of responsibility for solving this problem (inflation)," he noted. "I will work with them wholeheartedly in this urgent task, which is certainly beyond partisanship."

The Democrats' congressional landslide, of course, was only one expression of the electorate's discontent. Democratic governors were elected to replace Republicans in four states, giving the party control of 34 state houses. There was only one upset victory in favor of the GOP in the gubernatorial campaigns.

Question Marks

While the setbacks for the Republicans in the governors' races may not affect Ford's chances to implement his legislative programs, they raised new question marks about the GOP's chances of retaining control of the White House in 1976. That, in turn, could affect whether Ford, or some other Republican, will be the GOP presidential nominee two years from now.

The president's prestige has been hurt by the landslide gains of the Democrats Tuesday, all the more so because of his gung ho campaigning on behalf of GOP candidates in recent weeks. But he has built up a big balance of political IOUs among Republican organizers in the states he has visited.

His political future will be affected by how well the victorious Democrats now meet the implicit challenge of the American voters—to do a better job.

JAMES GRAY

West Remembers Long Fight

CALGARY — To equate the sensitivity of prairie governments to Ottawa's claims on their oil and gas income with Quebec's sensitivity to the language question would be an exaggeration. But not by much — both are very much visceral issues.

The struggle of the western provinces to get their natural resources back from Ottawa was a long and bitter one. It erupted time and again from the turn of the century until 1929 and the residue of bitterness left still has not evaporated.

That the western provinces won out in the end was in large measure attributable to J. W. Dafoe, the editor of the Winnipeg Free Press. He kept the issue alive when others began to view it as a lost cause.

From 1905 until 1930, Ottawa treated the western provinces as a covey of retardeds incapable of managing their own affairs. It rejected the consensus of confederation that the natural resources should belong to the provinces in which they were located. Section 109 of the BNA Act stipulated:

Same as Others

"All lands, mines, minerals and royalties belonging to the several provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick at the union, and all sums then due and payable for such lands, mines, minerals and royalties shall belong to the several provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick in which the same are situate or arise ..."

The use of revenue from the development of resources to pay for essential services was accepted in principle. But when Manitoba tried to be treated like the others, Ottawa refused. Similar requests from Saskatchewan and Alberta when these provinces came into existence in 1905 were also rejected.

The natural resources agitation reached such proportions that the Conservative party pledged to put the western provinces on the same footing as the others. Nothing came of that promise. In the late 1920s the Liberals picked it up and used it as a promise to cajole the maverick Progressives into supporting them against Arthur Meighen.

The Liberals crashed into a Maritime provinces claim. They argued that as founding provinces they had a claim to part ownership in the resources of western Canada. Additional sweeteners in Maritimes subsidies bought them off and in 1929 a deal was made to turn the resources over to the western provinces and compensate them for what had been sold off by the federal government.

More than 200 million acres of land, including 20 million acres of school lands and $31 million in school land trust funds were turned over to the provinces. Then came the long and bitter hassle over the size of the compensation.

PRAIRIES
... long memories in west

British Columbia, which had a smaller claim, settled for $750,000. Manitoba took $4,584,000 but Alberta and Saskatchewan balked. Compensation was paid only for stuff sold after 1905 when the two became provinces. Saskatchewan insisted it wanted pay for all the land sold from 1880 onward and carried its case to the Privy Council but lost.

Alberta claimed Ottawa owed it for all the coal that had been produced, along with great gobs of oil and gas. And there was also Ottawa's responsibility for the vast wastage of billions of feet of gas in Turner Valley. Because of the way Ottawa had drawn the oil and gas leases, it took a special act of parliament to enable Alberta to enact sensible conservation legislation.

Ultimately a royal commission awarded the two provinces $5 million each in compensation. By this time, 1935, the provinces were so deeply in hock to Ottawa for unemployment relief loans that the awards were academic.

Throughout history, however, natural resources have been a lot more than simple financial festers on dominion-provincial relations. To the prairie provinces natural resource development has been the magical elixir which would free them from fiefdom to king wheat and the one crop economy.

For 50 years the west lived or died with the size of the wheat crop. With a good crop and good prises the goose hung high. When the crop failed or prices collapsed, one or the other happened frequently, everybody went on a feather and neck diet.

The oil fields and gas fields turned everything around for Alberta. Oil and potash took the wheat curse off the Saskatchewan economy. Manitoba's hoped for mining boom never matured, but a great hydroelectic development did.

Everything Good

Everything good that has happened to the west in recent years came by way of natural resources development. Everything good that will happen tomorrow will come from the same source.

It is a matter of money, of course. But not just money. It is also a matter of tomorrow, and the determination of Ottawa to intrude on somebody else's feast. The west fought too long and too hard to take possession of its resources to willingly share them at the first hint of a super pay-off. Particularly with the power that resisted its claims at every turn for a generation.

It is a matter of money, but there is also a touch of a she-cat protecting its young, an Englishman protecting his rose garden, a Quebecois protecting his language. To appreciate all this it is unnecessary to remember the long struggle to get the resources back. It is only necessary to remember what the west was like in the years before resource development began.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Pay the Tariff

I disagree with the argument in the article (Victoria Times, November 2) entitled We Deserve Ferry Discounts. As you stated "Mr. Strachan has a point, and faced with what may be a $20 million dollar ferry deficit this year his argument that we have 'the best ferry bargain in the world' is cogent." The bargain we are getting can be well illustrated by comparing the cost and the service to that provided across the English channel. The distance from Dover to Calais is the same as from Swartz Bay to Tsawwassen, but there the similarity ends. The cost across the channel is $25 per car and $7.50 per person (1971 prices). Earlier this year an American citizen wrote a letter which appeared in your paper in which he said that the B.C. ferry system was far superior to the privately operated ferry system between Victoria and Port Angeles in both the quality of ferry and the service offered and the cost of the B.C. ferry was lower.

However, all of this does not touch the main argument, that people who dwell on Vancouver Island should not have to pay so much to get off the Island. But people who live on Vancouver Island have always had to pay this much, or more. If people move here, they do so knowing it will cost them this much to get off the Island. People who have always lived here are used to the tariff, and if they dislike the tariff will probably move elsewhere.

I, too, would like to pay less to get off the Island, but I realize that, by lowering the fares, we would be creating a worse problem. Already this Island is beginning to become overloaded. It is the fairest part of Canada. If we make it easier to live here then we will be overwhelmed with the influx of "settlers." Surely the example of the commuter who has to go to the mainland 50 times a year, should either live in Vancouver or be prepared to pay the price of commuting. Surely we do not want Vancouver Island to become a mere suburb of Vancouver.

I do like the argument that the government should hold the line on ferry rates for Vancouver Island residents and increase the rate for all others coming to the Island. The ferry rate presently charged is ridiculously low compared to ferry services elsewhere.

But let us make Vancouver Island a place for people who wish to "live" here. Surely the present rates are not too high for people who may wish to, or be required to, go over to the mainland four or five times in a year.—J. P. Fawcett, 57 Wellington Street.

Sentimental Building

Will civic and provincial governments do something for the people of Greater Victoria when these same people ask down through the years for special use of a building?

Both an historic and sentimental building, the old Crystal Gardens is a part of Victoria.

It was designed by Mr. F. M. Rattenbury, architect of the Parliament Buildings, Union Club and many other period pieces of Victoria's architecture.

Before it is torn down or used as a transit depot, will the powers that be realize the significance of its opening date? On Dominion Day, 1925, all Victoria celebrated its opening; the importance indicated by the fact our traditional May 24 celebrations were postponed that year to coincide with its opening.

Whether it be an arboretum or the start for cultural groups under the Community Arts Council, let all Victorians push for action and suitable recognition of the building this coming summer, on the 50th anniversary of its official opening. As a tribute to a great architect, it could be known as the Rattenbury Centre.

Victoria's slogan for the future could well be "I'll meet you at Rattenbury's."

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of November 8, 1914

NEW YORK — Major-General Sam Hughes, the Canadian minister of militia, returned from England last night on board the steamer St. Paul, which arrived from Liverpool. Active service at the front will be seen by Canadian troops recently sent to England, according to him. A report to the effect that the Canadian contingent will be used to strengthen the coastal defences of Britain was repudiated by Gen. Hughes as being without foundation. Neither will the Canadians be sent to Egypt as also has been reported. "Here is the message," said Gen. Hughes, "that the Canadian troops asked me to take back for their folks at home: give our love to our dear ones and near ones in beloved old Canada. We will see them again soon, when we have beaten the Germans."

The Prison Ordeal of a Determined, Civilized Man

By JEAN M. WHITE

"I never travel without a pair of light shoe trees, where I always secure a spare pair of glasses. The shoes that I brought back from the dungeon have deep folds like this from using them as a pillow on the plank bunk. It was hard and flat — dead flat."

Sir Geoffrey Jackson, who spent 244 days in an underground pig-wire cage in a space about 6 feet by 5 feet by 5 feet high (under an iron beam that covered most of the ceiling), put the shoe tree back into his well-crafted brown suede loafers.

"The human animal is monstrously ritualistic, I find," he said as he went through the familiar motions. "Trivia can be tremendously reassuring. I worked out a very codified routine to survive in the cage."

For eight months this urbane, witty, literate man lived in human-degrading conditions; often without water to wash even his hands; using a bucket for plumbinbg facilities without privacy and at times limited to once-a-day urination, sometimes through the wire of the cage; left barefoot in his undertrunks in a cage that stank of human sweat and foul flooding; hearing the incessant clack of guns being cocked in practice and sensing a "quality of ferocity there waiting to be tripped."

Sir Geoffrey survived not only physicially but as a civilized man, emerging with dignity, identity and, even more surprisingly, compassion intact. And also wit, one must add.

It was three years ago, on Jan. 8, 1971, that Sir Geoffrey Jackson, then serving as British Ambassador to Uruguay,

JACKSON

was captured by the Tupamaro urban guerrillas, pistol-whipped and drugged.

He was finally freed eight months later after "surviving the long night," which happens to be the title of the book in which he gives his autobiographical account of his political kidnapping.

It is a remarkable document of personal courage, the story of how a single man, alone and isolated, survived as a victim of political terrorism.

"I think I must hold the record at the ambassadorial rank for the length of time spent as a political prisoner," Sir Geoffrey said. "I hope I hold it forever.

"I never was a hostage for ransom or prisoners. I was what my captors called me — a scapegoat, the well-protected British ambassador who was daringly kidnapped, and when the public relations tapered off the front page, they freed me.

"I'm not savage enough to be a tiger. Instead, I was a sort of albatross around their necks. It was with a sigh of relief that they let me go!"

To survive with his "codified" existence, Sir Geoffrey carefully disciplined himself. He jogged in place an estimated five miles a day (counting a yard per stop). He daily did exercises that the space allowed (reduced to 6 feet by 2 feet when a folding cot was squeezed in his cage by pushing out the wire). He tried "walking" two steps in one direction and back, ducking the iron beam.

At first, when he was given no water for washing, he saved a few drops of mineral water to wash his fingers and wipe them clean on his thighs.

There was also his "Four-Point plan" to "keep my inmost core intact." Daily, he reminded himself that he was in a "passive situation" and he had to turn this into an active situation by "seeking survival."

It was difficult to imagine Sir Geoffrey as that prisoner in a cage, finally ending up in a pair of blue swimming trunks and a pink shirt. The other day he was in a comfortable chair in a comfortable Washington hotel room, a ruddy, round-faced man of 59, well-tailored, polished in his politeness and wittily articulate as all British diplomats are in novels.

He is on an American tour to promote his book, having retired from the British diplomatic service last year.

He caught the incongruity.

And in a carefully preserved piece of cellophane he wrapped half of his daily ration of fruit, saving it overnight to eat with his glass of breakfast tea in the morning.

He did "inward accounting" and memory-stretching exercises. He drew up his own diplomat-like code, reminding himself that: (1) "This cellar is not a People's Prison." And: (2) "To the contrary, this is the British embassy so long as I remain in it."

"Sometimes, in a split second, there is the sudden pulling back of the curtain on a chink of the nightmare. It came when I went to hang up my coat and saw the shoes."

Somehow his wit and a sense of the absurdity of the human condition survived (perhaps helped him to survive) the eight months of underground imprisonment.

When his three-person guard team (often including a woman) appeared with the white hoods for a "daily hour of society," he thought of the "sparrows on a twig" of an old rhyme. Later he helped design new hoods to give his captors more air and freedom.

Near the end of his imprisonment, overhearing a hint that his guards were discussing the murder of Dan A. Mitrione, the U.S. adviser killed by the Tupamaro guerrillas, Sir Geoffrey took a calculated risk and expressed his outrage.

"It could have been a debate among themsleves," the British diplomat observed. "Or it could have been to elicit a response from me. They had read all the books. I had no illusions about their psychological devices. I always went under the assumption that they knew what they were doing.

"At the very beginning, they put me through interrogation that was the most wearisome human experience that I had ever had."

Yet, Sir Geoffrey emerged with a feeling that the majority of his captors really did not want to kill him.

"It was a conditioned ferocity in these terrorists," he explains. "I can recall only one or two instances of sadism. I think there was a survival of some decency, some traditions. I like to think so, that this survives even among terrorists who in the name of humanitarianism heap abuse on human beings."

In those eight months of imprisonment, Sir Geoffrey's wife also had her test of courage. They had talked about the dangers from terrorists before and had mapped out her actions in a kind of scenario for "apprenticeship for widowhood."

"The fact is that, lying there on the cement floor with my brain spinning dizzily, I could say in confidence that I knew what my wife was doing," Sir Geoffrey recalls.

Two days after the kidnapping — off to the airport in the same car in which her husband had been clubbed — Mrs. Jackson departed for England as she and her husband had agreed. She said the proper things to the press for a British diplomat's wife. When Sir Geoffrey finally was freed, he found she had performed "two acts of faith."

"When I walked into the embassy in Uruguay, a blazer and a pair of slacks hung in the closet. Nearby was a small suitcase packed in readiness for my going back home."

And when he arrived at their English home, Mrs. Jackson cautioned her husband not to be bewildered by some changes. These turned out to be redecorating in the colors that the couple had planned for their return.

When he returned home Sir Geoffrey was afflicted with peeling, cracked, blistering hands that he thought might be caused by leprosy. It was the result of his hands being exposed to sun once more after eight months spent underground.

Sometimes, even now, his shoulder or knee will "freeze" as an aftermath of the captivity in the tiny cage.

Today, three years after captivity, Sir Geoffrey carries with him a quotation that he found in Alexander Solzhenitsyn's "Gulag Archipelago":

"From the moment you go to prison, you must put your cozy past formerly lived behind you. At the very threshold you must say to yourself: 'My life is over, a little early to be sure . . .'"

For the first time, there was a break in Sir Geoffrey's urbanity as a curtain was pulled back on a chink of the past nightmare.

"I was determined to live," he said. "I can't say I never lost hope of surviving, just that I was determined to live. It was what I call a philosophy of optimistic morality."

Food Crisis a Surprise Only to the Blinkered

By ANTHONY LEWIS

Secretary of State Kissinger was explaining recently why the United States government had been so slow to understand the world food problem. "Until 1972," he said, "we thought we had inexhaustible food surpluses and the fact that we have to shape our policy deliberately to relate ourselves to the rest of the world did not really arise until 1973."

That a man as intelligent as Henry Kissinger could make such a statement shows the resistance of the human mind — not least the official mind — to unpleasant truths. For there had been warnings over many years, from respected sources, that the world was approaching food shortages of crisis dimensions.

Ten, even twenty years ago, the demographers were predicting that the zooming world population curve would soon intersect the slowly-rising one of agricultural production. In 1963 Lester Brown, a young Agricultural Department economist, showed that the underdeveloped countries, once food exporters, had become large importers. The likely consequences were spelled out in grim detail in 1967 in a book by William and Paul Paddock: "Famine 1975!"

In the last year the signs of a coming food crisis have been visible to all but the willfully blind: Early last winter experts said that fertilizer supplies would be extremely short, and that has happened. The students of long-term weather trends saw the danger of drought in the U.S. and of a damaging southward shift of rain-bearing winds in the Southern Hemisphere; there has been evidence of just such trends. Lester Brown, now with the Overseas Development Council, forecasts the largest food deficit in history in South Asia; that disaster is at hand.

The official primarily responsible for American food policy is, of course, not Kissinger but the secretary of agriculture, Earl Butz. In the last year the disparity between Butz's statements and the realities of the world food outlook has become almost lunatic.

Last April Butz spoke of U.S. agriculture as "virtually disaster-proof" — a Pollyanna view soon dispelled by nature in late rain and early frost. In May, commenting on the possibility of starvation in large areas of the world, he said: "Hunger is relative — if your larder is empty, you cut back some." That at a time when 460 million people in the world are estimated to suffer from acute malnutrition.

In July, rejecting suggestions that Americans release grain for the hungry by eating less meat, Butz said they should eat more. "Is the world headed for starvation?" he asked. "Have trade patterns around the world been so disrupted that food cannot be moved effectively from surplus areas to deficit area? . . . the answer is a great big no!"

The World Food Conference in Rome is taking place precisely because serious men, among them Kissinger, now see the threat of starvation on a scale never before experienced by humanity. And a fundamental issue facing the conference is the imbalance fo trade and wealth in the world that makes it impossible for the poor countries to feed their millions.

The responsibility is not that of the U.S. alone. For years just about every government has preferred to pretend that there was no long-term food problem, and joint action is necessary now that the pretending has stopped.

But the U.S. still is of special importance. Not because it has a man who sounds so asinine and stonehearted as secretary of agriculture and head of our Rome delegation, but because his policy has pursued such narrow ends.

American policy for years has encouraged meat consumption in other countries so they would buy our grain — a change in diet terribly wasteful of grain supplies. Our trade and pricing policies have also been designed to create reliable cash customers for grain. Our shipments of food and fertilizer have been increasingly used for short-run political ends.

If hundreds of millions are not going to die of starvation over the next decade, mechanisms will have to be developed to plan for food supplies on a world basis — and to pay for enormous shipments from the rich few to the poor many. That is the challenge. It is forbidding, but only if it is met will the world have time for the longer-run hopes of population control and new agricultural developments.

BUTZ

There are those who think that it is already too late, that mass starvation cannot be avoided. That may be. But it is necessary in any event to try. After the First World war, in a disrupted Europe, Maynard Keynes wrote:

"Men will not always die quietly. For starvation, which brings to some lethargy and a helpless despair, drives other temperaments to the nervous instability of hysteria . . . these in their distress may overturn the remnants of organization, and submerge civilization itself in their attempts to satisfy desperately the overwhelming needs of the individual. This is the danger against which all our resources and courage and idealism must now co-operate."

MPs' Pay: A Modest Proposal

By PAUL ST. PIERRE

(Sun columnist St. Pierre is a former Liberal MP)

Pay increases for members of Parliament are being discussed again with the usual futility. Within a year or so there will probably be an increase in salary and expense allowances.

We shall hear from some unfortunate old pensioner who is reduced to eating pet food on her government stipend. In the House of Commons at least one or two members of opposition parties will berate the government for its sinful action while eagerly anticipating the extra money which they plan to take.

The process is degrading to all concerned and the pay increases will be taken by MPs and senators in the glum knowledge that a few years hence another Parliament must face the same issue and probably handle it just as badly.

Most Canadians should, by now, accept the fact that times have changed since the age of the first Elizabeth, that their Parliament is not a club to which the gentlemen farmers repair in the period between fall harvest and spring planting that they may arrange the affairs of the nation while disdaining to take money for it.

Parliament should not be a rich man's club.

But the question of how much an MP should be paid and who should decide it is far less easily answered.

The question involves the MPs' independence, it affects their resistance to wealthy pressure groups and beneath it all, usually hidden from the public view, is the tense and sometimes bitter struggle between elected people and bureaucrats.

The bureaucrats have most of the power and the money. Few if any elected MPs who are cabinet ministers earn as much as the civil service's deputy ministers who are supposed to be their junior executives.

For this reason, parliamentarians will probably retain their tax-free allowance in some form, reasoning that the non-elected bureaucrats should not be allowed to question expenditures by those who are elected and who present themselves for public accounting every few years.

ST. PIERRE

The view is not unanimous. At the time of the last parliamentary pay increase a few MPs thought bureaucrats should be given power to rule on their expense accounts. The feeling was strong among those who spent more than the tax-free allowance in their ridings — they had no objection to changing over to a system of presenting receipts and getting more money. The larger impulse at that time was to preserve the independence of the MPs in the Ottawa bureaucratic empire.

Neither are MPs likely to submit to a bureaucratic determination of their salaries but, in rejecting bureaucrats as judges of their worth, they leave no one to make the judgment except themselves, a dubious process in itself.

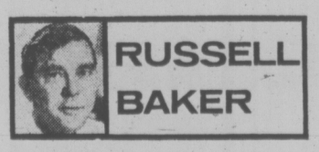
The fundamental problem will remain but it could be made simpler, more open and more regular.

The Commons could pass a simple bill which would require that, in the first 10 days of every Parliament, representatives of the political groups in the House would meet to set salaries and allowances for the life of that Parliament.

Failing agreement among the parties, the government party would be obliged to introduce the bill. Eventually, it must be the government party which introduces a money bill anyway. One or two days of debate would be permitted, after which the question would be decided by a vote which could not involve defeat of the government.

For the rest of that Parliament there would be no more backroom discussions. Every MP could explain his pay to his constituents as he saw fit.

It's So Easy to Forget



It is extraordinary how many things we don't talk about any more. There is Watergate, which everybody is tired of hearing about, and there is Vietnam, which everybody wants to pretend doesn't exist.

And Patricia Hearst. If anyone ever mentions Patricia Hearst these days it is only to ask, as one might ask about the good old days, "Whatever happened to Patricia Hearst?

Whatever happened to the Symbionese Liberation Army? For that matter, whatever happened to black power, the new left and "the movement"? What was "the movement" anyhow?

Nobody ever talks about "the revolution" any more, or campus unrest, or the Beatles.

When is the last time anybody talked about "hippies"? About "fun city"?

Nobody says "uptight" any more, or "backlash," or "silent majority." Nobody talks about the "free world," "the struggle for men's minds," "the new politics," or Spiro Agnew.

It is as though Agnew had never existed, yet within the memory of recently born babes he was the rising glory of Republicanism. Now, in less than a year he has become an unperson.

So has John Connally. Anybody remember "Big John"? He was the post-Agnew rising glory of Republicanism, and now he has been consumed and forgotten after three minutes of fame.

Three minutes of fame may be all any man, any idea, or any event can expect nowadays. There was a war in Cyprus a few weeks ago and afterward a sort of revolution in Greece, and who remembers it any more?

Anything that is four minutes old is as ancient as Egypt. And speaking of Egypt, whatever happened to Libya?

We consume our history so fast to get on to the next tidbit that there is no time to digest it, and so become a people without memory.

To ask these questions is to be tiresome, to betray oneself as a lingerer in the past at a time when events are rushing ahead at breakneck speed. We like that cliche — events rushing at breakneck speed. It gives us the sense of living dynamically, which is a delusion because events are not rushing anywhere. We are merely consuming them at indigestible speed, perhaps so they will not get lodged in our memory and start to mean something to us.

Who was General Thieu? What was My Lai? Does anybody remember light at the end of the tunnel?

Nobody wants to hear about such things any more. We are blanking experience out of memory. There are weighty events bearing down upon us which must be dealt with at once. President Ford's swimming pool. Pollution-emission controls. The cold-water laundry crisis.

Who has heard lately of Elizabeth Taylor? What became of Rowan and Martin? Stokely Carmichael? Abby Hoffman and Jerry Rubin?

And who has talked lately about the most important book of the decade? None of us, probably, for none of us can remember its title, any more than we can remember who played the game of the century not long ago.

It is not surprising that trivia is one of the few pastimes that has survived an entire decade, for it demands ability to remember facts without context, and facts without context are almost all that remain when you consume history with your brain off. Nowadays context is harder to find than a 90-cent hamburger.

It is very much like flying across the country by jet. The country does not rush by underneath so rapidly that we cannot see it, sense it, digest it and emerge with the slightest sense of what an extraordinary and fascinating place it is; it is we who rush overhead so fast that the journey becomes meaningless.

"We are coming up over the Grand Canyon on the left side of the plane now and will shortly be crossing the Mississippi River, folks." What was Pompidou? Which was Anthony Ulasewicz? Why was Charles Manson? Who was the second man on the moon?

It is a fast trip up here at 35,000 light years above context, but despite the speed you sometimes wonder if you are going any place at all.

Rent Curbs 'Create Chaos, Upheaval'

Rent controls create housing chaos, crime and social upheaval, the Social Credit opposition charged Thursday.

In lengthy speeches during opening debate of the government's amendments to the Landlord and Tenant Act, the Socreds said studies prove that cities are destroyed by the implementation of rent controls.

The government's intention to impose a 10.6 per cent ceiling on rent increases is part of the problem, not the solution to the housing problem, said Socred leader Bill Bennett.

Bennett presented a case study of Newark, New Jersey, where he said rent controls lead to abandonment of apartment after apartment.

The tax base in the area melted away, said Bennett, leaving the citizens without proper police and fire protection and allowing the area to fall into decay.

Rent controls are not a panacea, he said, and the government should move instead towards subsidization for tenants who cannot afford high rents.

Instead of the $30 renters' grant, given to all tenants regardless of income or rent, said Bennett, the government should channel all those funds into meaningful grants to those who need them.

Bob McClelland (SC — Langley) said controls have created chaos in U.S. cities where they have been tried.

In New York 10,000 apartments were abandoned a year, he said, and left "to the rats and the vandals and the street gangs."

McClelland said he did not know what would be a reasonabled rent increase level but added that Attorney-General Alex Macdonald "doesn't know either."

In Victoria only one apartment building is under construction, he said, and that is because it was started two years ago and the developers are "locked in."

In opening second reading approval in principle of the bill, Macdonald said anybody who votes against the measure "will be allowing the gougers to have a free hand."

The bill, which sets the ceiling of 10.6 per cent, with special concessions for apartment owners who renovate and no ceiling for new buildings, affects the welfare of close to 600,000 tenants in B.C., he said.

Macdonald agreed that the controls are not a permanent solution to the housing problem in B.C. and he stressed that it is an interim measure subject to constant study and revision by the government.

He read letters from tenants and local organizations which talked of the hardships large rent increases would cause for tenants on fixed incomes.

The NDP, he said, is the first party to recognize the existence and the needs for the growing group of tenants.

Macdonald repeated his old arguments against higher rent increases and said the new rent review commission established in the amendments will not be a large bureaucracy and will study the future of rent controls policy.

Gordon Gibson (L — North Vancouver-Capilano) took up the debate for the Liberals and said the Socreds had ignored the basic questioon of whether they would remove rent controls overnight.

"There's not enough in what the Socreds said, to comment on," said Gibson.

The Liberal said he thinks Macdonald "believes he is helping the little people in B.C.," and he congratulated the NDP for "at last recognizing the tenants."

Building construction in B.C. is at a standstill, however, said Gibson, and people are going around from landlord to landlord begging for a suite.

The B.C. Rental Housing Council, meanwhile, plans to call a mass meeting "at the earliest opportunity" to reconsider its threat of holding vacant suites off the market.

Landlord concerns were quelled somewhat after a meeting Thursday with Macdonald, council president Richard Dolman said.

The council still plans a watered-down cutback of non-essential services, but Dolman said the delegation "got some satisfaction" from the attorney-general.

"We weren't promised anything definite, but we're hopeful the government will take another look, Dolman said.

Food Crisis: 30-Year Low

'FAT TAX' TO AID HUNGRY

ROME (AP)—Bulging delegates to the World Food Conference came under pressure today to pay a tax for their overweight and send the money to feed those facing starvation.

In the lobby of the conference site and around the corner from the restaurant is "The Scale of Human Justice," reading:

"We invite delegates to pay a fat tax, three dollars for every two pounds you are overweight."

Next to the sign is a table giving weight-height ratio.

Some delegates have tipped the scales. But not many of those who have lost the battle of the bulge volunteer.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Disappointing crops in many exporting nations this year have brought the world to "its worst food crisis in nearly 30 years," G. N. Vogel, chief commissioner of the Canadian Wheat board, said Thursday.

In a speech prepared for the annual meeting of United Grain Growers Ltd., Vogel said it is not immediately known where extra quantities of grain can be obtained to meet the needs of the "have-not" nations.

The only significant quantities of uncommitted wheat in the world at present are an estimated six to seven million tons in the United States, he said.

"There is not enough extra to meet the minimum needs of the Indian sub-continent and certainly not enough to permit the rising trend in world grain consumption to continue," he said.

"Belts will be tightened and diets adjusted as food prices rise in virtually every country of the world."

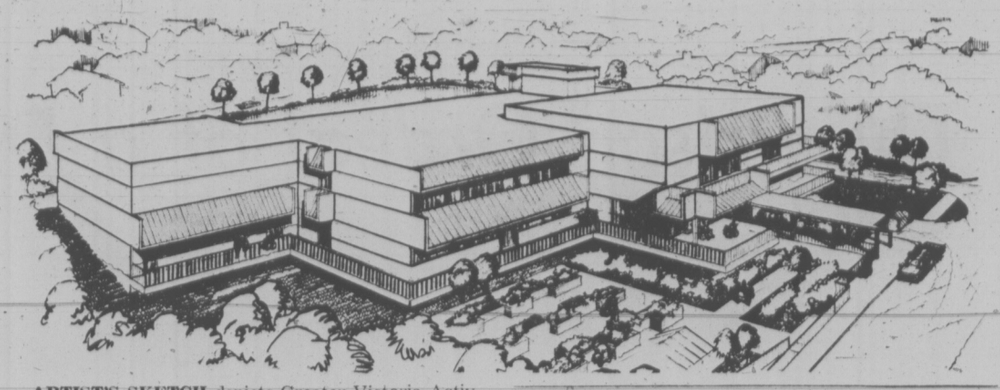
One major factor in world grain supplies available for human consumption over the next few years is the amount of grain used as animal feed.

In North America, Vogel said, livestock herds have been reduced, cattle are being slaughtered at lighter weights and less grain is being used for feeding.

"For every pound of meat not produced, there are, in effect, many pounds of grain freed for human consumption," he said.

Fire Victim

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gordon McPhedran, 51, died of smoke inhalation in a fire Thursday. A spokesman for the fire department said he was probably asleep when overcome by the smoke.



ARTIST'S SKETCH depicts Greater Victoria Activity Centre on Vernon Ave. where social, therapeutic and workshop facilities will be available to handicapped of the area. Firm commitments toward construction of the $1,200,000 building have already been received as follows: Provincial government $300,000; federal government $200,000; municipalities of Greater Victoria $100,000; Multiple Sclerosis Society $100,000; estate of Mrs. Montford $55,000. Additional pledges totalling $150,000 have also been received to date.

HAYS FAVORS MARKET PLAN

NEW YORK (CP) — Senator Harry Hays Liberal from Alberta, said Thursday he favors a modified common market between Canada and the United States but he felt most Canadians would oppose the idea if it were put to a vote.

"Personally, I think this would be a good thing," he said, replying to a question from his audience following a luncheon address to the Centre of Inter-American Relations.

"I think that 15 or 20 years ago if that had been put to a vote, most Canadians would have voted yes. But I don't think they would do that today."

Hays said a lot more people in Canada now are talking about Canada as being "a great country."

"They are all more aware of our great natural resources and they think we have something worthwhile."

Hays, who served as agriculture minister in the Pearson government, discussed the problems Canadian farmers experience in trying to export beef, seed potatoes, cheese and other commodities to the United States.

School Delay Frustration Hits Candidates

Anger at a long-delayed school and fears of big new developments were voiced by a crowd of 175 attending an all-candidates' meeting Thursday in Colquitz junior second school.

The audience grilled six Saanich aldermanic candidates on where they stand on the proposed 305-unit Dunhill Development Corp. housing complex in the Marigold-Interurban area.

They complained to 12 Greater Victoria school board candidates about delays that continue to prevent construction of Spectrum community secondary school at Burnside and Acorn.

They demanded to know why their children must take the bus to Shoreline junior high when they live two blocks from Colquitz.

One parent said his daughter likes school for the first time in her life since starting at Spectrum, which is temporarily housed in the old Mt. View school building.

"What the hell is the delay (with the new school)?" he demanded, getting the loudest applause of the evening.

"What are you people doing, especially you on the school board?"

Incumbent trustee Bill Ross urged patience, saying a government study of building costs will be finished Nov. 12 and then a start may be made.

School board candidate Bebe Peach, a member of the community advisory committee for Spectrum, echoed the audience's frustration.

"I know the frustration that you are feeling, because four years is a very long time," she said.

Parents demanded to know why the school board is planning to use Mt. View school to house a kindergartgen-to-Grade-12 less-structured alternative school once the Spectrum students have moved out.

Mt. View is needed as a junior high to relieve the overcrowding at Colquitz and to absorb the students that will be generated by the Marigold-Interurban development, they said.

Ross promised Mt. View would not be used as an alternative school if the school building was needed for junior high students from the area.

This year Colquitz is so overcrowded a number of students who would normally go there must take the bus and attend Shoreline junior high.

Saanich candidates were asked why Saanich council didn't agree to share costs of building an auditorium for the long-delayed Spectrum building.

Incumbent Ald. John McDonald promised that "I'm certain that council will take a serious look at it" if the possibility arises again.

Four Saanich candidates won the applause of the audience by promising to oppose the Marigold-Interurban housing development.

"I'm very concerned about the bulk of these developments in any municipality, especially Saanich," said incumbent Ald. Mel Couvelier.

"When you put all these people together you're going to run into trouble," said candidate Mary Casilio.

"I consider the density is too high for this semirural area," Roy Wootton said.

"The designers have put one road on the development which will have to take six to 700 cars from people leaving it," said Charles Goodman. He estimated the development would house 1,100 people.

Harold Todd said he hasn't studied the plans of the development and thinks there are some places where high density housing is necessary.

McDonald said he is undecided on the development, but will listen to citizens' arguments at next month's public hearing.

Questioned about the planned Broadmead shopping centre, Couvelier said previous councils have already made a commitments to the developers to let the project proceed.

Goodman said he would favor the proposed creation of an estate for light industry in Royal Oak provided it is properly designed and had non-polluting industries, and nearby residents don't strongly oppose it.

During the meeting students from Spectrum school collected names of residents who would be willing to attend a meeting next Wednesday to discuss the problem of the delayed school building and what citizens' action can be taken to get in built.

Marketing Boards 'Mislead' Buyers

OTTAWA (CP) — Some marketing boards are misleading consumers with inflated production-cost figures, a special parliamentary committee investigating egg marketing was told Thursday.

Norm Cafik, parliamentary secretary to Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet, said procedures some boards use to determine production costs would never be accepted by the income tax department.

The B.C. egg marketing board adds 10½ per cent of land and building value, eight per cent of operating costs such as cost of feed, depreciation on equipment at a rate of 20 per cent and other theoretical costs to production.

Outside the hearing, Cafik said that if "General Motors used that system of accounting they would show a loss."

"At that rate of calculating production costs, producers could sell eggs at cost and still make a profit."

If producers show their actual production costs and demand a certain return on their investment, consumers would not object, he said.

Bob Rose, Manitoba Egg Marketing Board manager, said outside the committee that his service uses a system similar to B.C.'s in calculating production costs.

Earlier, Ed Morgan, manager of the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency CEMA from February to August this year, denied he was in a conflict-of-interest position during his tenure at the federal agency.

He reluctantly accepted the job on a six-month contract and endeavored to do the job subject to the guidance of CEMA's directors who are members of provincial marketing boards, he said.

"When I became a federal man I spoke as a federal man and when I am a provincial man I speak as a provincial man," he told the committee.

Morgan, a member of the B.C. egg marketing board before his appointment to the federal agency, now is secretary-manager of the B.C. egg board. He had opposed CEMA before his appointment and still expresses doubt it will work effectively.

Conservative consumer critic James McGrath (St. John's East) said he wondered whether there was a conflict of interest when he considered that Morgan opposed B.C. participation in CEMA and then "left it in a mess."

"You found it in a mess and you left it in a mess," McGrath said.

"I take full responsibility for it," replied Morgan.

"So you're here to do penance?" cracked Mr. McGrath.

"I had no wish to go to CEMA," was the reply.

"You didn't even carry out your own recommendations," McGrath said and again asked if there was a conflict of interest.

Morgan said he became "a federal man and divorced myself from the province" when he was appointed to CEMA.

"CEMA auditors couldn't accept your inventories because they were inadequate," McGrath said.

"I agree," said Mr. Morgan.

He also agreed with Allan Lawrence (PC Northumberland-Durham) that part of CEMA's problems stem from provincial marketing board members going to the federal agency as directors "with a to - hell - with-everybody-else" attitude.

Under questioning from Cafik, Morgan said solutions to problems arrived at during CEMA meetings were not received "with the same zest at the provincial boards."

B.C. still is at odds with the federal agency, is "deliberately producing in excess" of allocated quotas and searching out foreign markets on its own, he said.

YUKON PASSES B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — For the first time, mining claims staked in the Yukon have exceeded those staked in British Columbia in a nine-month period.

A report released by the B.C. and Yukon Chamber of Mines says claims staked in the Yukon from the beginning of 1974 until Sept. 30 totalled 12,450 while only 10,643 were staked in B.C. In the same period in 1973, the Whitehorse mining registrar reported 7,889 claims staked and the provincial director of mines in Victoria reported 24,672 claims staked.

"It's so serious that I don't see how Premier Barrett can ignore it," chamber manager Tom Elliott said.

"In addition to checking government records, we canvassed every mining company in B.C. and the Yukon and there is no doubt that the cause of the drop in prospecting, exploration and claim staking in B.C. is Bill 31, the Mineral Royalties Act," he said.

The chamber survey showed that exploration expenditures in the first nine months of 1974 in B.C. dropped to $19.4 million from $27.7 million in the same period of 1973. In the Yukon, exploration expenditures rose to $11.9 million, up from $7.2 million in the first nine months of 1973.

"We think the drop in B.C. is particularly alarming in view of the mining boom elsewhere as a result of higher metal prices and strong world markets in 1973 and early 1974," Elliott said.

Saskoil Active —In Alberta

EDMONTON (CP) — The Saskatchewan government's new oil corporation, formed to help develop Saskatchewan's natural resources, is buying rights to Alberta gas fields.

It has even opened an office in Calgary.

Saskoil was formed last year but only got established this year, at a time when drilling activity in Saskatchewan was declining sharply.

Oil and gas companies said tough new provincial government legislation that increased royalties, combined with the federal export tax and inadequate exploration incentives were making further activity in Saskatchewan unprofitable.

The new oil corporation was given money raised by the Saskatchewan royalty surcharge on oil and by the federal export tax and began competing against the lagging oil industry. It took out permits for about half a dozen wells in Saskatchewan and apparently struck gas in one of them.

But, at the same time, it began buying rights to Alberta acreage in natural gas areas.

Mineral Resources Minister Elwood Cowley confirmed the move although he didn't know how many acres of Alberta land the corporation had bought rights to. Most of the acreage involved is close to Saskatchewan, he said.

The minister said Saskatchewan imports two-thirds of its natural gas and wants to safeguard future supplies at reasonable prices.

The Saskatchewan purchase did not show up in the Alberta government's public sales of its mineral reserve leases, the normal way of making such acquisitions. Reports of the purchases were disclosed by opposition MLA Ted Malone, the Liberal member for Regina Lakeview.

An Alberta official said Saskoil must have bought its rights through private companies or through a brokerage if its name did not appear on Alberta government records.

Saskatchewan Liberals, on the other hand, thought it was deplorable.

Malone said the New Democratic Party government has driven the private oil industry out of Saskatchewan. Instead of developing Saskatchewan, Saskoil was moving into Alberta projects that would create employment in Alberta, instead of in Saskatchewan, he said.

Brokers Will Get an Extra 10% On Orders Worth Over $5,000

By AL FORREST
Business Editor

A 10 per cent increase for commissions on orders over $5,000 has been approved for the Toronto Stock Exchange. An identical increase is planned for Vancouver as well.

A spokesman for the Vancouver Stock Exchange said the increase could go into effect there as early as Nov. 22. The hike in Toronto will become effective no later than Jan. 1.

A later date is needed in Ontario because of the need to submit the proposals to a vote of the membership. A vote is not needed in B.C. but it needs approval of the board of governors.

Members of the Montreal Stock Exchange will also vote on an identical proposal.

The rate increase will have little impact on the Vancouver market where the vast majority of orders are below the $5,000 level. In Toronto 83 per cent of the sales are under that level.

The Toronto increase will expire no later than July 31, 1975, when, the brokerage industry hopes, the market will be more vigorous. Other markets will follow the Toronto trend.

The Ontario Securities Commission granted the increase Thursday after a lengthy hearing. A hearing is not needed in B.C.

The Ontario commission ruled:

"The Toronto Stock Exchange has been caught in the double bind that is the unique feature of the current economy. Inflation has forced operating costs sharply higher while both the volume and value of transactions has moved much lower, thus causing a severe financial crisis within the industry."

The surcharge will raise revenues for TSE brokerage firms by 7 per cent or about $25,000 a day at present trading levels.

However, it will still be below the break-even level for many firms. A TSE official estimated that a surcharge of 32 per cent would have been needed to assure a break-even level.

The commission increase is a temporary rate associated with the idea of survival, not making a profit, the TSE said.

If volumes increase dramatically, the 10 per cent surcharge could be ended long before next summer.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said the Ontario brokerage industry is suffering a severe drain in revenues and loss of skilled personnel to other industries because of the poor market. Sales have also been lower than usual for bond salesmen during much of 1974.

In making its ruling, the Ontario Securities Commission said it was too early to judge whether the new surcharge would damage the competitive position of Canadian exchanges.

It noted, however, that the United States is going to a system of totally negotiated commission rates in the spring, replacing the system of a percentage announced in advance.

On the New York Stock Exchange small orders at present have a fixed commission rate while large ones are usually negotiated with brokerage firms.

This puts large institutional buyers in a good position to get lower bids from rival brokerage firms for very large orders.

The Ontario Securities Commission said the totally negotiated system may also be adopted in the Canadian market but not in 1975.

It has ordered a study on the effects of the proposal for Canada to be completed by March 31, 1976.

Ferries Man Backs Ban on Brochures

Highways Minister Bob Strachan's decision to eliminate tourist industry brochures aboard B.C. ferries will cut out "commercial harassment," a ferry spokesman said Thursday.

Ken Stratford of Vancouver, public information director for the ferry system, said the use of the "government green book," listing all tourist facilities in the province was a much more equitable way to ensure all industry tourist operators got a fair break.

With 25 ships in provincial fleet, each having three crews, Stratford said it was a huge task to keep a complete inventory of all commercial brochures aboard each ferry all the time.

"This involves a tremendous transportation problem," Stratford said, "and if an individual motel operator happens to be aboard a ship that doesn't have his material aboard on that particular trip he wants to know why.

"These were totally free services. This (the new system) will take away that sort of commercial harrassment."

The new system, Stratford said, was in line with the travel industry department's policy of providing all regions of the province with equal exposure and support.

Back up the "green book" information, Stratford said the tourist counsellors employed aboard ferries during the tourist season, were given 25 days of trainng that enabled them to give inquirers even more specific information about the areas they would be visiting.

He said the question of introducing a reservation system for cars was still under consideration.

"Permanent studies are still being carried out," he said, "But such a system would not only be expensive but would also involve many man hours, we estimate about 20,000 phone calls a day."

It had yet to be proven that there would be sufficient use to warrant late-night ferry service between Victoria and Vancouver, as advocated by the Victoria Chamber of Commerce and other groups, Stratford said.

"We work very closely with CP Rail," he said, "in fact, we gave them the name for the Carrier Princess.

"Yet, although they sailed from Vancouver to Sidney late and were able to carry 280 passengers, they usually had only four or five cars aboard at a time. They cut the service last spring."

Tough Nutrition Labelling Law Sought

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Federal Trade Commission proposed new regulations Thursday to make food advertisers back up nutritional claims with substantial information.

The five-member commission stopped short of the recommendations made by its professional staff that it require all food advertising to include the nutritional content of the products. And it sidestepped a decision on the health question of sugar-laden foods.

J. Thomas Rosch, director of the consumer protection bureau, said that even though the commissioners did not propose the stronger staff recommendations, "a manufacturer would be acting at his peril to assume the commission is not concerned with affirmative disclosure."

He told a news conference that the proposal, which has been under consideration for two years, would make the $1 billion-a-year food advertising business "scrupulously accurate and adequately informative." He called it "the most complex and comprehensive rule making ever undertaken by FTC."

But the rule would not apply to products which make no nutritional claim. A manufacturer who chooses to advertise his product as "fun" or "best tasting" would not be required to offer supporting evidence.

However, for example, if a product is advertised as "loaded with iron," it would have to contain at least 35 per cent of the RDA for iron. The amount of iron in a serving would have to be stated.

If an advertisement says that "Food X has more Vitamin C than Food Y," Food X would have to contain 10 per cent more of the RDA for Vitamin C than Food Y.

Foods advertised as a source of "energy" would have to say that the "energy" is from calories; the amount of calories would have to be included.

If an artificially sweetened food, such as a diet soft drink wanted to advertise the number of calories in a serving, it would also have to give the number of calories in an equivalent drink sweetened with sugar.

The public has until Feb. 5, 1975 to comment on the proposed rule and accompanying staff recommendations, after which the commission will hold a public hearing.

Boy Sold For Three Chickens

DOVER, Del. (AP) — State police have taken a 14-year-old boy away from a Delaware farm family who police said bought him a month ago for three chickens.

Police said the boy, Juan Guzman, was taken into custody Tuesday and held in lieu of $100 bail as a runaway from a Newark, N.J., juvenile home.

Delaware police said the boy had been living with Mr. and Mrs. David Wilkinson of nearby Felton for about a month. Police said Gutzman left the New Jersey home Aug. 17 and lived for a short time with an unidentified woman in Newark.

Wilkinson told police he gave the woman three chickens when the boy approached him and asked to be taken in, state police said.

"Wilkinson went home with the boy and talked to the woman," said Cpl. Paul Donahue of the Delaware state police. "The woman stated she would sell the boy to him for a crate of chickens. Some haggling followed until an agreeable price was settled upon and the boy was purchased for approximately three chickens."

"My husband got him a pony and he'd fallen in love with it," Mrs. Wilkinson said Tuesday. "If he wanted to stay with us, he could. If he wanted to leave, he could."

Police said the state of New Jersey is his legal guardian because the whereabouts of his parents is unknown.

Logging Meeting

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — About 90 delegates from the forest industry are studying logging methods and environmental regulations at a seminar organized by the College of New Caledonia.

HE LEARNED PENOLOGY HARD WAY

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — James Spivey thinks he knows more about prisons than most criminologists because he took a 36-year course in penology the hard way—behind bars.

"After all that time living with prisoners you know what they pull off and you know what the administration is pulling off," he said with a laugh.

Spivey, 62, has been free since 1970 and lives in Detroit, married and the father of a five-year-old son. He is putting what he learned in prison to use as Michigan's legislative corrections ombudsman. He handles grievances both from prisoners and prison employees.

Spivey was convicted of murder in 1934 when police said he drove a getaway car after a fatal shooting. He was freed after his lawyers discovered his trial transcript had been destroyed and his conviction rested on the unsigned confession of another man convicted in the case.

Spivey said he never knew the other man and has consistently denied his guilt.

Since he left prison, Spivey has devoted himself to working with youngsters in trouble, mainly through church organizations.

The legislature created the ombudsman post last year and Spivey got the job simply by applying for it.

"I studied for this," he said. "I took up sociology, journalism, management, business administration, chess, law. I stuck with law for about 20 years through correspondence courses, until I found out that everything was at the judge's discretion."

"I'm not bitter," Spivey said. He said he waited a long time to try to get his sentence commuted because "you don't have the money, you don't have the knowledge."

He said not all prisoners know their legal rights.

"When you're sending a fellow to 10 years or to life and someone says: 'Here's your rights,' do you think he's listening? It's a nightmare you wait to awake from."

Spivey was 22 when he entered prison.

"I was too shocked to be angry," he said. "I was in a daze, not really aware of what had happened. When it hits you, when 'Hey, I'm in for life' really hits you, you build up a hope that the truth will come out."

Spivey said prisons are worse now than in the past. Up to the 1940s, "wardens gave inmates as much leeway as possible; after that it tightened up."

Spivey said prisons are too tightly run, frustrate the prisoners and could run on half the staff if they had better personnel. Most prisoner revolts started when one or two troublemakers cashed in on the frustrations of the other inmates.

"The average prisoner doesn't sit there all the time plotting a new crime. The only time he does is when he has tried every other avenue and there is no possibility of doing anything else. I know cases where there'll be 1,000 letters written by prisoners to employers. They never receive an answer. A man becomes despondent."

EXAGGERATE PROBLEMS

Spivey said prison officials sometimes exaggerate thtir problems to get more money from the legislature and that prisoners themselves often stretch the truth to get better living conditions.

Michigan Governor William Milliken recently released the findings of a study of prison homosexual rapes but refused to release the report itself on grounds that prisoners who testified might face retaliation from other prisoners. Spivey said both the homosexual rape and prison retaliations are not as bad as people think.

"Young prisoners will say they're being harassed sexually to get transferred out of an institution to a camp situation.

"Retaliation isn't a very real danger. You might have a handful of 'dangerous' men. The average man in prison is there to go home, he's not there to add terms to himself."

After all those years in jail, why did he decide to take a job that brought him back into a prison?

"What was done to me — that's why. I don't think it is the meaning of living, that human beings should suppress other human beings' lives. I think we should add to each other's life.

"Life is so short."

'Powderkeg of Mistrust' Between Parisians and Police

By PAUL MAJENDIE

PARIS (Reuter)—Interior Minister Michel Poniatowski has set himself the monumental taks of defusing the powder keg of mistrust between Parisians and their police.

The French police and public engage in constant verbal warfare. Many Parisians are astounded when they visit Britain by the amiable co-operation of the populace with the ever-obliging bobby.

There are, of course, two sides to the coin. A strong anarchist streak runs through most Frenchmen and the beleagured policeman often over-reacts in a sensitive situation.

For Poniatowski the solution is simple—"police should be made to feel that 99 per cent of people are honest characters whom they should treat with respect and courtesy, whom they should protect, help and be considerate to."

Touching on the profound mistrust between population and police that was highlighted during the student riots of May, 1968, he said this particularly applied to the young.

"Attention must be paid to the way in which a young person is treated when, for example, he is stopped for having some small fault with his bicycle," the minister said. "It's his first contact with the state and will mark him for life."

PROGRAM LAUNCHED

Poniatowski has abolished hotel registration cards and has introduced a series of crime-prevention operations in cities. He is determined to demolish the barriers of mutual suspicion.

"Psychological education for the police is essential and if police training has to be prolonged for this, then I will do it," he said. "Only in modifying the attitude of the police can we change the population's attitude towards them"

Poniatowski would like to see a civic education course in France's police schools. He also favors a return to the old idea of "little islands," with each neighborhood having two or three policemen who are responsible for it, who know the residents well and therefore can protect them better.

"The police should get out of their stations and patrol cars and start to walk the streets," Poniatowski said.

PARISIANS HOSTILE

But most Paris policemen are from outside the capital. Trying to recruit Parisians is almost a lost cause.

The Parisian has a rooted, almost reflex, hostility to the policeman. This results in encounters which may produce a hilarious court case but are a sad reflection of a failure to communicate.

For instance, the male driver who hailed the husky blonde policeman with the words, "Hello sweetie," got a $60 fine while the man who danced on a policeman's hat got a month's suspended jail sentence.

Light-hearted exchanges fall flat with the law—the drunken driver who said, "After you, gentlemen," when asked to blow into a breath analysis machine, got a 15-day suspended sentence for his quip.

Mile Deep Sea Drill Set

NEW YORK (NYT) — Plans are shaping up for an international effort to drill more than a mile into the bedrock of the ocean floor — probably in the Western Atlantic — to determine the structure of the earth's oceanic crust.

Such deep penetration of the sea floor would be a priority objective of the next phase of the Deep Sea Drilling Project, now in its seventh year, using the specially designed ship Glomar Challenger.

The new effort, to begin next August, is to be a six-year program known as IPOD for International Phase of Ocean Drilling.

The deepest penetration into bedrock beneath the seas so far has been 1,920 feet when the ship drilled last summer near the site west of the Azores where French and U.S. deep-diving craft were exploring the mid-Atlantic Rift Valley.

The projected hole would penetrate at least 2,000 meters (6,600 feet) and would probably reach the deepest layer of the oceanic crust, known as the "third" layer.

Determinations of sea floor density through analysis of earthquake waves have indicated the presence of three layers. Each transmits earthquake waves more rapidly than the one above it.

The top layer is known to be formed of sediment.

The second layer has been shown, by drilling, to consist largely of "pillow basalts" formed where lava erupting under water has cooled rapidly, forming pillow-like structures.

The third layer is known to be considerably more dense, but its composition is uncertain.

Some geologists believe samples of the third layer have been brought within reach by upthrusting of the crust, as in the island of Cyprus, but direct sampling of the layer is widely considered an important objective.

Advisory panels for the Deep Sea Drilling Project met recently in Orangeburg, N.Y., to discuss plans for its new, international phase. The meeting was organized by the Lamong-Doherty Geological Observatory of Columbia University in nearby Palisades.

Participants included scientists from Australia, Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Norway, Switzerland and the Soviet Union, as well as the United States.

The project is being supported financially by the Soviet Union and the German Federal Republic, but with primary funding by the United States.

Further support from abroad is expected. The Scripps Institution of Oceanography in La Jolla, Calif., is responsible for administering the program.

Discrimination Like Rape: Victim on Trial—Conference

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A victim of discrimination is like a victim of rape — in both cases it's the complainant, not the defendant, who seems to end up on trial, Kathleen Ruff, B.C. human rights director said Thursday.

Speaking to a group of human rights ministers and officials attending a Canada-wide conference here, she said human rights legislation in Canada was negative and focused too much on individual example rather than tackling the overall problem.

"A person who alleges discrimination is frequently labelled a trouble-maker, attention-seeker, or freak," she said.

"By standing up for their right to apply for a job, an apartment or a service, the native person, the black, or the woman is often tarred as being aggressive, unpleasant and unreliable.

"It can be very uncomfortable and unpleasant for the complainant in this highly personal situation."

Ruff said existing legislation was "essentially negative . . . it lists what shall not be done."

She said because of that approach, attitudes harden and confrontation develops.

"Human rights legislation is geared to isolated episodes of discrimination," she said. "But discrimination is not episodic and it is not isolated."

She asked "what have we really accomplished?" by tackling isolated instances without changing "the overall patterns whereby these groups are routinely and systematically thwarted of fair opportunity."

Ruff said there was underlying defect in the legislation by assuming an absence of discrimination was sufficient.

"All that is required under the mandate of human rights legislation is those in power who hire, rent or provide services must refrain from active discrimination."

She cited a need for positive programs and felt governments should "lead the way."

Citing public indifference and inertia as the greatest problems in the area of human rights, she said "minority groups frequently feel they are isolated from the community and that there is no public support for their struggle to achieve social justice."

What was needed, she suggested, was "strong leadership."

She felt human rights activities were "severely hampered" by a lack of a national co-ordinating body.

"Each jurisdiction is working in isolation and is that much weaker because of it."

She said Canadians should turn away from ready-made programs being used in the U.S. and concentrate "on developing resources and solutions to our own problems."

"Human rights agencies across Canada would be strengthened if a full-time national co-ordinating body, representing both federal and provincial governments, was established to provide the necessary exchange of information, research and professional advices."

He was taken to Cowichan District Hospital then transferred to VGH's burn unit.

ITU Rejects Press Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the International Typographical Union have rejected a proposed one-year contract with Pacific Press Ltd., which produces the Province and the Sun.

The vote, released Thursday, was 172 to 120 against the agreement. The Pacific Press joint council of unions, representing seven unions including the ITU, was planning to meet today.

A spokesman for Pacific Press said the company had not been officially informed of the result of the ITU vote and had no comment.

Six of the unions belonging to the joint council had already voted acceptance of the offer which would give a $1.27 hourly increase for top-rated employees, bringing salaries to $320 a week.

The company also proposed that the base rate for lowest classifications increase to $152.50 a week from $120, an increase of more than 27 per cent.

The previous contract expired Oct. 31. Drivers affiliated with the International Printing and Graphic Arts Union served 72-hour strike notice Oct. 24 and the company followed Oct. 28 with 72-hour lockout notice to its 1,400 employees.

Courtenay Crossing Splits Councils

COMOX — The issue of where to place a second crossing of the Courtenay River is still splitting Courtenay and Comox councils after two years of talk on the subject.

After a meeting in Courtenay two weeks ago between council and Highways Minister Graham Lea it appeared the hassle over the structure's location was almost over.

Lea told Courtenay aldermen 17th Street was the most logical site for the 15-foot clearance bridge.

But Comox council shot down the proposal that 17th be used when it met with Lea in Victoria Thursday.

Comox aldermen said both north and south traffic would be improved by a bypass going west from Courtenay rather than a river crossing.

Mayor William Moore of Courtenay responded, "if we keep fighting among ourselves we will never get a new bridge or a bypass."

Guests Flee Flaming Hotel

ASHCROFT (CP) — An early-morning fire today destroyed the Ashcroft Hotel, one of the oldest buildings in this north Fraser Canyon community.

Guests at the hotel, many of them clad only in pyjamas, were forced to flee when the fire broke out about 4:45 a.m.

RCMP said they will not know if anyone was trapped inside the building until they can reconstruct hotel records and comb the ruins later today.

New Jet To Join Gov't Fleet

A new Citation jet aircraft purchased by the provincial government for $780,000 is expected to be in service later this month, Transport Minister Bob Strachan said today.

Strachan said the jet was "required to augment existing services" and brings to five the government's fleet — three Citations and two Beechcraft.

The aircraft are used to provide transportation for government personnel in the course of their duties for aerial photography and emergency health services.

Strachan said four additional first officers have also been hired.

NIXON LAWYER PLEADS GUILTY TO CONSPIRACY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edward Morgan, who helped arrange for Richard Nixon to take a tax deduction of more than $500,000 for the gift of his pre-presidential papers, pleaded guilty today to conspiring to violate the United States tax laws.

Morgan, 36, of Los Angeles, pleaded to a charge filed by the special Watergate prosecutor's office.

The criminal information alleged that Morgan and unnamed co-conspirators concealed "the true facts and circumstances regarding the custody, control and dominion of the pre-presidential papers of Richard M. Nixon . . ."

The prosecutors charged that Morgan backdated a deed to the papers to read March 27, 1969.

The prosecutors noted that tax laws were changed late in 1969 to vastly reduce the amount allowed as a tax deduction for a charitable contribution of personal papers.

The prosecutors said that Morgan, a deputy counsel to then-President Nixon, "well knew" during 1969 that the Nixon papers while in government storage remained Nixon's property.

The joint tax return of Nixon and his wife was filed April 10, 1970, and stated that he had given the government "personal papers, manuscripts and other materials," valued at $576,000.

Nixon claimed a deduction of $95,298.45 that year and claimed that the balance of $480,701.55 would be carried over to be used as deductions on future tax returns.

Dull Campaign For Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — The civic election campaign here has taken on some rather peculiar issues—wet ones, to be exact.

Election day—Nov. 20—falls in the middle of Grey Cup pre-game festivities, a day set aside for the annual round of vermouth-tinged receptions and formal dinners for player awards.

Since municipal election days in British Columbia are dry, the vision of those tuxedo-clad football fanatics sipping straight tomato juice instead of Bloody Marys is causing political palpitations.

Art Phillips, 44, running for a second term in the mayor's chair, has assailed provincial liquor laws and proclaimed the "dry" regulation as archaic and lucidrous. His statements drew nothing but silence from Victoria during a campaign which Vancouver Sun columnist Allan Fotheringham calls "one of the best-kept secrets of the decade. . . a blanket case of civic amnesia."

As in 1972, the ballot is clogged with names—104 persons seeking mayoral, aldermanic, school trustee and parks commissioner posts. But even Mr. Phillips' major opponent, teacher and travel-agency owner George Puil admits to having a tough time finding issues.

"I think it is mainly a question of lack of leadership," the 44-year-old Civic Non-Partisan Association (NPA) candidate says. "I can't pinpoint it, but there is a great deal of dissatisfaction around."

Mr. Puil has tried to make law-and-order an issue in Vancouver, which was described in a recent provincial crime report as the major North American distribution centre for Asian drugs.

But that issue lost election punch when it was picked up by several other candidates and the mayor quickly pointed to dramatic increases in police staffing.

In Vancouver, unlike most Canadian cities, party politics at the municipal level is normal and wide open. Mr. Phillips' ruling party is The Electors' Action Movement, or TEAM. Mr. Puil is backed by the Civic Non-Partisan Association (NPA). And a number of splinter groups seeking their portion of the Nov. 20 vote say neither of the two major parties can make credible claims of representing a cross-section of the city.

Two other groups, The Committee of Progressive Electors (COPE) and the New Democratic Party (NDP), both are running only partial slates this time, with the NDP providing a mayoral candidate, 30-year-old college instructor Brian Campbell who ran poorly in 1972.

Two more splinters have emerged this year, the first in which party names appear on the civic ballot. The League for Socialist Action is miffed that the NDP is not providing any "real alternative for working people." The Federated Anti-Poverty Groups, a poor peoples' coalition, is running two candidates.

School board elections also have developed a new grouping-the Genuine Education Movement, or GEM, which favors a return to basic grammar, arithmetic and spelling.

Joint Bargaining For Library

Greater Victoria library board has decided to join core municipalities and the Capital regional District in joint area bargaining this year.

Board chairman Shirley Dowell will represent the library on the bargaining steering committee.

Capital Regional board chairman James Campbell said last week the groups would co-ordinate their bargaining efforts with various Canadian Union of Public Employees locals.

He said at the time it was not yet certain whether the library, the Greater Victoria Water Board and the University of Victoria would join.

Victoria lawyer E. E. Pearlman, who will oversee negotiations for the groups, said, "it's not joint bargaining. They're just getting together so they don't all go off in different directions."

Taxi Company Wins Bid for Expansion

The provincial motor carrier branch has granted an application by C and C Taxi Service Ltd. to expand its operations on Saanich Peninsula through a Sidney-based subsidiary.

Motor carrier commission chairman Paul Sabatino, of Vancouver, said the approval, following a hearing in September, could be a precedent for future applications by other cab companies for permission to expand.

But he stressed that each application would have to demonstrate the applicant's capacity to handle a larger jurisdiction while maintaining service to the public.

Sabatino said the decision recognizes the principle of efficient use of facilities within an economic unit of the community. The commission also found a major consideration was population growth and a merging of areas within the region which can no longer be considered as separate communities.

C and C, which owns Sidney Taxi and Transport Co., asked for permission to merge the two operations under the C and C name and give it a new working fleet of some 32 cabs on the peninsula.

This will give the company mobility for proper dispatching efficiency and economy of operation, Sabatino said.

Previously, the company was restricted to making fare pickups only at the airport, where it has a federal government limousine franchise, although the Sidney-based firm could pick up anywhere within its area. Other companies could deliver only and make no pickups five miles beyond city hall in Victoria.

It was argued at the hearing that demand for taxi service on the peninsula between airport flight times would be satisfied by the granting of C and C's application.

OTTAWA BEGINS BURGER PROBE

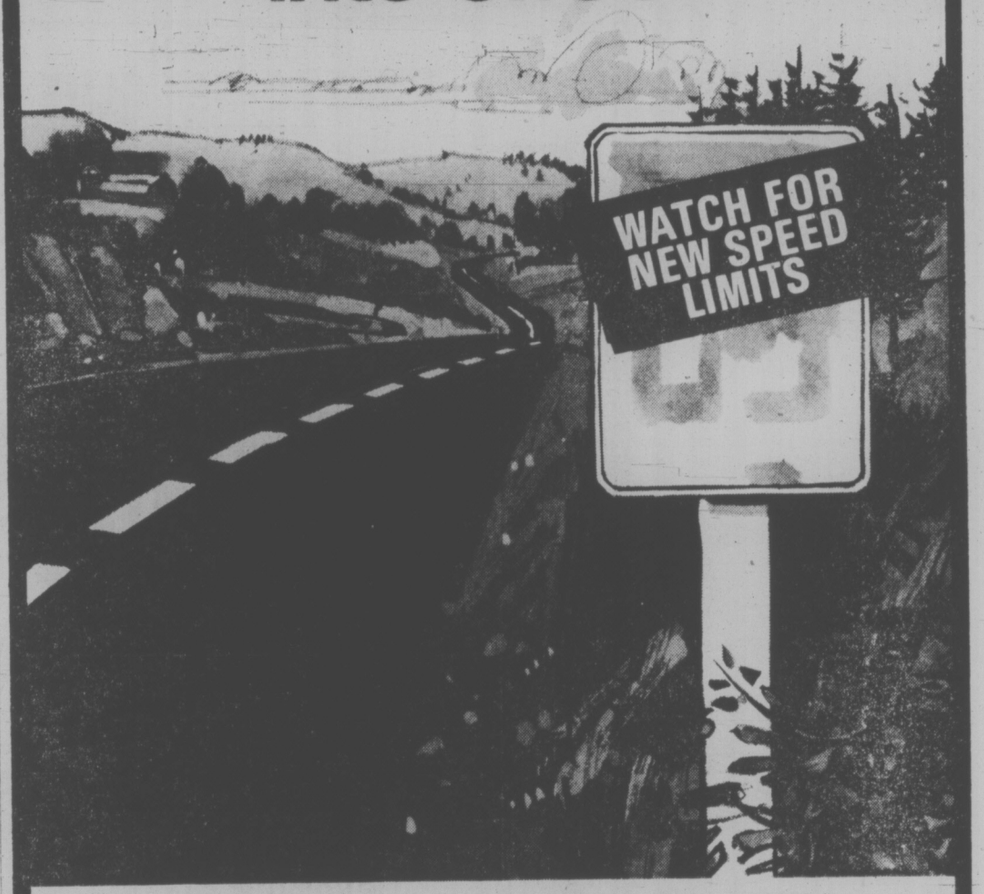
OTTAWA (CP) — An investigation of bacterial content in ground beef began in earnest this week, but a report on the outcome won't be ready for two months or more, a senior federal health official said Thursday.

Dr. Albert Liston, acting head of the health protection branch, said 30 branch inspectors began taking samples from retail stores across the country early this week. The inspectors were drawn from the branch's 245 field personnel.

He estimated that more than 1,000 samples will be studied and analysed before the survey ends in two or three months. That was more than 10 times the number of samples analysed by the branch in the last year.

The investigation follows a controversy last month which saw Health Minister Marc Lalonde, Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, chairman Beryl Plumptre of the food prices review board and opposition MPs exchanging heated views about the safety of eating ground beef.

safer speed limits now coming into effect



The new reduced speed limits are now coming into effect and motorists are requested to watch for the changes as the new signs appear on our highways. Speed reductions will vary throughout the Province according to traffic volume, terrain, population density and road standards. The Government has established these new limits in the interest of public safety.

Canadian forces will take part in all six services, with Royal Canadian Legion and cadet participation.

The 11 a.m. Cenotaph service will be the main one, with a 100-man guard from the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, a contingent of veterans from all branches of the service, PPCLI Corps of Drums, local militia units and the band of 5th B.C. Field Battery, RCA, taking part.

Field pieces from the 5th Battery will fire the salute from the helicopter pad in Victoria West starting on the stroke of 11, continuing at 60-second intervals for 20 minutes.

During the ceremony under direction of the Legion, Rear-Admiral R. John Pickford will lay a wreath on behalf of the forces, and will attend Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen as he takes the salute when units leave the Cenotaph on parade past the Empress Hotel.

A ceremony honoring the memory of public servants lost in the wars was to be held at 4 p.m. today in the rotunda of the Legislative Buildings, with veterans now employed as civil servants taking part. Relatives and members of the public were invited.

It was expected members of the legislature would attend as the ceremony this year coincides with a sitting of the house.

Boys at University School held their Nov. 11 service this morning, honoring with wreaths and prayers those who went from the school to serve the forces.

Scheduled for 2 p.m. today at Macaulay elementary school was a memorial service and the laying of a wreath made of poppies from each of the school's 482 students at the Esquimalt cenotaph.

The school's grade five class planned the ceremony to include a Sea Cadet color guard.

The Legislative Buildings will be closed Monday and the Provincial Museum open from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Ballpark Fracas: One Cleared

A charge of assaulting two RCMP constables in a school ball park was dismissed in provincial court Thursday because the evidence was not clear cut.

Judge Harold Alder noted, in acquitting Wayne Robert Boldo, 22, of 318 Benhomer, there was a conflict in the evidence presented by the Crown and by the defence concerning the alleged assaults July 21 at the Dunsmuir high school ball park.

Boldo testified he had grabbed Constable William Biden's arm because Biden was about to hit him in the face.

"I just put my arms up as an instinct," he said.

Biden then turned and fell into him, Boldo said.

The officer had gone to the park after noticing alcohol being consumed by some of the 40 persons on the field.

He testified earlier Boldo had jumped him from the rear.

Also charged with assaulting Constable Kenneth Rowe, Boldo gave evidence concerning that alleged offence that differed from what Biden had told the court.

Biden said he had pulled Boldo from Rowe, but Boldo denied he had touched Rowe, who had been called to the scene to assist Biden.

"It's quite possible . . . Constable Biden made an error in his evidence of what he saw," Alder said.

"Constable Biden must have been shaken up."

Alder said Biden had "a lot of courage," but added he "could have used a little more discretion . . . before he took on a crowd of that size that was hostile."

Biden had said the two other Colwood detachment officers on duty at the time were busy.

He had planned to tell the ball players to gather up their beer and leave, but decided to arrest a man drinking from a beer bottle. The man refused to give Biden his name, and a pushing fracas started.

Alder said the persons on the field thought they should have the right to drink beer.

"They could have applied through their own representatives to change them (the laws)," Alder commented.

Defence counsel Michael Hutchison said in his summation Biden's conduct showed "unreasonable zeal."

"I think he was foolish," Hutchison said.

But he also said, "it's not a pretty sight in this country . . . to see a police officer set upon as Constable Biden was."

Meanwhile, in Judge William Ostler's court, Patrick Steven Heslop, 18, of 1340 Sussex, pleaded guilty to a charge of resisting Rowe, and obstructing Biden.

Both charges stemmed from the same fracas as the charges against Boldo.

Heslop was remanded to Nov. 21 for sentencing.

The evidence was that Heslop had pushed Biden to get him away from another man Biden was trying to arrest.

Charges against five other persons laid as a result of the ball park tussle remain before the court.

- Congestion going to get a lot worse before getting any better for frustrated commuters
- 50-mile-an-hour speed limit on clogged highway is a humorless joke to put-upon drivers

The Colwood Crawl Makes Them Crabby

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Whether you call it the Thetis Thrombosis, the Shawnigan Shuffle, the Langford Lineup or the Colwood Crawl is quite irrelevant.

The traffic congestion each weekday morning at southern Vancouver Island's most notorious highway intersection is really a combination of all those elements, plus others, and by any name it spells fuming frustration and delay for thousands of commuting motorists.

Highways Minister Graham Lea Thursday promised those harassed drivers that relief is in sight (see page 1) but at least three years away.

And meanwhile no one is pretending that conditions won't get a whole lot worse.

The intersection, called variously the Thetis Lake interchange, the Thetis overpass or the Colwood turnoff, is where the Trans-Canada Highway joins the Island Highway a mile or so north of Colwood Corners.

From Monday to Friday, between about 7:15 and 8:30 a.m. but especially in the hectic half-hour from 7:30 to 8, it presents a depressing picture of man's pathetic reliance on, total subservience to and failure to cope with the automobile.

Backed-up lines of vehicles stretch as far as the eye can see, as the heavy flow of traffic from Metchosin, Colwood and points west laboriously eases its way into the equally heavy flow down the Trans-Canada from Goldstream, Millstream and points north.

On the Trans-Canada itself the slowly-crawling line regularly stretches back up the highway to the Thetis Lake Park entrance.

On the Island Highway the line attempting to infiltrate is much shorter, but only because many drivers choose to fork right near the underpass on the Craigflower route into town. And it's not uncommon for that all-but-stationary line to reach beyond Parson's Bridge — a few hundred yards back in the Colwood direction.

Painfully Slow Progress

Where the two streams actually converge, progress is painfully slow. It's only the remarkable tolerance of drivers already on the Trans-Canada, in allowing those from western areas to filter progressively into the line, that saves the situation from deteriorating still further into cut-and-thrust recklessness.

But even when the manoeuvre is completed the peak-hour commuter's highway hindrances are far from over.

Not only is the next 3½ miles a hopelessly inadequate two-lane stretch all the way to the Town and Country shopping centre, but it's riddled with feeder roads and traffic lights. The 50 m.p.h. speed limit over much of its length is a humorless joke to drivers who think it's a good morning if they can chug along at 30.

Then comes the evening rush hour and it happens all over again. On summer evenings and also Friday evenings the rest of the year, as the weekenders flee to up-Island haunts, camper trucks, trailers, motorhomes and cars towing boats and tent-trailers swell the throng to make the crawl even more intolerable.

As each year goes by, of course, the problem worsens. A Colwood resident who works downtown and moved to a new subdivision four years ago said he used to allow just over 20 minutes for the journey but now he has to allow at least 35 minutes to be sure of getting to work on time.

No up-to-date figures were available from the provincial highways department, which operates a counting station at Helmcken on a 24-hour, year-round basis.

But a spokesman said between 1966 and 1972 the average weekday traffic for March rose by a little over eight per cent per year, while during peak hours the annual growth rate was in the region of nine to 10 per cent.

In 1972, between Thetis Lake interchange and Burnside, the traffic count was about 1,100 vehicles per hour in the morning peak from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m. and 1,200 v.p.h. in the evening peak from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. — which includes other types of traffic besides straight commuter traffic.

Assuming those figures have risen by 20 per cent in the past two years, the morning peak is now over 1,300 v.p.h. and the evening peak close to 1,450.

The increase in traffic volume followed the outward population spread in recent years, as more and more people sought cheaper property, lower taxes and country living in areas to the west and north — as far afield as Sooke, Shawnigan and Mill Bay.

In the 1971 census the Colwood - Langford-Metchosin area had a combined population of 19,278. Today, according to Capital Regional District estimates, the figure is 17 per cent higher at 22,743.

And that's only a foretaste of the growth still to come. The CRD's recently published draft regional plan, covering the period up to 1966, projects a population of close to 60,000 for those three western communities and the soon-to-be-developed Highlands area.

Some highway improvements have been carried out to meet the needs of this expanding population. For instance, Sooke Road is now four lanes in width between Royal Roads and the Metchosin turnoff, and extensively widened and resurfaced on other sections.

But the vital umbilical cord on which they all depend for their employment, shopping, cultural and other sustenance in Victoria's womb — the Trans-Canada — has remained unchanged and, increasingly, unable to cope.

That, then, is the problem. But who has the solutions and how long will it be before any improvements are visible?

Highways Minister Lea admitted Thursday his department has only a "five-year solution" — widening the highway between the Thetis interchange and Douglas from two to four lanes — in gestation at the moment.

The project could start late next year, be finished two years later and then cope adequately with its increased burden for only another two years after that. He sees it as merely a holding measure to stave off chaos while long-range transportation policies are worked out; policies that will include transit system planning as a key element.

Lea said his planners and highway designers are working in close co-operation with the provincial bureau of transit and Capital Regional District officials toward such a goal.

But the transportation plan's effectiveness may hinge on agreement between the various agencies involved as to a clear division of responsibilities, particularly in determining which of them should initiate the real thrust of planning and co-ordinating transportation activities.

Broad Powers for Region

Peter Hammer, the CRD's boyish-faced planner, believes the regional district must assume this major role as catalyst and co-ordinator, in partnership with the senior government as the instrument of enabling legislation and funding.

The regional staff must include transportation planning capability, and this need not involve bureaucratic empire-building, he says.

A similar, but stronger, stance was adopted recently by the Greater Vancouver Regional District, in a detailed statement submitted to Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer.

"We contend that the regional district should have broad powers to plan, co-ordinate and fund transportation activities . . ." the statement said.

One one point Lea and Hammer emphatically agree: the day of divorcing land-use planning from transportation planning is over. As Lea noted, the tendency used to be for local residential development to take place and then the request go out: "Okay, transportation guys, solve the problem."

"The two functions are inextricably linked and interdependent, they agreed: one cannot be properly tackled without reference to the other.

Many of the critics who recently picked holes in the draft regional plan complained that it is not based on a transportation study. Hammer admits that to date there have been only "some preliminary, very coarse simulations on future traffic volumes," but says a detailed study will follow the adoption of the plan itself.

Hammer says a worthwhile study must look at the "modal split" — in other words, what proportion of the total traffic volume will the various modes of transportation carry and over what period of time. What are the relative costs likely to be?

Because of the "physical constraints" of the present transportation corridors he foresees the inevitability of some form of transit system. Initally this could be a fast-bus service to various centres in the western communities, followed by a rail system using the existing rights-of-way.

The highways minister, too, sees transit as a certainty: "In the future and in any case by the year 2000, in order to handle the traffic loads we see, there is going to have to be a combination of highway facilities and some form of public transportation."

But those are merely planners' visions and even the short-term improvements lie at least three years down the road.

Meanwhile, to those unfortunates who use the Trans-Canada for peak-hour travel, it will continue to be the transfixed highway.

WHAT'S THIS? A word of caution, it seems, for anyone walking on their hands at Government and Broughton. Turning picture right side up — unlike sign — gives view of recent city roadwork along Government, where crews have replaced a storm drain main. Government-Old Town area, where work on underground utilities is in progress, and lower Blanshard road alignment scheme are two of the city's major crater-pocked areas these days.

PEDESTRIAN HAZARD INCREASES

Police Watch Crosswalks

Pedestrian crosswalks — intended to increase safety — don't make it happen by themselves, especially when up to 22,000 cars a day whiz over some of them.

So with winter bringing darkness earlier and stormy weather trimming visibility, Saanich and city police are out to make sure drivers and pedestrians co-operate.

Increasing numbers of drivers are failing to yield to pedestrians at crosswalks, said deputy police chief E. L. Avison, so Saanich police have launched an enforcement campaign.

Sgt. Bill Sommerville of the city police traffic division agrees that November weather increases the crosswalk hazard.

"You have to use a little extra care," he warns motorists.

Avison notes pedestrians have obligations at crosswalks too. It's against the law, for example, to step into a crosswalk in front of a vehicle so close the driver doesn't have a reasonable chance to stop.

Nine of 21 Saanich pedestrians injured in the first eight months of this year were hit at intersections.

Saanich police list the following crosswalks as the ones they consider most hazardous:

Saanich Road at the Town and Country entrance, where 12,500 vehicles pass each day and there are conflicting traffic patterns.

Shelbourne and Cedar, where traffic reaches 20,000 vehicles a day, children use the crossing in peak periods and a pedestrian operated signal at Cedar is being ignored by some drivers.

Trans-Canada Highway and Seaton, where up to 22,000 vehicles a day pass at high average speed and young children cross during peak periods.

McKenzie and Saanich, where the crosswalk is 46 feet long, there's poor sight distance on the crest of a hill and up to 15,000 vehicles a day pass.

Police note that both pedestrians and drivers are required by law to obey instructions of school patrols.

City Thieves Aren't Fussy

Thieves in Victoria over the past week have demonstrated wide-ranging tastes and a penchant to walk off with almost anything that isn't bolted to the floor.

Take these three reports released Thursday by Victoria police:

From the old Victoria Machinery Depot, broken into Wednesday, these items were missing: an IBM master clock worth more than $1,500, a saw, a chair, a table, a clock, a globe and a coat rack.

From a house at 1557 Oakland also broken into Wednesday: three cans of oysters, two cans of fruit juice, a can opener, a can of shrimp, two cans of sardines, one canned ham, three cans of soup, six packages of jelly powder, a bottle of vodka, nine bottles of beer, two serving spoons, two tableknives, and six tablespoons.

The thieves left behind 20 eggs — splattered on the walls and ceiling.

Gardom Votes For Gorst

Liberal MLAs think they have found the ideal job for Esquimalt NDP MLA Jim Gorst.

During legislature debate this morning, Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson said he is so bogged down with official openings for new government housing projects "we'll have to have a designated ribbon-cutter."

Extra Ferry Sailings Out

B.C. Government ferry officers will refuse overtime duty during the holiday weekend in support of attempts to reach a contract settlement.

The stand means there will be no extra sailings to accommodate the usual heavier than normal holiday traffic if it warrants additional trips.

Normal ferry service will not be disrupted, said Iain MacLean, chairman of the licensed component of B.C. Government Employees' Union marine services division.

A strike vote is being taken among the remaining 150 members of the unit, officers employed by the highways and forestry departments, but the majority of other members—500 employed by the ferry service—have voted 94 per cent in favor of strike action.

A strike could occur the weekend of Nov. 16, MacLean said.

The unit's executive will meet Thursday to consider action.

Matters at issue include wages, premium pay for statutory holidays and the right to refuse overtime assignments. Junior engineers are paid $866 and captains earn up to $1,400 a month for commanding stretched vessels.

As if to put salt in ferry users' wounds, the B.C. Ferries Island Princess blew her gaskets.

The engine trouble cancelled ferry service between Kelsey Bay, 50 miles north of Campbell River, and Beaver Cove for 24 hours.

To meet the emergency, the Queen of the Islands was taken out of refit at the Deas dock in Vancouver and after a hasty cleanup, dispatched at 4 p.m., manned by a scratch crew, to Kelsey Bay.

She is expected to make the 11½-hour trip in time to take over for the first scheduled sailing Saturday at 7 a.m.

Increase Services With Less Taxes?

There was a rhetorical question from the audience for Oak Bay's aldermanic candidates Thursday night which summarizes a dilemma facing many of the political hopefuls.

How can you pledge on the one hand to try and hold the tax line, one listener asked at the all-candidates meeting, and at the same time undertake to increase municipal services?

"You can't," he said after hearing some of the candidates wrestle with the problem.

Nine of the 10 candidates were on hand at Windsor Park pavilion for the meeting, organized by the Windsor Park Neighborhood Group. Only veteran Ald. Douglas Watts was absent because of illness and he sent a written message.

But only 60 or so of Oak Bay's 11,575 voters were in the audience, which heard five-minute talks from each candidate before tossing its own questions.

Three council seats with two-year terms will be filled in the election Nov. 16 as well as one seat to complete the one-year term of the late Harry Graham.

Incumbents Shirley Dowell, John Goult and Watts are seeking re-election and have been challenged by Neil Swainson, a political science professor at UVic, and Clifford Stretch, a realtor.

The other five candidates are all seeking the council seat with the one-year term remaining. They are school teacher Keith Palmer, retired ship's captain Godfrey Lomas, marine pilot John Horne, retired recreationist Isabel Craig and realtor Frank Butler.

Some platform points:

Dowell: wants continuing policies to retain and improve residential quality. Opposes spread of apartment construction and favors tighter building standards for them.

Goult: opposes spot zoning, will accept low-rise apartments in zones now established for them. Says council, conscious of 30 per cent of municipality's population is 65 or over, is now directing itself to services for people.

Stretch: believes in a minimum of growth for municipality, that municipality must live within its budget, and that some basic services, such as the water system, have been too long neglected. He's disappointed by some deteriorating streets.

Swainson: wants adequate residential housing, with attached dining facilities, for elderly who need it. Believes community's residential character can be maintained indefinitely if council displays courageous leadership.

Watts (through written message read to meeting): would appreciate another term to see recreation centre project through to completion and into efficient operation. Opposes any more apartment construction overlooking Willows Beach.

Butler: believes careful budgetting is vital with any major expenditure going to voters through referendum. Favors more incentives to stimulate construction of rental units for senior citizens.

Craig: called for co-operation between governments of core municipalities, said close relationship between aldermen and individual citizens in Oak Bay should be continued.

Horne: would keep constant vigil to maintain character of Oak Bay, supports present council policies and is disturbed by suggestions of enforced amalgamation.

Lomas: Believes municipality must hold line on taxes and pay for services as it goes, keeping capital expenditures to minimum. Opposes high rises, favors limit of three storeys on apartments.

Palmer: wants character of Oak Bay preserved, special consideration for elderly and those on fixed incomes, removal of school taxes from property levy.

THE WHIP-ER, THE WHIP-EE

Being the lone Tory in the legislature poses more than the obvious political problems. Conservative Leader Scott Wallace admitted Thursday.

"When I take the role of party whip, all I ever get is backlash," Wallace told the house sparking a round of laughter.

"Before I did quite a bit of looking around — now I only have to look forward."

Wallace sits front and alone in the Tory ranks since defection of former Conservative MLA Hugh Curtis to the Socreds.

Swimming Title Retained by Mt. Douglas

It was Mt. Douglas in front again for the second straight year, but there were a few surprises when the Greater Victoria High School Swimming Championships were held Thursday at the Crystal Pool.

Paced by club swimmers Karen and Cathy Rushcall and Rob Grundison, Mt. Doug smashed 10 records and tied another one while racking up a total of 452 points in boys' and girls' "A" and "B" events.

Oak Bay was second with 331 points, after a strong showing by the school's "B" division swimmers, and Belmont-Fisher was third.

But the big surprises came from St. Michael's University School, which scored 20 more points than Mt. Doug to take the boys' team title, and from Dunsmuir, which finished a strong fourth over all with 271 points, although it is competing in senior high school competition for the first time this year.

St. Michael's was led by Bill Hope, who set a record in the 200-metre individual medley and finished second over 100 metres in butterfly, backstroke and freestyle.

Karen Rushcall set three records while winning the 200-metre individual medley, the 100-metre butterfly and the 50-metre butterfly.

Sister Cathy broke records in the 100-metre backstroke and 50-metre freestyle and was second to Karen in the 200-metre individual medley.

The other Mt. Doug records came in the 100-metre mixed relay and the "B" girls' 400-metre freestyle relay. As well, Freya Cook of Mt. Doug tied a record in the "B" girls' 50-metre backstroke event.

Doug Portelance of Belmont and Briony Penn of Norfolk House also gave fine individual performances at the one-day meet. Portelance set records in the "A" boys' 50-metre and 100-metre backstroke events while Miss Penn set a record in the 50-metre backstroke.

A double winner in girls' "A" events was Judy Newman of Oak Bay. She took the 50-metre and 100-metre breaststroke races.

It was only the second time as runner-up for Oak Bay in the 25-year history of the swimming championships. Mt. Doug snatched the title for the first time last year after Oak Bay had been champion for 23 years in a row.

Barbara Packford of Vic High smashed two records in the girls' "B" events, setting new marks while winning the 50-metre freestyle and the 50-metre breaststroke. And Leslie Shumka of Claremont also set a record in the girls' "B" 50-metre butterfly.

The "A" events were for swimmers who are members of local clubs and Mt. Doug took that title with 229 points, with Belmont second, 47 points behind. The "B" events were for "novice" swimmers who don't compete for clubs and Oak Bay won that section by 11 points over Mt. Doug.

It's Hockey Show-Time Down at the Ice Rink

The organ plays, the beat goes on, and it's fight-night and show-time all rolled into one down at Memorial Arena. The Cougars pick up the tempo and win another hockey game, and new-found fans come from near and far to pay homage to new idols and new heroes.

But you've got to get there early. That's when the ritual begins.

Two attractive young figure skaters, each carrying a flag, Canada's and B.C.'s, slowly circle the teams, stand at attention at centre ice while the anthem is being played, and then demurely skate off.

It is a dignified scene, quiet, peaceful, patriotic, and completely belies what is to follow.

Because once the puck is dropped the mass hypnosis begins.

Pat Ginnell is putting on his best seller from centre stage and those who have answered the call are the object of his attention. This is hockey's strong man of the west in action. He came from Flin Flon with the promise that people here would like what they would see, but he didn't say the Cougars would do it all to music.

There's a pause in the play, and the organist takes the cue, he touches the keys, the chords respond. On the bench arms waving, Ginnell picks up the beat. Faster and faster plays the organist. Ginnell responds. The crowd begins a rythmic clapping . . . faster and faster . . . louder and louder . . . then play recommences. The organ is silent.

The Spell That Lingers

The effect is tremendous. The clapping stops almost as quickly as it had begun. An eerie din remains. But now the crowd is alive, and vibrant, spoiling for action. A good play brings appreciative handclapping, a rousing check, a yell of delight, and an honest-to-goodness fight, a mighty roar of approval. The fans have been caught in the frenzy. They can't let go.

Again there is a pause, a line change, and the organist misses nothing. He begins slowly and quietly at first, but increasing the tempo with each bar; Ginnell follows suit, openly appeals for fan response, gets it, the puck is dropped, and the sound track stops as abruptly as before.

Repeat this scene 20 or 30 times an evening and you've got the newest game in town on Cougar game night.

For Ginnell, the hypnosis is self-inflicted, and just as obviously he is seeking to mesmerize his players as he exhorts them to greater efforts. By his actions and incantations on the bench, he is simply imploring the fans to further pledge their faith.

"Come on, folks, and join the crowd. Let it all hang out. Let the kids know how you feel. Show them some gratitude for putting Victoria back on the hockey map." That's the tune.

Sure, it's Ginnell's show — even if he doesn't wave the pompoms and wear a grass skirt — and it was likely perfected when he was at Flin Flon, a built-in winner for a Saturday night mining town, and every act a rousing success. No wonder it has been tough for other clubs to win back there.

Now, he's brought his own personally conducted and personally-directed presentation to our town and already the people are screaming back "we believe".

Not Every Act a Hit

Not everywhere though. Sometimes Ginnell out-psyches himself. Such as the night at Medicine Hat he pulled his team off the ice, didn't get the players back in time and the referee called the game. There may have been extenuating circumstances, but this type of act is uncalled for, and totally inexcusable and indefensible. Besides it is not a model of control or direction for the players and shouldn't be condoned.

So that's the danger, but then that's the man's lifestyle. He is totally immersed in his job. And despite heavy fines, repeated suspensions and dire warnings, he shrugs off criticism. It is fair to say he is an advocate of intimidating hockey, one way or another, hopefully all Cougar foes being reduced to eventually fighting at long range and with extreme care. To him this approach is his way of selling the game, the team and his particular brand of hockey.

And if he just happens to get a winner selling it, so much the better. Besides being a tribute to his coaching ability, wasn't that the overall plan in the first place?

So the Cougars belong, and if Ginnell's methods are sometimes questioned, even violently disputed — moralists will never agree — down at the arena the organ plays and the beat goes on. And if a noisy rink is aiding the Cougars it also sounds grounds for belief that Saturday's game against Flin Flon could be a complete sellout.

Because that's where Pat's brand of "show-time" all began.

Sparkling Effort By Flyer Goalie

Goalie Ken Stanton came up with a spectacular effort Thursday night to lead Fuller Lake Flyers to a 4-2 decision over Esquimalt Buccaneers in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game Thursday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Mike Gernaghan scored what turned out to be the winning goal at 9:41 of the third period and Gene Wrigglesworth connected with his second goal of the game at 15:09 to supply the insurance tally.

PHIL'S SHAKEUPS WORK FOR CANUCKS

KANSAS CITY Coach Phil Maloney did some third-period shaking up here Thursday night and it paid off as his Vancouver Canucks pulled out a 6-4 victory over the stubborn Kansas City Scouts.

It was the Canucks' fourth straight win — equalling a club record set at the tail-end of last season — and moved them out of a tie with Chicago Black Hawks and into first place in the National Hockey League's Smythe Division.

The win also maintained the Canucks' near-perfect record on the road this season. They now have four wins and a tie in enemy territory.

Maloney made several late changes, including sending goalkeeper Gary Smith on to replace Ken Lockett for the final 14 minutes.

Vancouver blew three leads before Smith came in with the score tied 4-4.

Bob Dailey and Paulin Bordeleau scored for Vancouver in the first four minutes. The teams swapped goals by Jim McElmury of Kansas City and Gerry O'Flaherty of the Canucks but the Scouts tied it up at 3-3 on power-play goals by Bart Crashley and Robin Burns.

After a scoreless second period, John Gould made it 4-3 for Vancouver only 46 seconds into the final period but Ed Gilbert tied it up again a couple of minutes later.

"I had to shake things up," Maloney said later. "I told the guys that we play 80 games and there are some nights when some fellows aren't playing as well as they might. It's my job to find out who isn't , and not play them as much. As it turned out, it helped."

Slipping Days Over, Golden Don a Threat

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — For the first half of the 1974 racing season, Golden Don was slipping on dirt tracks and so was his career record.

Three races after taking over the big four-year-old colt, trainer Kay E. Jensen had seen enough. He decided to campaign Golden Don in turf races, and a streak of 14 races without a victory came to an end.

Three triumphs in six grass starts earned Golden Don an invitation to the $150,000 Washington, D.C. International and he could be a threat to defending champion Dahlia in Saturday's 1½-mile turf race at Laurel Race Course.

After winning a division of the Brighton Beach Handicap and the Manhattan Handicap, Golden Don was two lengths behind Dahlia while finishing fourth in the Man o' War on Oct. 12.

Three entries in Saturday's 23rd running of the International were sired by former participants in the race. They include Margouillat, by Diatome, the 1965 winner; Marduk, by Orsini, a 1958 starter; and Mistigri, whose sire Misti competed in both 1961 and 1963.

Jockey Ron Turcotte of Grand Falls, N.B., has the ride aboard Marduck.

Dushinski Has Mission

REGINA (CP) Coach Eagle Keys and defensive end Bill Baker of British Columbia Lions probably feel they have something to prove when they enter the Western Football Conference semi-final at Taylor Field Sunday, but Ted Dushinski of Saskatchewan Roughriders is in the same boat, Dushinski, a veteran defensive back, returned to the Roughrider lineup this season after the Lions couldn't make a deal for him.

"They didn't offer us anything we could use," Saskatchewan general manager Ken Preston said Thursday night. "I'm glad they didn't because he's been playing extremely well since he came back."

Dushinski was so certain he would wind up with B.C. that he moved to Vancouver. Now he is a regular in the defensive backfield beside Lorne Richardson. "Yes, I would think Ted feels he has something to prove," said Preston.

Another perennial returnee to the lineup is offensive tackle Clyde Brock, who often retires under pressure of work only to return when lured by playoff money and old loyalties.

"Clyde always plays well," said Preston. "He's been back about five weeks and his experience is a big plus."

Saskatchewan has a big advantage, both in years of service and in playoff experience, but even more, important is the physical condition of the Roughriders.

"We're using the same lineup as against Montreal in the final game of the season," Preston said. "We have no major injuries and few minor ones."

The Lions aren't so lucky. Quarterback Don Moorhead is a doubtful starter. Even if he can play, he probably will have to share the work with Peter Liske, the former Calgary quarterback who has been absorbing the Lions' system for only a few weeks.

Running back Lou Harris is expected to be in top shape after resting an injured ankle for two weeks, and defensive end Baker is likely to return following an ankle injury.

Baker spent several seasons with the Roughriders. He and coach Keys both feel the Lions are ready to win, although they concede Saskatchewan quarterback Ron Lancaster is perhaps the toughest playoff competitor they know.

A full house is expected for the game, to be televised nationally on the CTV network.

"We've sold more than 19,000 seats," said Preston. "Capacity is about 22,000."

ROBERTS CLEARED TO REJOIN CATS

Gordie Roberts, embroiled in a jurisdictional dispute between Victoria Cougars of the Western Canada Hockey League and Sudbury Wolves of the Ontario Hockey League, is now free to rejoin the Cougars.

Ellis Achtem, the Cougars' lawyer, confirmed this morning that an injunction allowing Roberts to play pending the outcome of the dispute had been approved by a Toronto judge Thursday.

He also said Roberts' east-west transfer was expected to be completed today.

This means the Detroit-born Roberts will be able to don a Cougar uniform again in time for the game at 8:30 p.m. Saturday against Flin flon bombers in Memorial Arena. The dispute has kept Roberts out of action for almost three weeks.

The Wheat Kings rallied from a 2-0 deficit to hold period leads of 5-2 and 6-3.

Left-winger Dale McMullen led Kings with four goals while Rick Blight and Jeff Sheardown each scored twice and Rick Piche added a single.

Don Ashby fired two goals to pace Cents while Greg Neeld and Mike Fynn added one apiece.

Capitals Just Gawk As Bruins Run Wild

By The Canadian Press

The fledgling Washington Capitals were "just in awe" of the National Hockey League powerhouse Boston Bruins, says Jim Anderson, coach of the expansion team.

Terrorized might have been a better word. The Bruins downed the Capitals 10-4 in Boston Thursday night. It was the eighth straight loss for Washington.

Bobby Orr scored three goals, assisted on three others and ran up his league-leading total to 28 points. Phil Esposito had a goal and three assists to bring him up to 25 points.

"The team was just in awe of them," said Anderson. "Playing the Bruins, playing in Boston Garden, a kid like 19-year-old winger Mike Marson watches those guys pass the puck around and he's just in awe.

"I know what it's like — I've played against these guys myself."

In other games, Philadelphia Flyers blanked Minnesota North Stars 2-0, Los Angeles Kings beat Pittsburgh Penguins 5-3 and Vancouver Canucks defeated Kansas City Scouts 6-4. The league "expanded too fast," said Anderson, and "it's going to take three or four years for these kids to do anything."

"If the organization stays together without cutting its throats up, it's going to come together."

The Los Angeles victory at Pittsburgh extended the Kings' unbeaten string to seven games and gave the Division 3 leaders a seven-point lead over second-place Montreal Canadiens. And it extended the Pittsburgh winless streak to eight games.

Penguins winger Lowell MacDonald was ejected from the game during a second-period fight, which also resulted in major penalties against Pittsburgh Syl Apps and Mike Corrigan of the Kings.

At Philadelphia, goalie Bernie Parent had to make only 18 saves for the shutout over Minnesota while Rick MacLeish and Bill Barber supplied the scoring.

Minnesota goalie Fern Rilard was taken to hospital for x-rays after he was knocked against the goal cross-bar, injuring his back in the second period.

Sub Powers Rockets

By The Associated Press

Cliff Meely of Houston Rockets thinks he is good enough to be in the starting lineup. Maybe so, but he also is valuable as a reserve.

The 6-foot-8 forward, who earlier Thursday complained of being demoted to the bench and asked to be traded, entered the game in the second quarter with his team trailing 40-28 and picked up 11 points before half time to lead Houston to a 103-93 National Basketball Association victory over Milwaukee Bucks.

Milwaukee, which battled Boston to seven games in the NBA final last year, has just one victory in its first 10 outings, the worst record in the league except for the expansion New Orleans Jazz, 0-10.

Salmon Fishing Success Best Around Victoria

Salmon fishing around Vancouver Island is still suffering a case of the doldrums but a few catches continue to trickle in from a number of spots.

And most of the action seems to be concentrated in waters from Sooke to Oak Bay.

Winter chinooks weighing an average of four pounds are being caught between Otter Point and Secretary Island on 4½-inch minnows.

No coho have been taken at Becher Bay in the past two days but "pretty fair" returns of winter chinooks up to 8½ pounds are coming in from the vicinity of Church and Bedford islands. Beechey Head is also worth a try.

Afternoon has been the most productive time and minnows fished at nearly any depth seem to be bringing in most salmon.

Pedder Bay is yielding winter chinooks up to nine pounds right inside of Fossil Point. Pink pearl and polar bear buzzbombs are catching the most fish but the old standbys of strip and minnow are also doing well.

Waters between Brotchie Ledge and Albert Head contain a population of jacks and larger chinooks up to about eight pounds and they're starting to grab flashtails and strip in ever-increasing numbers.

Most success has been noted on real deep lines — starting with about two pounds of weight.

Trial Island pickin's have dropped off in the past week, leaving the stretch of water off Victoria Golf Club as the top-producing area near Oak Bay. A few chinooks up to 10 pounds and the odd coho have been landed on buzz-bombs and stingsildas.

Nine-pounders appear tops off the Deep Cove Marker and the south shore of Salt Spring Island. Again, buzz-bombs and stingsildas are the best bet.

Further south in Saanich Inlet, returns have only been fair off the Bamberton shore and in Finlayson Arm.

A new run of chums has appeared in Cowichan Bay, where fishermen are taking the odd coho, and a few winter chinooks have been boated under the northern power line in Sansum Narrows.

Strip-casters working the Northwest Bay area are landing winter chinooks averaging eight to 10 pounds but waters right off Nanaimo are reported to be quiet.

Likewise, saltchuck fishermen in Port Alberni seem to be staying close to home and hearth — or getting skunked.

Perhaps the most exciting type of fishing up-Island right now consists of using trout-type gear to fly-fish for coho off some of the river mouths between Qualicum Beach and Shelter Point.

Duncan Bay is providing Campbell Riverites with some good catches of winter chinooks on buzz-bombs, stingsildas and mooched herring.

Freshwater anglers continue to experience increasing success in a number of Island lakes and streams.

Prospect, Shawnigan, Dougan's, Wild Deer and Cowichan lakes are all yielding good catches of trout to both bait and hardware fishermen.

Further north, the odd steelhead is showing up in the Puntledge River and trout fishing remains steady in Upper and Lower Campbell as well as McIvor, John Hart and Loveland lakes.

NIBBLES: South Vancouver Island Rangers will be holding a prize trap and rifle shoot starting at 10 a.m. Sunday on their Luxton Road grounds . . . There'll be running deer targets for the riflemen . . . Chickens and bottles will be given as prizes.

Prospects look bright for the opening of the hunting season on antlerless deer Saturday . . . This blustery weather should stir things up . . . Shotgunners are reminded that the season on cock pheasants and quail ends Monday.

ALI DIDN'T CALL; ABC ADMITS HOAX

MICHAEL BANKS

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A Milwaukee broadcast station said Thursday night that Muhammed Ali reported he did not telephone sportscaster Howard Cosell Oct. 28, the day Canadian student Michael Banks of London, Ont., claims to have phoned Cosell and fooled him with an imitation of the heavyweight champion.

Frank Bialek of WQFM said he reached Ali by phone at his mother-in-law's home in Chicago and asked whether he had telephoned Cosell on that date.

"I never called him, no," was the reply.

Banks, a student at the University of Western Ontario, told The Toronto globe and Mail earlier this week he mimicked Ali in a call to Cosell during the American Broadcasting Company's telecast of the Atlanta Falcons-Pittsburgh Steelers National Football League game Oct. 28.

Cosell had first denied that he had been fooled but in New York on Thursday a spokesman for ABC admitted that it probably was a hoax.

The station said it arranged a conference call between Ali in Chicago and Banks in London, Ont., Thursday night.

A tape recording of the call carried a voice resembling th atof Ali and asking, "Say, man, who you think you are, calling up Howard Cosell and making him think he's me?"

"I don't take no time to call up that man from Africa," he said. "He should be arrested every time he opens his mouth. He should be arrested for air pollution."

The other voice, which the station said was Banks, then mimmicked Ali.

"You're not quite as dumb as you look fella," the first voice said. "Howard Cosell gets paid for being an idiot. What's your excuse?"

Foreman Charges 'Fleece' From Pre-Fight Squabble

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — A night-long squabble over extra money by some accounts $500,000 to be placed in a valise almost resulted in George Foreman walking out of his world heavyweight title fight against Muhammad Ali 36 hours before the bell.

Foreman didn't get the money, but he climbed into the ring at 4 a.m. Oct. 30, by his own admission, a confused and unhappy man.

"It was very trying," he said. "I had to sit up all night arguing and I admit it was a strain. You're supposed to take it all in stride if you're a champion, so I don't want this to sound like a cop-out.

"Under other circumstances, the fight wouldn't have been."

The ex-champion's title disappeared when he was knocked out in the eighth round.

The story comes from four sources, including British promoter John Daly and Foreman. Publication was withheld until all the principals left Zaire.

The sources said the sequence of events began in London, eight days before the fight. Leroy Jackson, Foreman's financial manager, called on Derek Dawson, managing director of Equity Enterprises, the parent firm of Hemdale Leisure Corp., one of the fight's three promoters.

The sources said these events followed:

Jackson told Dawson that Foreman was so so dissatisfied with his financial arrangements that he could not guarantee the fight would take place. Because of tax payments on purses from other fights, taxes on the current $5 million, litigation in various courts and managers' fees, Foreman was unlikely to clear more than $500,000 from the Ali bout.

Daly then flew to Zaire where he met with Foreman and Jackson in Kinshasa on the Thursday before the bout.

The fighter said he would refuse to appear at the weigh-in Saturday night, set for live telecast to the United States, if a financial arrangement was not reached.

Foreman's price for co-operation, the sources said, was $500,000. Jackson said $300,000 would be enough under the circumstances cash placed in a valise.

When Daly said he would be prepared to talk to the Zaire government and Video Techniques, the other partners in the promotion, Jackson said he wanted no part of either; Foreman would sign nothing, the money was to be tax free and a gift for future co-operation.

Daly reported the exchange to Dick Sadler, Foreman's manager, Fred Weymar, a German financial advisor to the Zaire government, and Henry Schwartz and Don King of Video Techniques. Daly then came up with a ploy to stall for time and make certain his Saturday night weigh-in would get on television.

After talking with Sadler, Jackson was sent Saturday to London where he was told he would have an appointment with Dawson the Monday before the fight.

Monday evening, Jackson called Foreman in Zaire and told him that no money was forthcoming. Thirty-six hours before the fight, Foreman asked Daly to come to his room and told him that he had been tricked into doing the weigh-in, that Jackson had been laughed at in Daly's London office and that he didn't feel like fighting.

Foreman then called in Bula Mandungu, who ran the Zaire side of the fight and is one of President Mobutu Sese Seko's closest aides. He gathered the principals with Foreman for the meeting that ran into the night.

Daly said Foreman had never been promised a thing, while the champion insisted he had been fleeced. There were financial compromises proposed by Weymar, but Foreman was adamant: He would sign nothing.

How Foreman was eased away from talk about junking the fight is not completely clear, but the sources said no money went into the suitcase in London.

Few Surprise Selections On Crimson Tide Squad

Selectors today named a 23-man Victoria Crimson Tide squad to defend the McKechnie Cup, symbol of provincial inter-union rugby supremacy.

And Tide coach Tillman Briggs announced his starting XV for the opening match against University of British Columbia Thunderbirds at 2:30 p.m. Monday at UBC's Thunderbird Stadium.

There are few surprises.

The backs are Darryl Noulette, Stu Barber and Chuck Shergold, all of James Bay; Gillie Greig and Pat Simmons of Oak Bay Wanderers; Wes Thomas of Cowichan and Cliff Yorath of Castaways.

Laas comes into the lineup because both Ken Wilke of UVic and Gary Johnston of James Bay are out with injuries. Hooker Dave Docherty of Oak Bay is unable to make the trip.

Wilke, Johnston and Docherty are members of the 23-man squad, which Briggs says will be rotated to give all the players games during the rep season.

Others on the squad are forwards Casey Walt of James Bay and Derek Garside of Cowichan and backs Jim Halliday of Cowichan, Rod Fiddick of James Bay and Graham Hunter of Castaways.

Other unions in the four-team, round-robin competition are Vancouver, which Briggs warns could be the force to deal with this year, and the Fraser Valley.

Tight Point Race

Quick, now — how many teams in the South Island Big Six Hockey League?

The answer is five, which puts the Big Six right up there with the province's only junior football league, a five-team circuit known as the Junior Big Four.

There's no logical explanation for the football foul-up, but the hockey people can explain that their league will, indeed, have six teams when Mill Bay joins next season.

Okay then, but what about the scoring race in the Big Six? That ought to teach anybody how to count because only three points separate the top 11 scorers.

As of Nov. 4, three players were tied for the lead with 16 points each — Mike Haddon and Gus Ryan of the first-place Cowichan Lakers and Dave Griff of Chemainus Blues who are tied for third with Victoria Stockers.

There isn't much spread in the goaltending battle either. John Lindsay of Cowichan has a 2.60 goals-against average in five games while teammate Brett Keen is right behind with a three-goal average, also in five games.

Total harmonic distortion. This type of distortion is caused by the creation of harmonics of the desired fundamental tone. For example, when a 100Hz tone is received by the amplifier it tends, in addition, to produce weaker 2000Hz (second harmonic) and 3000Hz (third harmonic), etc. tones. The sum of these unwanted harmonics is stated as a percentage of the total signal present in the output. The lower the better.

Chicago Franchise in Jeopardy

By The Canadian Press

Indianapolis Racers won their second game of the season Thursday night, shutting out San Diego Mariners 3-0.

The game, before a crowd of 6,105 at Indianapolis, was the only one played in the World Hockey Association but there were other activities—Chicago Cougars said their franchise is in jeopardy because they are without a suitable arena and the stumbling Michigan Stags got winger Guy Trottier from Toronto Toros.

The Racers, who entered the league this season along with Phoenix Roadrunners, won their 10th start with the 18-save goaltending of Andy Brown and goals by Ron Walters, Bob Whitlock and Brian McKenzie.

The win tied the Racers on points with Chicago for last place in the Eastern Division.

Meanwhile, Cougars president Walter Kaiser said the franchise is in jeopardy unless a more suitable arena can be obtained.

The Cougars now play in the 9,000-seat International Amphitheatre. The club is suing the village of Rosemont, a northwest Chicago suburb which the Cougars claim reneged on a promise to build them a new $20 million arena by next fall.

The Cougars have filed a suit claiming $3 million and charging that the village did not start construction within 60 days after a contract was signed last March.

"It is economically unfeasible to run a major-league hockey team without a major-league hockey arena," Kaiser said. "We are entertaining any and all monetary alternatives at this time—some of which are very unpalatable."

Meanwhile, Michigan, which has averaged about 2,000 fans for its first three home games and has won only two of 10 starts, bolstered its lineup with the acquisition of right-winger Trottier. In return, the Stags gave up their second-round choice in next year's amateur draft to the Toros.

Trottier, 33, has seen little action this season because of the Toros' over-abundance of talent.

Scorpions Open at Home Against Unbeaten Broncos

Victoria Scorpions and Burnaby-New Westminster Broncos, the only unbeaten teams in the Dogwood Senior "A" Men's Basketball League, clash in two games this weekend that open the home season for Victoria.

Both contests, at 8 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday, will be at Central Junior High School.

Scorpions, who joined the league this season after agreeing to pay travel and accommodation expenses for Vancouver-area teams visiting Victoria, started their campaign last weekend with 111-101 and 97-92 victories over Richmond Ramblers.

Broncos nipped North Shore Mountaineers 94-93 in their only previous game.

Several Burnaby-New Westminster players will have to be watched carefully by Scorpions.

Former national team member, six foot, three-inch Derek Sankey, will be on the starting lineup for Broncos. Former University of British Columbia Thunderbirds stars John Mills and Bob Phillips will also be in the lineup and may produce problems for Scorpions under the boards.

Bob Burrows currently leads the Scorpions in scoring with 48 points, followed by Brian MacKenzie (40), Dave Morgan (30) and Gord Hoshal (30).

Current standings:

	P	W	L	Pt
Victoria Scorpions	2	2	0	4
Burn.-New West. Broncos	1	1	0	2
Richmond Ramblers	3	1	2	2
Vancouver Capilanos	1	0	1	0
N.S. Mountaineers	1	0	1	0

SOCCER LEADERS MEET MONDAY

Fans will get a chance to see the leading teams from the province's two top soccer leagues in action at 2:15 p.m. Monday at Royal Athletic Park.

That's when Victoria London Boxing Club, leader of the Vancouver Island Soccer League's Premier Division, will tackle Pegasus of Vancouver, top side in the First Division of the B.C. Soccer League.

Victoria coach George Cox will have a strong team out for the big inter-league exhibition match and the Pegasus squad promises to be the highest-calibre side to be seen this season on the Island.

Led by the experienced ex-English League first division player Glen Johnson, Pegasus has had six wins, one loss and one tie so far in the B.C. League.

With Johnson, who is the driving force on the team, are many players who are well-known to Victoria fans, including Mike McLenaghen, the talented captain of the Canadian junior national team, and Mark McQueen, another of Canada's top juniors.

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

The Thunderbird World Championships are due to be raced in Seattle next summer and already members of the large Victoria fleet are gearing for this one.

Nine berths have been allotted to the Victoria area and final selection will be made after qualifying races in mid-April and early June.

In addition to the nine competitive entries, John Malleson's Sunday will also be entitled to race in Seattle, John being a former world champion.

John Watson, commodore of the Turkey Head Sailing Association, is one of those who will be hustling to represent Victoria.

His new fiberglass Thunderbird, being built by John Booth, should be launched in mid-December, and although he'll have some misgivings, as all of us do, in saying so-long to his old boat, Pahhquee, John is hoping her successor will have just that extra edge needed to make the qualifiers' circle.

THSA has another two races scheduled for Sunday, start times being 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. The start line will be in the vicinity of Cattle Point in Oak Bay.

Twenty-nine boats will have an extra crew member aboard. These are students of John Sharpe, who gives night classes at Camosun College, using the Canadian Yachting Association education standards.

This will be the students' first taste of sailing under race conditions and, as in other years, will undoubtedly result in some of them being smitten with the racing bug.

The Canoe Bay Sailing Club will also be racing Sunday, starting a six-miler in waters off Sidney at 10 a.m.

Last Saturday CBSC had 54 boats racing, with about one third of the fleet unable to finish within the time limit becaude of flukey winds.

First over-all was Gordie Inglis' Water Melon, followed by Jack Patterson's Hustler, Bent Jespersen's Limfjord, Geoff Greenhalgh's Yo-Yo, Steve Meredith's Impasse, Jack Lucas' Cal-Amity, John Sparks' Bonhomie, Bert Buchanan's Lairig Ghru, Loren Acker's Maalea and a newcomer to CBSA, Muirgen.

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, will also be out racing on Sunday.

Varying winds and an adverse tide tested the patience of crews racing in Royal Victoria Yacht Club's 16.8-miler last Sunday.

Of the 11 boats racing under the Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet section, only two managed to finish in the time limit, Bob Van Den Driessche's Noosa edging out Ned Ashe's Mint.

All 11 boats racing under the International Offshore Rule, however, made it in time. Greg Oliver's Distant Drummer placed first, followed by Bob Hosie's Meg, Ron Skinner's Trekka, Rod Andrews and Hugh Bacon's Encounter, Jan Huibers' Sea Spell, Gordie Vickery's Valhalla, George Stricker's Servus, Ian Duncanson's Kim, Archie Campbell's Sea Robin, Eric Dowell's Ariel II and Steve Merriman's Vandal II.

SHORT TACKS — Oliver Summers, whose Summer Star is one of the best-equipped power cruisers in these waters, is shorebound this weekend. National training officer for the Canadian Power Squadron, Oliver is in Quebec City for the CPS's 26th national conference.

Summer Star and her able master earned the respect of every sailor on this coast when she became the only pleasure cruiser to accompany Victoria-Maui racers to Hawaii and making the return trip with almost as much ease as if she was on a Gulf of Georgia cruise.

BOWLERS OF WEEK

First to top 900 in distaff section of contest this season, Vera Lysne has captured women's fivepin award in fifth week of annual Times Bowler-of-the-Year competition with blockbusting series of 924. Norsemen Extend Rugby Win Skein

University of Victoria Norsemen kept their lead in the Victoria Rugby Union's second division Thursday night be defeating UVic Saxons 21-0 in a match on the university's Wallace Field.

Norsemen, who have now won four straight league matches, got tries from Ted Zinkan, Ken McCrea, John Buchanan and Bob Wright and a conversion and penalty goal from Dave Chambers.

Basketball Vikings Tangle With Grads

University of Victoria Vikings head into one of their most competitive weekends of the men's basketball season tonight when they play the UVic grads in the first of two exhibition games at UVic gym.

The annual series, a highlight at UVic, continues Saturday night. Starting time for both games is 8 p.m.

UVic Vikettes and Jayvees also see weekend basketball action.

The Vikettes, coached by Mike Gallo, should be strong contenders for the Canada West women's college championship this season. They play the Ex-Vikettes this afternoon at 4 in their only weekend encounter.

Coach Jack Newnham's Jayvees, however, play both nights. They meet Capilano College tonight and Vancouver City College Saturday with a 6 p.m. tipoff in both contests.

Volleyball rounds out the weeeknd sports menu at UVic with a women's invitational tournament beginning at 9 a.m. Saturday.

New Format for Davis Cup

ROME (AP) — South Africa was awarded the 1974 Davis Cup on Thursday, but no disciplinary action has been taken by the International Lawn Tennis federation against India which refused to play the final.

South Africa also was appointed as the eighth member of the ILTF David Cup committee that produced the decisions after an eight-hour session.

"The Cup was awarded to South Africa by India's refusal to play because of its opponent's apartheid policy," said committee chairman Harcourt Woods of the United States.

Woods also said the format of the David Cup in the future will almost certainly be modified.

"Both the federations and the players agree on that," he said.

It was the first time in the history of the Davis Cup that the final will not be played. South Africa was also the first country outside of the "Big Four" — the United States, Australia, Britain and France — to win the competition.

"There was considerable discussion before we came up with a decision," Woods said. "Indian delegate Radge Khanna produced official documents signed by responsible government members to prove that his government prohibited the Indian players from facing South Africa.

"The committee was satisfied with the players shown, and so was the South African delegate, so no disciplinary action has been taken against India. We obviously deplore such involvement of politics in sport."

"South Africa proposed to expel India, but the matter was withdrawn after the official documents were produced," Woods said. "There has been no such proposal from India."

Commons Moves on 8 Old Bills

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons carved a chunk from its legislative backlog Thursday, ramming eight bills through various stages despite continuing Progressive Conservative objections to the petroleum administration bill.

Conservatives continued their opposition to the bill from seven months ago when it was first introduced, renewing charges that it is a socialist measure that will diminish the country's energy self-sufficiency.

The petroleum bill got second reading — approval in principle — with four other bills, while three other items received final Commons approval.

First introduced April 2, the petroleum bill would empower Ottawa to set oil and natural gas prices if a satsifactory agreement could not be reached with the provinces.

Alberta Conservatives led the offensive against the bill, which was reintroduced in the new Parliament after dying with the dissolution of the last parliament for the July 8 election. The bill next comes up in committee of the whole House.

Stan Schellenberger (PC-Westaskiwin) called the bill a move to "socialize the oil industry" and reiterated Conservative charges that the proposed measures infringe on provincial control of natural resources.

He and Peter Bawden (PC-Calgary South) said the bill, plus the announcement last spring that Ottawa intends to disallow deduction of provincial royalties in computing corporate taxes, has reduced oil exploration.

Stan Schumacher (PC-Palliser) said the effect of government oil policy is that "Canada is moving away from self-sufficiency in oil."

The bill also would put on the law books the crude oil export tax and the subsidy to eastern consumers of more expensive imported oil.

Both measures have been in effect with the co-operation of oil companies since the spring despite the lack of legislation. Ottawa and the provinces agreed in March to set the domestic oil price at $6.50 a barrel and the export tax of $5.20 a barrel on exported oil priced it at international levels, with revenue going into the oil subsidy.

Of the bills that got third reading Thursday, requiring only routine royal assent to become law, one would amend the Canada Pension Plan (CPP) to establish equal treatment for men and women contributors and beneficiaries under the plan.

Another would increase war veterans' pensions and equalize sexual status. It also would provide cost-of-living increases tied to the consumer price index for allowances under the War Veterans Allowance Act and the Civilian War Pensions and Allowance Act.

The last bill to get final Commons approval would amend customs tariffs, providing new tariff schedules for hundreds of items.

Bills that got second reading included one to increase the maximum outstanding capital stock of British Columbia Telephone Co. to $1.25 million from $250 million.

Another would increase the membership of the Northern Canada Power Commission to five from three.

SIGNIFICANT HIKE IN FOOD COST SEEN

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian consumers can expect significantly higher food prices because of mediocre 1974 harvests and the need to safeguard the position of producers, says the Bank of Montreal business review for November.

The review notes that every step in the food chain, from the farm to the supermarket, has been hit by inflationary pressures.

Meanwhile, Canadian farmers are apprehensive about increasing their output fearing low returns and high costs.

Hospital Up to Region

Responsibility for completing the acute-care section of Saanich Peninsula Hospital is entirely in the hands of the Regional Hospital Board, Health Minister Dennis Cocke said Thursday.

"If the regional district comes to my office and asks, they can have their 75-bed acute-care hospital as soon as they can put it together," said Cocke.

The minister was replying to a question posed by Saanich MLA Hugh Curtis during debate of amendments to the Department of Health Act which received unanimous second reading approval in principle during the afternoon sitting.

The amendments allow the deputy health minister to be a non-physician and bring in changes to facilitate reorganization of the health department into two instead of four main branches.

Cocke said the Capital Region has done well in the extended care field but has neglected acute care.

If the region does not pick up the challenge to provide complete care "the future is bleak," he said.

Saanich Peninsula Hospital on Mt. Newton Cross Road already has 75 extended care beds and was designed to provide acute care beds to replace Resthaven Hospital in Sidney. But work on the second phase has bogged down.

Wallace praised the bill, but cautioned that it is "too easy to lose sight of the patient."

"This government has fallen down sadly on intermediate care. You definitely have the responsibility to improve the relationship between your department and the regional hospital boards," said Wallace.

"Administration can sometimes look great on paper, when it's not working well, in fact poorly, in the capital region ... a flop.

Although Liberal Leader David Anderson commended Cocke for being a "pillar of virtue" compared to former Socred Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, one Socred MLA charged the Cocke was on "a power-trip."

Bob McClelland, MLA for Langley, charged the amendments — which give Cocke greater signing powers and repeal an old provision that the deputy health minister must be a physician — open the doors to power."

Full Financing Promised

Legislation will be brought in during next year's spring session to insure the new Assessment Authority receives full finahcing, Premier Barrett said Thursday.

Saanich Socred MLA Hugh Curtis raised the issue in the house and said the government's decision to abandon 100 per cent assessments for 1975 will mean a cut in the new authority's financial base since part of its income was to come frrom a tax levy based on the 100 per-cent formula.

NDP INTEREST SOUGHT

Some Victoria businessmen are trying to charge the B.C. government interest on accounts left unpaid for several months, Victoria Socred MLA Newell Morrison said Thursday.

Morrison received no answer in the house when he asked Premier Barrett if the government intends to pay those extra charges.

In an interview outside the legislature, Morrison said he knew of several businesses which have submited bills to various government departments equivalent to the interest which would have been charged during the period the government accounts sat unpaid.

Others have begun writing into all their new bids for government business that accounts must be paid within 15 days after receipt of merchandise or interest at 1½ per cent per month will be charged, he said.

Many businessmen were forced to borrow money from the bank during the time when government bills were not paid, said Morrison, and they have simply decided now they cannot "subsidize" the government.

Unpaid bills dating back as far as the early spring had piled up until last week when the government pledged a full-scale effort to clear up all accounts.

The backlog was blamed on a shortage of key punch operators.

'About Face' Claimed On Political Ads

A Socred MLA has accused Premier Barrett of using public money for political advertising.

Don Phillips (SC South Peace River) said Thursday the premier "has done another about face" in carrying on a practice he criticized so strongly in opposition.

Phillips showed the legislature an ad placed in a northern newspaper advertising a public meeting with Barrett during his recent tour of the province.

Phillips also held out newspaper clipping from the Times on March 21, 1972, which quoted then Opposition leader Barrett criticizing the Socred government for using public money to finance ads "to further its own case."

Barrett replied it was customary to have such ads paid by the government and said it was one tradition of W. A. C. Bennett he decided to keep.

"The principle is wrong and I don't care who did it," Phillips said later.

In opposition the NDP complained of Socred ads for B.C. Hydro and other government departments, he said, but the government is now spending thousands of dollars on Autoplan.

Gov't News To Shape Up

A general shaping up of provincial government information services has been promised by Premier Barrett.

Barrett said "straight, hard facts" about legislation and programs are lacking and he has asked Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall to "take some action to make people aware of what's available."

"Some kind of an information service has to be established," said Barrett, mentioning the possibility of reinstating the old B.C. Government News which was mailed monthly to all taxpayers of the province.

The permier said he had visited one government agency recently and when he asked for information on tax deferrals "it wasn't available."

Wonderful World Of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

Dear Dr. Miller: It's a kicks watching this tiny kitten walk up to Jumbo's dish and start eating his dog food. Jumbo backs off and stands there waiting anxiously for Tiny, who's a slow eater, to finish. When she finally does walk away, then he dives into his food and it's gone in seconds. The funny part is if a kitten will ignore cat food in a dish a few feet away, or anywhere else, then Jumbo does too. Does this mean dog food is better? — T.S.

Dear T.S.: No, not for cats, and even less so for kittens. Cats actually require almost four times the dietary protein dogs do. Kittens require an even higher percentage of protein than adult cats. Cats also need more vitamin B complex than some some of the other vitamins, so dog food would tend to be deficient in these areas, and perhaps in vitamins as well. A good dog food then, is not a good cat food. Whether Jumbo helps you or not, you have to train Tiny to eat her food, not his.

Dear Dr. Miller: I live in the city and don't have any good places to play with my dog. What's the best way to play with a big dog in a big city, anyway?—D.K.

Dear D.K.: Citified conditions contribute to canine claustrophobia. Ponderous pooches are particularly prone to this problem. The "best" way of exercising such a dog — which is to seek out the least crowded nearby area and exercise him there (on a leash of course) — is usually woefully inadequate. The difficulties of keeping a large dog contented in congested areas should be carefully considered beforehand. While many smaller dogs can adapt, particularly where the owner has adequate time to spend with them, play and exercise problems increase in proportion to size, varying considerably among breeds. A lean, 50-pound Afghan or Airedale might require several times the amount of exercise necessary to satisfy a 50-pound basset. When you already have the dog, of whatever size, you obviously do the best you can. You can't really make up for lack of adequate activity, though a maximum amount of attention helps some. So does a careful measuring of your dog's food to avoid obesity by providing minimum caloric requirements.

Dear Dr. Miller: Our cat Mamooia is a Siamese and has always been vociferous. This has never bothered us until recently when her breath has become unbearable. She is 12 years old, apparently healthy, but unless we can remedy her problem I'm afraid the family will vote to take away her house keys and she will spend her remaining years outdoors. — E.I.

Dear E.I.: As long as she has the breath to carry on a conversation it is unlikely Mamoonia will ever stop talking. Siamese seldom do. But a lock-out is not the answer to your mutual problem. Aside from the mutual loss of companionship, the hazards, stresses and strains of a sudden shift to an outdoor environment would probably mean Mamoonia would not have any final years to look forward to. She probably would not last very long. The answer then is "bearable" breath, or better. Her doctor can probably accomplish this. Since most felines of this age (and younger) require dental work to avoid halitosis, it is reasonable to assume her hang-up can be reversed with a proper amount of care. (There are other possible causes for bad breath, of course, but dental troubles in this age group are most common.)

By AB KENT
Times Staff

This is a requiem. For a hamburger. And for chili con carne in a hot earthenware pot, for lemon and hot mince pies, for a clean counter, glistening cups of fresh-brewed coffee, quick and friendly service.

This is goodbye to the Jolly Friar.

For more than 25 years the innocuous little lunchstand at Blanshard and Cormorant served a devoted clientele which sang the Friar's praises around the civilized world.

On Nov. 30 the Friar retires with no prospect of reopening.

Its architecture — simple white cement blocks outside — was unique inside, best described as mud-Tudor and burnt beams, enhanced by a modest collection of memorabilia, artifacts of bygone times often on loan from customers long since gone.

It had a warmth — except in the coldest winter winds — that seemed to exude as much from the walls themselves as from the dented copper boiler and the old black grill with its flickering blue gas fire.

From that sturdy sheet of boiler plate came the most succulent short-orders known to that most critical of diners, the noon luncher. The menu was brief but beautiful, the prices still within sight despite the cost of beef, cheese, pastry and coffee.

A few of the customers have been eating there since the door opened in 1949, and many have made it their steady lunchbreak for more than a decade.

Some dream and drool about Beef Burger a la Friar in exotic corners of the earth and a la Friar in exotic corntrs of the earth and even casual visitors make it a point to eat there at least once during a stay in Victoria.

The Jolly Friar may be the only Pacific Coast diner to fill orders for Toronto and overseas. A cheeseburger was once airmailed to the U.K. for a homesick client. A Toronto man who stopped in often would take two home with him by Air Canada to share with his wife.

The blackened wood for the beams was salvaged by the original owner, Herb Woodhead, from the Willows arena fire; the recipes for relish, sweet mustard and chili were homemade; the 16 stools were hard.

Woodhead, how retired, says the Friar is operated today just as it was when he erected it, patterned after an Elizabethan pub in the village of Yarm, which was near the airfield where he served in the RCAF during the Second World War.

But today the style is so non-conforming the health inspectors would not permit removal or reconstruction, and Wally Connorton, who bought the place in 1962, plans to let it fall under the wrecker's hammer when the site is cleared for a new office block.

The combination of inflation, high minimum wages and expense of starting anew is 'oo formidable.

Like some of the customers, manager Ordie Schmidt has been with the Friar a long time — 24½ years last month. Number two girl Doreen Moreau has been there 10 years.

They indicate they'll be glad for the rest, and Ordie philosophically says she'll find something else to do. But you get the impression they worry a little about where their customers will eat when the notice runs out Dec. 1.

You see, there are places that promote their food, their atmosphere and service but don't mean it. The Jolly Friar means it and never mentions it.

In lands no less enlightened, heroes have their tombs. Somebwere in Victoria there must be a creyasse to enshrine a Jolly Friar Spanish Beef Burger.

Soviet Weekly: Nyet to Smoking

In a striking attack on smoking in this country, where antismoking advertisements are infrequent, Krokodil devoted an entire 16-page issue to the question. It disclosed that smoking had grown four times as rapidly as population since 1970.

Domestic cigarette production this year, according to Vladimir A. Kholostov, chief of the tobacco administration of the food industry, will hit 373 billion — enough for everyone over 14 to smoke 100 packs a year even without sizable imports from Bulgaria, Cuba, Yugoslavia and the United States. By comparison, the average American aged 18 or over is smoking over 200 packs a year.

The rise in Soviet cigarette production since 1970 has been 15.5 per cent, while the rise in population has been just under 4 per cent.

The Krokodil article confirmed what almost any Soviet citizen will tell a visitor — that smoking is increasingly fashionable and popular especially among women and young people, despite the introduction of more expensive brands.

The rough-cut Primas, cheapest of all, still sell for 14 kopecks (18 cents) a pack. The more popular Stolichnye or Rossiskiye cost 40 kopecks (52 cents), and some people will pay 60 kopecks (78 cents) for Yava Longs.

Krokodil, deploring the typical Soviet practice of citing bad examples in the West whenever trying to combat harmful practices at home, notes the timidity of articles by doctors quoting findings abroad on the harmful effects of smoking. "In a word, all these terrors take place somewhere in far-off lands or in the countries of capitalism," Krokodil says. "And our smoker is left with the brave hope that this does not affect him personally."

Another target is social pressure, especially from elders and superiors. Krokodil criticizes stars of stage and screen for using smoking as a device to cover any situation, blames teachers for setting bad examples for students and chides parents for encouraging their youngsters to start the habit.

A cartoon portrays a group of boys smoking near the rest room in their school while smoke clouds pours out of the teachers' room down the hall. The caption reads: "Our teachers are just like children."

A cartoon unusual for the Soviet Press shows God in heaven wearing a gas mask as protection against rising clouds of smoke from earth and muttering, "There's only one way out — we'll have to have another flood." Elsewhere a cartoon shows the serpent in the Garden of Eden offering Adam and Eve a pack of Soviet cigarettes.

In many public places signs are posted forbidding smoking except in special rooms. Krokodil observed that the signs are widely ignored and acknowledged:

"Such a sign hangs in our office too, but you cannot see it for the smoke."

NO MORE STATIC WITH BOYFRIEND

WINNIPEG (CP) — Carole Iverson no longer is annoyed by the static she gets when visiting her boyfriend.

Work done at the Health Sciences Centre has allowed her to insulate herself from the problems created when her boyfriend's ham radio equipment triggered her artificial arm into uncontrollable action.

Miss Iverson is the first recipient in Canada, and possibly the world, of an experimental transmitter which was implanted in a muscle to control simple functions by her artificial forearm.

As yet another result of space-age technology, the ceramic-encased transmitter replaces bothersome electrode attachments to her arm, a system which could be influenced even by fluorescent lights.

The flesh acts as an insulator and effectively eliminates outside influences on the electronic impulses.

The transmitter, known as a myotelemetry implant, is the most sophisticated of its kind to be developed in Canada. Measuring about ¼-inch by ⅝-inch, it was implanted in an operation Sept. 6 by Dr. F. R. Tucker, director of the rehabilitation engineering department at the centre.

Miss Iverson, a 24-year-old honors student at University of Manitoba, was taught through therapy to control a specific muscle in the below-the-elbow stub of her right arm. Activation of the muscle stimulates the transmitter which sends impulses to the artificial limb.

dear abby

A Bad Influence

DEAR ABBY: I married a man who was married before. Phil has a problem son who is now twelve. I have a daughter and son (9 and 11) by a previous marriage. I'm not saying mine are angels, but they respect me and have never been a discipline problem. Phil adores them, and they love him, too.

Phil and I have had this son of his every weekend and every holiday. He is a difficult child. He lies and steals and I'm afraid he will be a bad influence on my children.

Now Phil wants legal custody of his son so the boy can live here with us. Phil's ex will agree gladly because she can't handle him.

Abby, if that boy lives here he will ruin my marriage. Try as I do, I can't even like him, much less love him. When Phil married me he didn't tell me I'd have to take his son.

Phil is pleading with me. He says he'll have the boy counseled. I am torn. I love Phil, but I don't want that boy living here. Can you help me?

—TORN

DEAR TORN: Don't battle it out with Phil. Get some counseling to resolve all those hostile feelings about an unfortunate, emotionally insecure (and possibly damaged) 12-year-old boy.

The only thing the lad doesn't need is to be placed in a home where another "mother" doesn't want him. He needs a lot of love. Please open up your heart to this boy and give him the same break your children have: TWO parents who love him. It could do wonders for him.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter was married at one of the loveliest weddings this town has ever seen. We had everything planned down to the last detail, and nothing was left to chance. Needless to say, it cost us a lot of money, but it was worth it.

The morning of the wedding, the minister who was to officiate phoned to say he had FOURTEEN houseguests — his three daughters and their husbands, his mother and dad, and six grandchildren — and could he bring them to the wedding, the reception and dinner as well? We had planned a sitdown dinner after the reception.

I couldn't very well tell him he couldn't, so I said yes.

Abby, have you ever heard of such nerve? I am still upset about it, and wonder if there was any way to have turned him down politely without making an enemy of him for life. I later learned that two of his daughters were not "visiting" as he said they were. They had recently moved to town. Fuming.

DEAR FUMING: I can't say whether a negative response would have made an enemy of him for life, but you could have told him that you couldn't accommodate 14 extra.

DEAR ABBY: "Nameless in Ga." wrote: "If there were a book entitled 'How to Learn to Love Unwanted Children' it would be just what I need."

Abby, what she needs is Margaretha A. Riddle's book, "The Rights of Infants." (New York: Columbia University Press, 1943) Arthur H. Prince.

DEAR ARTHUR: Your suggestion is a good one. And so is the book, but it's out of print. "Nameless" should try her public library.

CAVEAT EMPTOR:

TV Repairs Still Out of Focus

By LYNNE GORDON

This is the season that if your television set goes off the blink, you are desperate to get it back in a hurry. This can get you into trouble if you don't take the time to check out the reputation of the serviceman you choose.

Fraudulent television repairmen may be in a small minority, but there are still some things out of focus in the business. Your chances today of getting an honest repair job aren't exactly glittering, but they ARE improving.

Once you know what questions to ask, your chances of getting ripped-off will get less.

Do you know how to avoid bill padding?

Do you know when you should let your set out of your home?

Do you even know where to go for help if you feel you've been cheated?

OLD TRICKS

Watch for the flier or ad that touts an unbelievably low service call. These fliers usually pepper the low income areas when business is slow. And then they come out like the blackflies and mosquitos in the summertime.

This gimmick is used as a door opener, a way to get a man into your home. But watch out, what this guy loses on the service call, he usually makes up by bill padding or charging you for tubes he never changed.

If your job didn't bring in enough money, there are a few old tricks the fly-by-night repairman will use. One of them is to plant a NEW fault in your set in the hopes it will show up in a short time and you'll call him back for some more work.

One trick is to drop a piece of solder down inside one of the sound transformers. A few days later, the sound is distorted and needs to be fixed.

Another trick is to take a heavy black lead pencil with carbon and draw a line between two high voltage terminal points. This gradually joins the two points and causes a short circuit. This brings another call from an irate customer . . . and another service charge plus labor costs.

THE SHOP

In the past, one of the big rip-offs was to take the set to the shop without ever attempting to fix it in your home.

At that time, 80 per cent of thesets could be fixed without any trouble, right on your own premises.

But times have changed in this area with new advances. Many of us have hybrid sets — half with plug-in tubes, the other half with wired in transistors. Trouble shooting in the home becomes more difficult.

But you still should be cautious about turning over your set. Make sure the man sent to check your problem, isn't just a pick-up boy. The experienced repairman should be able to remove the back panel and give you some idea of the work to be done. And, above all, be sure you make him give you a receipt marked: "No work to be done until I am informed of the cost." If you don't have it in writing, you won't have a leg to stand on if the company goes ahead with expensive work you don't want.

Sometimes, in spite of the written orders, he may go ahead with the work, banking on the fact you'll be too embarrassed to complain. It does take a lot of guts to tell him you don't intend to pay and have him undo his work.

GET ALL PARTS

If you decide to have the set repaired, insist on an itemized bill, listing everything done to the set. Then ask for your old parts — they are yours so you can check these parts against the invoice to make sure there is no bill padding. There have been cases where consumers have been charged for a new picture tube when actually all that was done was to patch up the old one.

This is a case for the fraud squad. An experienced eye can detect the dust build-up around an old tube and usually nail the hustler.

Be sure the receipt has the name, number and address of the shop. Check it out before the set leaves your home. In some cases, the shop never existed and the man is long gone with your set, while you keep trying a phony number.

CLEAN-UP

There is no doubt the industry is trying to clean up their own image with many television service associations coming to life all over the country.

The metropolitan Toronto Television Service Association is one of the strongest, trying to police their members before the government steps in with tough legislation.

Repairmen, dealers and manufacturers feel that it's time the buck passing stopped and consumers be told honestly the problems in the industry. Consumers should be told about the expectancy of the set they are buying and how much they can expect to pay in repairs. There is no doubt that buying a cheap set doesn't allow the dealer enough profit for servicing.

Consumers should always check their warranty and understand their coverage. The warranty usually covers parts, not labor. And it's prorated. Parts are extra if they are not covered by the warranty.

You may pay about $12-$18 for a typical service call.

If the set goes to the shop for any extensive repairs, you can expect your bill to run at least $60-$80 for labor alone.

If you have any complaints, find the local television service association in your area, and ask for mediation. They are very strict with their own members.

And don't forget to notify the fraud squad if you feel cheated. Remember, keep your eyes on your television repairs — that's one picture that shouldn't be blurred.

GRASS-FED BEEF SHOPPER BARGAIN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Customers rushed Woodward's stores in the lower British Columbia mainland Wednesday as grass-finished beef went on sale at discount prices of at least 20 per cent.

Grass-finished beef has yellow fat compared with the grain-finished product, which is the standard beef in supermarkets and other meat stores.

Sirloin steak sold at $1.89 a pound compared with $2.49 a pound for a similar steak in Woodward's from a grain-fed animal, and 75 cents a pound for hamburger compared with 99 cents.

A Woodward's spokesman said the stores had a supply of more than 300 government-inspected, grass-finished steers from B.C. ranches.

Spokesmen also said the offering was to measure consumer acceptance.

The local Woodward's store is not selling the grass-finished beef, but a spokesman said if the Vancouver experiment works out it is more than likely that the Victoria store will eventually be selling it as well.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

After 67 years of talking to patients with ulcer, I have become ever more concerned with one phase of the problem, and that is the psychology of the patient.

I want to know immediately what sort of person he is — how tense, nervous, fretty, fussy, and choleric is he? I want to know if he is a man who carries within him deep resentments over many things; if he fights with people around him, or if he is much upset over every little aggravation.

Does he live life the hard way? Do sorrows which most men soon shake off keep gnawing at him for years? Do injustices rankle in his heart for years? Does he find it impossible to forgive those who have once injured him?

The next thing I want to know is what sort of job he has. Is it full of annoyances, tension, overwork and strain? Often I have a difficult time bringing relief to an attorney who gets an ulcer every time he tries a difficult case in court, or an advertising man who lives under tremendous pressure, or a man who sits with two or three jangling phones on his desk.

I also want to know if he gets along well with his boss or his immediate superior. Is he resentful toward his job?

Then I want to know how he gets along at home. Is he deeply resentful of his wife or upset over a problem child? Or is he always at swords' points with his mother-in-law?

I learned the important role emotion plays in ulcer when I read the medical writings published many years before by a very able man named Ewald. He believed that ulcer was a disease of nervous origin, and my experience with ulcer patients ever since has proven that that is true.

I have always been impressed with the fact that so often an ulcer patient who had traveled across the country to see me said, "You know, a strange thing has happened. The day I locked the door of my office, I lost all my pain and discomfort."

One day a man came complaining of a terrible ulcer which caused him to walk the floor night after night in agony. I immediately sent him to the hospital and told my assistant to do his best to give the fellow some relief.

The next day I heard the man had slept like a baby all night without any sedative. He continued to do this for the 10 nights which he spent in the hospital. On quizzing him, I found that he was in a very difficult business. He was constantly fighting a labor organization led by racketeers, and was often in phsyical danger from gangsters who threatened to kill him for breaking into their territory.

To me it was astounding that within a few hours he could be perfectly comfortable, with no symptom at all of his bad ulcer.

Another man came, pale with anemia and worn down by nightly pain. For two months he had been fighting a nasty strike with a great deal of violence in the picket lines.

I immediately sent him to the hospital, expecting to have a difficult time controlling his pain. Within an hour, one of the nurses called me to say that the man, on arriving at the hospital, had had a temper tantrum and had left the place. Because I didn't see him again I concluded he had left town.

Three weeks later, on an evening train, there he was with his wife, looking like a new man. When I asked him how he was, he explained he had decided to stay at a hotel rather than the hospital. There he could have his wife with him, and he could get better food than at the hospital.

He said, "I followed your advice and telephoned my manager not to write me anything about the business unless the strikers burned the plant down. Since then I have been perfectly comfortable."

No Savings on Diet Pop

TORONTO (CP) — The chemical additive saccharin should be saving diet-pop fans money, but that's not always the story at checkout counters.

The cost of two pounds of sugar in a case of 24 10-ounce tins or bottles of regular soft drinks has gone to $1.25 from 25 cents in the last year.

The cost of saccarin remains at half a cent a case because so little saccharin goes so far.

Many retail stores, however, are selling diet drinks at the same price as regular despite the fact that diet has been cheaper at the wholesale level for a month.

John Morgan, general manager of Pic-A-Pop Eastern Ltd., says stores increasing the price of diet drinks at the same rate as regular pop are "ripping off the public."

Philip Campbell, general manager of Seven-Up Ontario Ltd., says Seven-Up left diet brands cheaper than regular brands when rising sugar prices forced a wholesale price increase in regular pop Oct. 7 but "dealers didn't always pass it on."

Diet Pepsi-Cola is the biggest seller of all diet drinks in Canada. The price is 25 cents cheaper wholesale but some retailers sell diet at the same price as regular Pepsi.

Those consumers who can purchase diet pop at a lower price than regular pop are saving and at the same time are pushing the sale of diet pop to record levels.

"Diet is the fastest-growing segment of the entire soft drink business," Campbell said.

REOX - For The Treatment of Respiratory Distress
Physicians and hospital authorities have been made aware of the unique advantages of the Reox oxygen separator in the treatment of respiratory ailments.
The Reox 2500 System — What It Is And How It Operates.
The Reox oxygen separator extracts nitrogen, carbon dioxide and water vapour from the air, while permitting the passage of almost pure oxygen. By this means a constant supply of oxygen-enriched air is maintained for an indefinite period. The air reaching the patient through a nasal canula is approximately 90% oxygen, with 4.5% argon and the remainder nitrogen. The system, housed in an attractive looking cabinet, operates on standard 110V power or can be adapted to suit other power requirements.
For The Treatment Of Emphysema, Chronic Bronchitis, Asthma, Bronchiectasis, Cystic Fibrosis
Previously sufferers from severe and chronic respiratory ailments had to be hospitalized for long periods of time. With the introduction of the Reox 2500 unit, the patient can live a more normal life at home. The apparatus is so simple anybody can use it.

Driver Immunity Asked In Computer Foul-Up

Complete immunity should be granted drivers who fail to renew their drivers' certificates because of a computer foul-up in the Insurance Corporation of B.C., Liberal MLA Garde Gardom (Vancolver-Point-Grey) said Thursday.

The renewal system for ICBC drivers certificates has broken down, said Gardom, and drivers are not being reminded of the expiry date for their certificates.

The penalty for driving without a valid certificate is $250 and a possible 10 demerit points.

Gardom said he knew of at least one case where a young man's certificate expired, he received no reminder, was stopped by a policeman and charged and will appear in court next week facing a heavy penalty.

"It's a bad plan, its been badly administered and the government should grant these people total immunity until the thing is cleared up," said Gardom.

Apparently some people are receiving renewal notices but the Motor Vehicle Branch office is crowded with people who haven't been reminded and have found their certificates expired.

The certificates must be renewed once a year on the driver's birthday.

Asked about the problem in the house Thursday, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said he would take the matter under advisement.

Oil 'Way Out' Feasible

Premier Barrett said Thursday a federal study vindicates his "Way Out" proposal for transporting Arctic oil south by rail car.

"A $1.5 million study has confirmed that our proposal — The Way Out — is completely feasible and is a sensible economic alternative to the piepline across Alaska and the tanker route down our coast," he said.

The complex study, prepared by Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways, was released in Ottawa by Transport Minister Jean Marchand.

While concluding that a rail line to carry Arctic oil and gas to southern markets is feasible, the study estimates the rail line would cost $3.2 to $14.4 billion.

The study does not contain any cost comparisons with the alternative pipeline-tanker routes because studies on capital cost and efficiency of pipelines have not been made.

It does say, however, that the rail proposal is feasible, economically viable and "offers operating performance comparable to suggested Arctic pipeline systems."

Although Barrett was responding only to press reports on the study and has not seen the report, he said it appeared the $3.2 billion figure is one for his own Way Out proposal.

"The $3.2 figure is in line and even lower than what estimated in The Way Out. I think now it's too low — it would be closer to $4 to $4.2 billion," he said.

The Way Out scheme, which Barrett first proposed to Ottawa and the United States in the spring of 1973, involves moving the oil by rail through Alaska and the Yukon to Lower Post, B.C. where it would move on to the U.S. through existing B.C. rail lines.

Barrett said he believed the $14 billion price tag would be for rail line to connect the Mackenzie Valley, the Delta and Prudhoe Bay into one rail system.

Such a large expenditure would be impossible in the short term, he said, and would have to be spread out.

Barrett said he regrets that the federal government originally "dismissed our concept in such an offhand manner" because the U.S. government was initially interested in the plan.

"I'd think responsible politicians faced with this new evidence would want to discuss the whole thing and say perhaps rail is the best way in long term of moving Alaska oil," he said.

The U.S. has already started construction of a pipeline to join a tanker route from Alaska to the U.S. west coast but Barrett said he did not believe it is too late for his proposal.

There is a shortage of steel, he said, and the pipeline material could always be used elsewhere.

The rail system would be of much more advantage than a "one-shot capital investment in a pipeline," he said, and would help open up a new frontier.

No Construction Cutback Planned

B.C. plans no anti-inflationary cutback in capital construction, Premier Barrett confirmed Thursday.

Liberal MLA Gordon Gibson (North Vancouver-Capilano) asked Barrett if he intended to follow the lead of Manitoba which recently announced a multi-million dollar cutback in construction as a means of fighting inflation.

Barrett said his government is committed to capital construction for schools and hospitals because of neglect by the previous Socred administration and he planned no changes.

The premier also told the house he has not yet appointed a commission to review electoral boundaries but that there will be a new electoral map before the next election.

Fund Growing

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Way campaign in the Lower Mainland reached 64.3 per cent of its $4.75 million goal Wednesday. The annual drive has collected $3,056,401 and a spokesman said the residential canvass has reached 92.1 per cent of its goal. The campaign will end Nov. 15.

Officer Buried

DELTA (CP) — More than 1,200 people — 500 of them uniformed policemen from a score of forces and detachment — attended the funeral Thursday of slain Delta municipal police staff sergeant Ronald Edward McKay.

SEX BARRIERS HEAVY ISSUE

The B.C. legislature can expect some radical changes in tradition next spring as the Speaker moves against sex discrimination in the legislative corridors.

Rosemary Brown (NDP-Vancouver Burrard) said she has received assurances from Speaker Gordon Dowding that changes in staffing policy will be brought in next year.

Dowding responded to a question from Brown about the lack of female attendants on duty in the hallways, by issuing a list of legislative assembly staff.

But all 24 attendants are male.

Among the caucus staffs, 33 are female stenographers and secretaries while five are male assistants.

Women also dominate the staff at the legislative dining room by 10 to four.

Brown said she is not at all happy with the statistics since the government should be a model employer.

"I don't want to embarrass the Speaker but the government should be an example for other employers," she said, adding that she also thinks there should be male as well as female tour guides at the buildings.

Job requirements for attendants, for example, may involve some physical standards, she said.

"But if you have a weight requirement of say, 300 pounds, why can't you find a woman who weighs 300 pounds?

"By the end of last session I weighed 300 pounds," she added.

SUGAR 'STREAMLINE' URGED

Health Minister Dennis Cocke called on all members of the legislature to "tighten a couple of notches in their belts" and cut down on their sugar intake.

He said advice to consumers to boycott sugar earlier this week by Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young was "right on."

"It's been called a killer, especially in England where it's been proven it leads to chronic artery disease and cholesterol," said the minister in charge of the province's health.

"And it's time to streamline, he told the house, which sports a hefty number of large waistlines.

Young advised the boycott because of spiralling cost of sugar.

Late Fund Claims in Limbo

Transport Minister Bob Strachan said Thursday the Insurance Corporation of B.C. can give no assistance to persons awaiting traffic accident settlements from the now-defunct Traffic Victims Indemnity Fund.

Strachan advised those awaiting payment to seek legal advice. "I can't give it to them."

Attorney General Alex Macdonald has said the courts may decide whether ICBC or the private companies will pay accident claims.

Strachan was referring to an estimated 125 persons who had not filed for claims before March 1, 1974, when TVIF went out of business.

The matter was referred to in question period by Liberal MLA Garde Gardom (Vancouver-Point Grey).

Gardom said under the Motor Vehicle Act the TVIF — a fund established and maintained by private car insurers to pay personal injury claims — was legally liable for claims.

Persons who applied after March, said Gardom, were told by TVIF, the organization was unable to make compensation and ICBC should be contacted for help.

NDP SUES USED CAR DEALER FOR $800

In a precedent-setting move, the provincial government is taking a Victoria used-car dealer to court for having "engaged in a deceptive act or practice."

Palm Motors Ltd. is being charged under the Trade Practices Act, passed by the B.C. legislature during the spring session.

The charge has been laid on behalf of a "consumer," William Switley of Saanich, by the consumer services department's director of trade practices.

Trade Practices Director Michael Hansen confirmed Wednesday that a summons was served on Palm Motors earlier in the day and was registered in the small claims court.

It is the first time the provincial government has enforced a section of the Trade Practices Act and also the first case in Canada in which a government has taken legal action on behalf of a consumer.

The summons charges Palm Motors with having sold a defective car to Switley on or about June 11.

Under section 20 of the Trade Practices Act, the director is claiming, on behalf of Switley, $259 for repair of the car's transmission, plus $741 "punitive or exemplary damages."

Palm Motors has 10 days in which to pay the damages, or file a counter claim.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 38-year-old man described by Judge William Ostler as a "menace on the highways" will spend six months in jail for impaired driving convictions and failing to appear in provincial court earlier on one of them.

Nirmal Singh Bains, 1034 Wychbury, was also banned from driving for two years.

The court was told Bains had previously been convicted for impaired driving June 3.

The two cases before court Thursday concerned impaired driving on Esquimalt Road, one on Aug. 31, the other Wednesday. Bains had previously failed to appear in court on the earlier charge.

He had been in accidents on both occasions.

About $1,000 damage was caused in the Aug. 31 accident to Bain's car and $3,000 to the car he hit at the Catharine intersection.

Ostler told Bains it was miraculous he had not killed someone.

A young man who Ostler said needed treatment, counselling and discipline in a structured setting was given a six-month definite and 10-month indeterminate jail term for six break-ins committed in October.

Two of the break-ins occurred the same day at the Cedar Hill Golf Club.

Rhodes, along with a juvenile companion, entered the premises Oct. 19 at 3:30 a.m. by prying open a window, then stole cash, cigarettes and candy worth $84.

They returned at 11:30 p.m., pried open another window, and stole $8 in cash, cigarettes, beer and sandwiches.

In three of the other break-ins Rhodes, and either one or two juveniles, stole $226 from service stations.

The sixth break-in was at Hillside Dairy Queen, 1605 Hillside, where he stole eight hot dogs.

David Richard McAleer, 21, of 1235 Balmoral, who pleaded guilty to breaking into two houses Oct. 7, was given a six-month jail sentence and put on 18 months' probation.

McAleer stole $23 from a wallet in a house on Rockland, which he had entered through an unlocked door, and another $2.40 from a jar in a Balmoral Road house, entered through a window.

Ostler recommended McAleer, who had two previous burglary convictions, serve his time in a forestry camp.

Riders Look At Ex-Colt

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League have announced that former Baltimore Colt quarterback Tom Pierantozzi will begin a five-day tryout with the club.

The 23-year-old quarterback, cut by the National Football League team, is not expected to play for the Ottawa club this season.

The Riders have been searching for a quarterback in the event regular Rick Cassata doesn't sign with the team next season. Cassata, who shares quarterback duties with Jerry Keeling, is playing out his option.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

As a general principle, declarer should gather in the adversely-held trumps as quickly as possible. When he doesn't, he runs the risk that one of his winners might be trumped.

However, numerous situations arise where it is imperative that "more pressing business" be taken care of before the trump suit is attacked. Today's deal, which came up in a tournament, is a case in point. Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	3 ♦	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	6 ♦	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♣.

Had West opened any suit except clubs, declarer would have had an easy time enroute to the fulfillment of his contract. He would have attacked the trump suit immediately; and with the favorable location of the king and queen, his only loser would have been a trump trick. But West found the only lead that gave the declarer a few uncomfortable moments: a club.

Declarer had no choice but to win West's opening club lead with the board's ace. And, of course, he couldn't now attack the trump suit, since the defenders, when they won a trick with either the king or queen, would cash a club truck. Thus, declarer had to get rid of his losing club before playing trumps.

At trick two a heart was led to South's king, after which the jack of hearts was led and overtaken by dummy's queen. Next came the ace of hearts, upon which South discarded his losing club.

The jack of diamonds was then led, East perforce covered with the queen, and South took the trick with his ace. The ten of diamonds was now played back, East's king winning. East then returned his remaining heart, in the hope that West had a trump high enough to overruff South. But South ruffed this lead with the diamond nine. He next played the eight of diamonds, picking up West's seven-spot. The rest of the tricks belonged to him.

Of course declarer ran the risk, when he played three rounds of hearts, that one of the defenders might ruff. But there really was no alternative line of play that offered any hope.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"The approximate number we sold?" said Charlie. "I can give you the exact number."

Ben shook his head. "One of your figure gimmicks, eh? Let's have it then."

"Okay, but first here's how," replied Charlie. "If you shift the final two digits to the front in their same order you multiply it by three, and it's the smallest number that works that way."

What was the number?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: RACES was 12680 (even).

COLLEGIANS CLAIM TRICKERY

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Two former Jersey City State college football stars have sued the World Football League for $8 million, charging they were tricked into throwing away their college eligibility for WFL contracts and then dismissed without fair tryouts.

The two separate $4 million suits were filed by Joseph DiVincenzo, 22, and Bruce L. Nasziemento, 21, who signed WFL contracts after their junior years, but were placed on waivers before training camps began.

DiVincenzo had signed a one-year, $15,000 contract with Detroit Wheels. Nasziemento had signed a two-year $32,000 contract with Philadelphia Bell.

Greenhouses Have Winter Use

The home gardener's greenhouse needs care in winter if it is to repay the use of the ground it stands on. Allowing a glass structure to remain empty for months seems a poor way of paying for its cost.

Even though unheated, a well built glasshouse, or greenhouse as it is more often termed, is remarkably snug in winter except when a cold wind howls.

This does not apply to an unheated plastic house because plastic has no heat retaining properties.

Without heat, an open ground bed (not beneath a bench) can be made to grow lettuce and endive by sowing a few seeds now in a pot or small seedbox.

They will be germinating on the bench while you prepare the soil in the ground bed. Also sow a half-dozen parsley seeds; or you may have a plant or two in the garden which you can lift without disturbing their roots.

Parsley just won't grow if you expose its roots or cut some of them off when lifting.

The soil will need to be removed from the greenhouse bed if it is hard and compacted. Take it out to about 10 inches in depth in the area which you intend planting.

Dump the soil outside where it will be reconditioned by air and weather and being mixed with other garden soil and humus during another season.

Replace it with some of your best soil from a compost heap. Rough, half composted material can go at the bottom of the dug out portion, but see that the subsoil is broken up to allow drainage. Keep your best soil for the top inches.

This ground bed scheme needs glass down to soil level to allow low winter sun to reach the plants. Otherwise use bench beds.

You can also sow round seeded peas and broad beans in a ground bed. Both are commonly grown by sowing outdoors in November, but you will have the advantage of greenhouse shelter from wind and excessive rain.

Your cropping will be a month earlier than outdoors; a rough estimate about Easter you might get a picking of either peas or beans, or even both.

In a large box or tub of good soil in the unheated greenhouse you can also raise a few new potatoes to go with your peas and beans. Choose a handful of the tubers you buy for cooking — ones showing strong white growth buds.

Cut them into pieces and let the cut surfaces dry on the bench for two or three days. Plant with two inches of soil over them.

Onion seeds sown in a seedbox can either be transplanted indoors for young green onions in late winter, or set outdoors for later use.

For lovely color, put a dozen crocus corms into two pots, and a dozen anemone corms into four pots. Use good sandy compost, put the pots on a bench where sun will reach them. They will make roots and sprout just around New Year's.

If freezing weather threatens to penetrate the greenhouse shelter, which it will do in a bad spell, put the pots either into boxes of dry soil or peatmoss, or into cartons well lined with thick sections of dry newspapers.

Cover at night with a further complete newspaper section, removing to allow air and light during the day.

According to the placement of the greenhouse, there may be small areas in it where it is less cold. These you will discover.

A maximum-minimum registering thermometer is really needed to let you know how low the temperature goes during the night and how high in the day when you may be away. Thus you can regulate the ventilation and protection.

Even the vegetables will benefit from covering with papers on a night when hard frost is expected.

Ventilation and watering must be critically balanced to harmonize with the outside elements which may be somewhat unfriendly to young growing plants during winter.

But it can be done and you will be the beneficiary.

I Killed . . . U.K. Surgeon Confesses

LONDON (UPI) — To the strains of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Dr. George Mair held the hand of his middle-aged woman patient. He then slipped a hypodermic needle into a vein and killed her.

She was only one of many patients he killed deliberately during a long career as a surgeon in hospitals throughout England and Scotland, Mair admits.

The 60-year-old retired physician made the disclosure about euthanasia — "mercy killing" — today in his autobiography, Confessions of a Surgeon.

He knows he risks prosecution for murder even though such actions were always at the request of the patient, he says.

Mair, now devotes his time to writing and lecturing.

He can't remember how many persons he killed for mercy, "but it is not a small number," he says.

"I know many people will not agree and say it is murder," he adds. "I do not regard it as such."

The killings began soon after he became resident surgical officer at Warneford hospital in the English Midlands in 1939, he claims.

Some of his colleagues there at the time also killed patients suffering advanced malignancies.

"Death certificates were issued without question, and there seemed no problems with the coroner," he says. "The actual mercy killings went according to plan."

He gives the following account of the Beethoven "mercy killing" of a woman in her middle 40s with only months to live:

"She explained that her house was now in order, her will organized and that she had seen her family with friends while she was still looking reasonably well — she had her hair dressed for the occasion.

"There was nothing left for her to do but die.

"She wished me to take her into a side room, lay on certain music from a favorite disc and then, when she gave me the signal, allow her to go out using a suitable injection.

"I did exactly as she wished, and she squeezed my hand while listening to the second movement of Beethoven's Ninth. I then slipped the needle into a large vein and gave her an enormous dose of suitable drugs.

"She slept swiftly and died in less than an hour. Her last words were whispered, but clear: 'Thank you so very, very much'."

The Honeymoon Is Over

I'll take you higher Sly Stone sings to his fans . . . apparently, he only brought his wife of five months, former model Kathy Silva, down. Their nuptials, celebrated before 21,000 people at Madison Square Garden in June is ending before an audience of one — a divorce court judge in Santa Monica, Calif. Kathy is seeking a total of $15,450 a month from the rock star whose annual income is estimated at about $3 million a year.

He'd Sell Apartment Block . . . For Only $10

VANCOUVER — A landlord, has offered the provincial government his $395,000, 21-suite West End apartment block for $10.

Keith Shepherd, who owns the Bay West apartments, said his offer is a protest againt the government's decsion to limit rent increases to 10.6 per cent.

The building made news in October, 1959 when movie star Errol Flynn died in the penthouse suite.

Gross monthly income from the property is about $2,700, against mortgage payments of $3,246. Added to that, he said, are soaring maintenance costs, Shepherd said. He would need at least a 20 per cent rent increase to make his ownership worthwhile, he added.

NEW YORK — A New York doctor claimed the protection of the Fifth Amendment against incriminating himself Thursday in refusing to answer whether he and Lady Caroline Townshend were lovers. Dr. Sheldon Glabman was being questioned by a lawyer for multi-millionaire Edgar Bronfman, president of Distillers Corp. - Seagram's Ltd., who is seeking to annul his marriage to the English socialite.

Bronfman is seeking an annulment of his 11-month marriage to Lady Caroline on the ground that the marriage was not consummated. The trial continues.

VIENNA, Austria — Former actress Helene Thimig, 85, widow of stage director Max Reinhardt, died Thursday in hospital, apparently of a heart failure. In the United States, where she lived from 1938 to 1946, she assisted her husband with the Hollywood workshop he founded and appeared in several American films.

RIO DE JANIERO — Pale and weak from loss of blood, Paulo da Silva Arantes told of what he said was a run-in with a knife-wielding voodoo spirit that "chopped my right hand off." Arantes said he makes a living by stealing candles used as offerings to voodoo entities.

As he was about to grab a candle in a cemetery recently, he said a large figure appeared. "He said he was an exu cavejra (a demon-like spirit that inhabits cemeteries), and before I could apologize, he took out a large knife and chopped my right hand off."

HOUSTON — A father charged with the Halloween candy poisoning of his 8-year-old son says he is innocent and stunned anyone would believe he could do it, according to his minister.

Rev. Jimmy Jones visited Ronald O'Bryan in jail Thursday.

"He didn't understand how anybody could think he could do that to his son," Jones said. "He completely attested to his innocence and could not understand why the police picked him up."

LOS ANGELES — A funeral service is scheduled on Saturday for Stafford Repp, who played Chief O'Hara in the Batman television series.

Repp, 56, appeared in more than 600 television shows during a 30-year acting career.

CHEYENNE WELLS, Colo. — City businesses had their burglar alarm system turned off after election day because Sheriff Bill Howard voted out of office after 22 years, said he didn't want to babysit it anymore. Four hours after the system linking the sheriff's home with 20 business firms was shut off, burglars broke into the Cheyenne Wells Lumber Co. and fled with hardware, tools and other items.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor have been charged with damaging a house Burton rented last year while he filmed The Klansmen. A claim filed Thursday in the municipal court at Chico said the couple — then married — caused $2,944 damage during their six-week stay in the house.

OTTAWA — The Ontario Progressive Conservative Party was defeated for the fourth consecutive time in a byelection when Liberal Paul Taylor clinched a narrow win over the New Democratic candidate in the Carleton East byelection Thursday.

Taylor, 35, Parliamentary bureau chief of Newsradio Ltd., is confident that the 236-vote margin of his victory will be sustained in a recount requested by NDP candidate Evelyn Gigantes.

Ottawa Mayor Pierre Benoit, a Liberal who joined the Conservative party two months ago and who was hailed as the early favorite, finished third.

Perjury Charges Switched

EDMONTON (CP) — Charges of perjury and making a false statement under oath were withdrawn against the past president of the Alberta Association of Social Workers Thursday, but seven new charges — two of them duplicating the ones that were dropped — were laid by the crown in provincial court.

Percy Royal now faces five charges of perjury and two of making false statements. The five perjury charges stem from statements made by the accused about his academic training when he appeared as a witness in a trial involving custody.

The false assertion charges deal with statements about his academic training made under oath.

2 CONS STILL GO HUNGRY

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Two B.C. men charged with kidnapping a police detective reaffirmed their determination to continue a hunger strike when they appeared in magistrates court Thursday before Judge J. R. O. Archambault.

The men, Theodore Wilson, 28, and Wayne King, 23, have lost about 12 pounds since beginning the hunger strike a week ago, in protest of treatment at the Saskatchewan Correctional Centre. They claim they are kept in unclean cells, and given insufficient exercise.

They were arrested after a high-speed chase Oct. 1 between Prince Albert and Borden, Sask., during which a police constable was wounded, a detective abducted, and shots fired into a helicopter.

Court denied an application for bail by King because of charges in other provinces outstanding against him. Wilson was remanded in custody until Nov. 15.

Indians Slam Tax Exemption

THE PAS, Man. (CP) — The chief of The Pas Indian Band says Manitoba's method of administering a sales tax exemption for treaty Indians is "impractical, cumbersome and practically useless."

Chief Gordon Lathlin said the exemption, which is good only for registered treaty Indians living on reserves, does nothing for the thousands of treaty Indians living off the reserves.

Bitterest pill to swallow was that building materials are not included in the exemption, he added.

Moose Jaw Gets Plant

MOOSE JAW (CP) — A plant to manufacture a plastic alternative to paint used in highway markings will be established here by Unileit Canada Road Markings Ltd., a West German firm, and will begin production in early 1975.

Industry Minister Kim Thoron and Karl Heinz Schrieber, Unileit president, said at a joint news conference the new company will be located at the Canasphere Industries Ltd. plant to manufacture thermal plastic.

The initial phase will involve development of testing for road-marking materials and creation of markets.

Schreiber said following successful completion of the "pilot production plant," a separate manufacturing plant employing about 100 people will be built.

Today's Highlights

Emergency, on 8 at 7 and 5 at 8. Mark Spitz and his wife Suzy make their dramatic debut in this story about a married couple who call in the paramedic team when a gun accidentally discharges, injuring the pregnant wife. (60 mins.)

Cricket in Times Square, on 4 at 8. A cartoon special about the misadventures of a cricket named Chester, whose chirping sounds like violin music. (30 mins.)

Evening at Symphony, on 9 at 8:30. Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra and soprano Beverly Sills sings the role of Zerbinetta, in this concert performance of the Richard Strauss opera, Ariadne auf Naxos. The story combines characters from the Greek myth of Ariadne with a troup of commedia dell'arte clowns. (90 mins.)

World at War, on 12 at 8:30. Desert—the war in North Africa takes the best part of three years to resolve (1940-1943) and is fought and refought over the same 600 miles of desert, between Alexandria in Egypt and Benghazi in Cyrenaica, before Montgomery's 'Desert Rats' beat Rommel's Africa Corps at El Alamein. Film and sound interviews with surviving combatants are used to describe the difficulties of war against heat, flies and sand. (60 mins.)

Carol Burnett Show, on 7 and 12 at 10. Carol and her regulars welcome comedian John Byner and comic actor Kenneth Mars to tonight's show. (60 mins.)

Inheritance, on 9 at 10. A documentary on a vanishing breed — the American craftsman — filmed in rural New York State. Among the artisans profiled are a 90-year-old tinsmith and an 87-year-old blacksmith, both still working at their trade. (60 mins.)

Movies

The Ladies Man (xx), on 5 at 1:30. Jerry Lewis plays a confirmed bachelor who gets a job as an assistant in a girls' boarding house, in this 1961 comedy co-starring Helen Traubel and Pat Stanley.

Dragonwyck (xx), on 13 at 1:30. A 1946 house of horrors melodrama set in a gloomy Gothic mansion, starring Vincent Price and Gene Tierney.

Heidi (xxx), on 11 at 2. The youngsters will enjoy this 1937 adaptation of the children's classic starring Shirley Temple in the title role.

Not With My Wife You Don't (xx), on 5 at 3:30. A good cast (Tony Curtis, George C. Scott, Carroll O'Connor and Virna Lisi) highlights this otherwise routine 1966 comedy about the neglected wife of an army officer who is reunited with an old flame.

Dollars for a Fast Gun (x), on 13 at 3:30. Standard 1968 Italian-made western about a young widow trying to break a rancher's control over the town's water supply, with an unknown American cast.

Checkpoint, on 4 at 5. No rating available on this 1957 English-made drama about intrigue and murder on the Grand Prix racing circuit, starring Anthony Steele.

They Came to Cordura (xx), on 7 at 6. A dry, slow-moving 1959 tale about six soldiers and one woman who make an arduous trek across impossible terrain (circa 1916) to reach a military outpost. A good cast (Gary Cooper, Rita Hayworth, Van Heflin) is totally wasted.

Brian's Song (xxxx), on 4 at 8:30. Five Emmys and a Peabody Award went to this 1971 drama that tells the true story of former Chicago Bears running back Gale Sayers and his teammate Brian Piccolo, who died of cancer in 1970. There's plenty of football action but the real story centres on the growing friendship between the Bears' first interracial roommates. James Caan and Billy Dee Williams star.

The Lonely Profession (xxx), on 2 at 9. A better-than-average 1969 TV crime-drama with an excellent performance by Harry Guardino as a small-time detective who gets involved in a heavy case. A host of stars including Dina Merrill, Dean Jagger, Jack Carter, Barbara McNair and Fernando Lamas do very well in supporting roles, and the slick dialogue and action plus sharp editing keep this story moving at a fast clip. There's also a dandy surprise ending. (Post-poned from an earlier date.)

Winning (xxx), on 5 at 9. Film footage of the harrowing 17-car crash that marred the opening of the 1968 Indianapolis 500 highlights this 1969 melodrama that centers on the off-track rivalry of two race drivers in love with the same woman. Paul Newman shows his prowess as a race-car driver and the supporting cast includes Joanne Woodward, Robert Wagner and Richard Thomas (The Waltons).

The Godfather (xxxx), on 6 and 8 at 9. A coup for Canadian TV (shown in the U.S. next week) is the television premiere of Hollywood's all-time box office hit, the 1972 movie adaptation of Mario Puzo's best-seller. Set in the 1940s, the story focuses on the Corleones, a fictional Mafia family headed by a strong-willed patriarch — the Godfather — and the family's bloody struggle for power among organized-crime factions. Powerful acting (Marlon Brando — Oscar winner for Best Actor), brilliant direction (Francis Ford Coppola) and a fine screenplay (Puzo and Coppola) combine to paint a compelling portrait of family pride, broad corruption and remorseless violence. Recommended (but due to excessive violence) not for the whole family.

Frozen Alive (x), on 13 at 9. An English-dubbed, 1964 German-made sci-fi drama about two scientists who become involved in a criminal case while conducting experiments to deep-freeze humans.

The FBI Story: Alvin Karpis, Public Enemy Number One, on 7 at 11. This 1974 drama is first in a projected six-to-nine made for TV crime-dramas dealing with famous FBI cases, to be telecast through 1976. In tonight's story, Robert Foxworth stars as the Depression-era gangster Alvin Karpis, in a re-creation of his four-and-a-half year string of murders, kidnappings and bank robberies. Harris Yulin plays FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover, who embarks on a personal crusade to catch the U.S.'s most wanted criminal. An excellent supporting cast includes Eileen Heckart, Kay Lenz, Anne Francis and David Wayne.

Cloak and Dagger (xxx), on 11 at 11. A well-acted 1946 espionage melodrama, about a university professor working on a secret mission for the OSS inside Nazi Germany, starring Gary Cooper, Lilli Palmer and Robert Alda.

New Invisible Man (x), on 13 at 11. An English-dubbed 1960 Mexican-made thriller.

A Farewell to Arms (xxx), on 12 at 11:30 and 5 at 11:45. Jennifer Jones and Rock Hudson star in this 1957 re-make of Ernest Hemminway's classic novel about the First World War romance between a British nurse and an American ambulance driver. Not as good as the 1932 Helen Hayes-Gary Cooper version, but still interesting.

Above and Beyond (xxx), on 4 at 11:30. An absorbing 1953 drama about Colonel Tibbetts, the officer who piloted the plane which dropped the atom bomb on Hiroshima. Robert Taylor gives a fine performance as the conscience-stricken Tibbetts, and receives good support from Eleanor Parker as his wife.

Winning (xxx), on 6 at 12:50. (See earlier this evening for details.)

Pete 'n' Tillie (xxx), on 8 at 1 a.m. Carol Burnett and Walter Matthau star in this 1972 comedy-drama that tells a bittersweet story of a 30-ish spinster and a wise-cracking bachelor, whose slow-starting romance blossoms into an 11-year marriage — that begins to come apart at the seams. The story follows their battles, the reconciliations, and their eventual compromises in order to make their relationship work.

The Barefoot Contessa (xxx), on 8 at 3 a.m. Humphrey Bogart, Ava Gardner and Edmond O'Brien star in this 1954 drama that opens at a funeral of an unhappy glamor girl, as her friends recall her beginnings, her rise to stardom, her loneliness and her tragedy. O'Brien won an Oscar for his role as a loud-mouthed press agent, and he deserved it.

Caesar and Cleopatra (xxx), on 6 at 3:20 a.m. A 1945 British-made film version of George Bernard Shaw's satire about the aging Roman conqueror and the beautiful but slightly addle-brained beauty of the Nile, starring Vivien Leigh and Claude Rains.

TV Premiere The Godfather

In a Canadian television coup, Channels 6 and 8 will televise The Godfather, on Saturday at 9 p.m. Starring Marlon Brando in the title role (he refused the Oscar for Best Actor), this 1972 box-office hit, tells the story of the fictional Mafia Corleone family and its bloody struggle for power among organized crime factions in the 1940s' Shown here are Brando and Lenny Montana in a scene from the film.

CARTOON SPECIAL — Chester, the very likeable cricket (whose chirping sounds like violin music) finds himself in the middle of Manhattan and befriended by a loveable mouse, Tucker, in an animated version of the children's classic, The Cricket in Times Square, to be telecast on Saturday at 8 p.m. on Channel 4.

ABC Drops Two Day Shows

NEW YORK — The ABC television network said Wednesday it is dropping Dec. 23 two daytime shows — The Newlywed Game, a nine-season veteran; and a one-season show, The Girl in My Life.

It said it is putting two new game shows, The Money Maze and Showdown, in its weekly daytime schedule then and also is changing the starting time of one game show ($10,000 Pyramid) and the format of another.

Today's Highlights

A Horse Called Princess Louise, on 2 at 4. The true story of a wounded filly found by members of the 8th Princess Louise's New Brunswick Hussars in the middle of an attack on the Gothic Line at Coriano Ridge, Italy, in 1944. The Canadian soldiers adopted the pony as their mascot and after a long and useful life, Princess Louise died last summer at Camp Gagetown. (30 mins.)

World At War, on 7 at 7. Tonight: Barbarossa — the events preceding the Nazi invasion of Russia, with film clips showing Russia's seizure of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. Also, Rumania and Hungary join the Axis. (30 mins.)

Walsh's Animals, on 7 at 9. Debut of a news series hosted by John Walsh, internationally recognized champion of humane treatment of animals. Tonight he looks at "man's best friend" — the dog. (30 mins.)

Irish Rovers, on 2 and 6 at 7:30. Tonight's guest is Vera Lynn, the inspiring woman who sang for millions of troops and civilians during the Second World War. (30 mins.)

The Waltons, on 2 and 6 at 8. Walter Cronkite's daughter Kathy makes her TV acting debut as a class-mate in John-Boy's writing class, in tonight's episode of this popular series. (60 mins.)

McMillan and Wife, on 5 at 8:30. Singer-guitarist Jose Feliciano, Barry Sullivan and Donna Mills guest star in tonight's episode that finds Mac (Rock Hudson) enlisting his wife's (Susan Saint James) help to investigate the murder of his old friend, an intelligence agent involved in top-secret work. (2 hrs.)

Masterpiece Theatre, on 9 at 8:30. Part 2 of the new 13-part, Upstairs, Downstairs, finds the family in a somber mood. The absence of Lady Marjorie leaves many of the household affairs in the hands of Miss Forrest, the secretary who is befriended by James Bellamy, and resented by the servants. (60 mins.)

Medical Centre, on 8 at 9. Tonight's episode deals with an emotional (and currently topical) subject — breast-cancer surgery and contains a strong message: that cancer victims, although cured, suffer from discrimination in employment. The story centres on a widow (portrayed by Shirley Knight Hopkins) who undergoes a radical mastectomy. The operation is successful and she goes home, only to find that her boy friend is aloof and her daughter repelled. She also finds that a promised promotion is no longer hers — and neither is her old job. To restore her shattered self-respect, she sues her former employer. (60 mins.)

CTV Inquiry, on 8 at 10. The Big Put-On, an investigation of the cosmetic industry. Among the products considered from the point of view of advertising claims, and possible harmful effects are: lipsticks, mascara, face creams, soaps, bath preparations, and hair sprays, colorings and shampoos. (60 mins.)

Movies

The Screaming Woman, on 8 at 2:30. No rating available on this 1972 made-for-TV thriller about a woman mental patient trying to prove someone is buried alive on her estate. Cast includes Olivia de Havilland and Joseph Cotten.

Jesse James Meets Frankenstein's Daughter (x), on 11 at 2:30. A 1966 thriller with a self-explanatory title.

The Night of the Generals (xx), on 7 at 4. Despite an all-star cast (Peter O'Toole, Omar Sharif, Christopher Plummer, Joanna Pettet), this 1967 film about the Nazi generals of Hitler's regime and the repercussions of a couple of prostitutes' murders, emerges as an overlong melodrama. O'Toole is miscast as a sadistic Nazi general who covers his traces well until he is haunted by his past deeds some twenty years later.

The Quiet Man (xxx), on 11 at 4. John Ford won an Academy Award for his fine direction in this 1952 character study of an Irish-American boxer who returns to Ireland to settle, only to fall in love with a fiery colleen. An excellent cast includes John Wayne, Maureen O'Hara, Barry Fitzgerald and Ward Bond.

The Longest Hunt (x), on 13 at 4. Routine 1968 Italian-made western starring Keenan Wynn as a rancher who hires a gunman to bring back his outlaw son.

Dr. No. (xxxx), on 4 at 9. This 1962 British-made adventure is the first of the James Bond extravaganzas, with Sean Connery as the super-agent combating a fiend out to control the world. Wildly flamboyant and gimmick-filled, this movie possesses the entertainment values that made the series so popular. Ursula Andress co-stars.

The Green Berets (x), on 12 at 9. This is not just a bad film — it is more than two hours worth of Hollywood claptrap about the once (1968) profoundly important question of the American role and presence in Vietnam. It is a depressing commentary of the American movie industry that this insulting film, which apparently reflected John Wayne's (he co-directed and stars) attitude and glorifies America's part in the war, is the only movie specially dealing with Vietnam that has been financed by a major Hollywood film company — they have the money and talent to do so much better.

Go West, Young Man (xx), on 2 at 11:45. A moderately entertaining 1936 comedy about what happens when a screen star makes a personal appearance in a small town, and is forced to mingle with the common folk. Worthwhile only for the performance of Mae West.

Smoky (xx), on 4 at 11:45. A 1966 remake of the Will James classic sentimental story about a cowboy and a horse named Smoky, starring Fess Parker and Diana Hyland.

Pete 'n Tillie (xx), on 6 at 11:30. Carol Burnett and Walter Matthau star in this 1972 comedy-drama that tells the bittersweet story of a 30-ish spinster and a wise-cracking bachelor, whose slow-starting romance blossoms into an 11-year marriage — that begins to come apart at the seams. The story follows their battles, their reconciliations, and their eventual compromises in order to make their relationship work.

Seven In Darkness (xx), on 5 at midnight. A 1969 made-for-TV plane crash drama — with a twist — all the survivors are blind people who were on their way to a convention, and they are well-played by Milton Berle, Dina Merrill, Barry Nelson, Sean Garrison and Lesley Ann Warren.

CAROL BURNETT
. . . on 6 at 11:30 p.m.

The Undefeated (xx), on 7 at midnight. Routine 1969 adventure yarn starring John Wayne and Rock Hudson as ex-Civil War soldiers fighting Indians, bandits and revolutionaries in Mexico.

Caesar and Cleopatra (xxx), on 8 at midnight. A fine cast (Vivien Leigh, Claude Rains, Flora Robson and Stewart Granger) highlights this 1945 British-made film adaptation of the George Bernard Shaw satire about the aging Roman conqueror and the beautiful but slightly addle-brained beauty of the Nile.

The Dangerous Days of Kiowa Jones (xx), on 12 at midnight. Robert Horton, Diane Baker and Sal Mineo star in this draggy 1966 western about a wandering cowpoke who fulfills a dying lawman's request to bring in two killers.

The Barefoot Contessa (xxx), on 6 at 1:50. Humphrey Bogart, Ava Gardner and Edmond O'Brien star in this 1954 drama that opens at a funeral of an unhappy glamor girl, as her friends and acquaintances recall her beginnings, her rise to stardom, her loneliness and her tragedy. O'Brien won an Oscar for his role as a loud-mouthed press agent, and he deserved it.

Marketplace Honors Amputee Society

On the Eve Of Remembrance Day

MARKETPLACE TRIBUTE — Young Dale Vincent of Cambridge, Ontario, who this year represents all amputees across Canada, will appear in a special edition of Marketplace, to be telecast on Sunday at 10 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6. Dale, who has two artificial limbs, will join host Joan Watson in a tribute to war veterans, in conjunction with Remembrance Day.

On the eve of Remembrance Day, CBC-TV's Marketplace program on Sunday, Nov. 10 at 10 p.m. will have a slightly different item dealing with a not altogether tangible item.

It is a charity, but a charity that gives goods in return for contributions. It is the War Amputations of Canada, a society that makes car key tags, watch band calendars and address stickers. These are bought by contributions to the War Amps and in return the money employs disabled workers who make the tags, and with the remaining money, supports research. War Amps are an entirely self-supporting group run by veterans and it receives no government monies.

The society is branching out to include the disabled other than war veterans. To mark the departure, the War Amputations of Canada Key Tag Service is conducting a campaign symbolized by "Sydney, Jr.," named after a long-term president, the late Col. the Rev. Sydney E. Lambert.

The present Sydney, Jr. is 10-year-old Dale Vincent of Cambridge, Ont., who lost an arm and leg in a train accident. Dale has been given artificial limbs by the society and he will appear with host Joan Watson on Marketplace and despite his handicaps, he and Joan are seen canoeing, kicking a football and visiting some barnyard animals.

The War Amps have also changed their car key service from showing one's licence plate number to a recorded confidential number against address that is kept on file with War Amps. This service exists across Canada with the exception of B.C.

VERA LYNN the inspiring singer who performed for millions of troops and civilians during the Second World War is the special guest of The Irish Rovers, in a Remembrance Day tribute to be seen on Sunday at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

Survey Shows Women Unhappy With Their Television Image

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD — What is there about women that other women — and men — don't want to see in movies or on television?

"It's not a purely theoretical question because the Screen Actors Guild has discovered, to no one's surprise, that 71 per cent of television roles are for men and 28 for women. The one per cent left over consists of fractions of the aforementioned divisions.

The guild conducted a survey of 10,000 viewers in all 50 states and came up with some startling statistics and conclusions.

First off, it was discovered that men would rather see women on screen than women themselves would. Asked, "Do you like the women you see on TV?" Men answered affirmatively to the tune of 52.2 per cent. But only 28.2 of the women said yes.

The survey was heavily weighted in favor of the distaff sex. Of the 10,000 viewers participating, 83.6 per cent were women. And their chief complaint about their own sex on the tube was that actresses failed to mirror women's life styles. So said 71 per cent of the respondents.

An overwhelming number — 72 per cent — said sex was over used to sell products. Yet the survey revealed that women, sexy or not, are a true minority in television commercials.

Off camera speaking roles in commercials, a highly paid field, are 93 per cent male voices, even for apparel and cosmetics. And 70 per cent of roles for women in commercials are nonspeaking roles.

Clearly, the scientists of Madison Avenue are convinced that women aren't as good salesmen as men.

But Jane Russell does pitch bras on the tube and no man alive could sell hair coloring half as fetchingly as Cybil Sheppard.

Some 67 per cent of the respondents said they want to see women in positions of authority or in the professions. High percentages would like to see more women who speak for national products, hosts of talk shows and as newscasters. Sixty-two per cent of the men surveyed went along with these ideas.

Actress Kathleen Nolan, Vice President of the Guild and a driving force in the survey, noted that "evidently TV reflects an unreal portrayal of women's role in society which generally doesn't bother men."

In addition to the minority role played by women in television, the survey probed racial minority hiring along with program preference and other hot potatoes in the business.

Movies

Lifeboat (xxx), on 13 at noon. Excellnt performances by Tallulah Bankhead, John Hodiak, Walter Slezak and William Bendix highlight this 1944 Alfred Hitchcock drama of turmoil and tension in the confines of a lifeboat holding survivors of a Nazi torpedoing.

Dr. Strangelove (xxxx), on 8 at 12:45. This 1964 masterpiece of cinema satire, produced and directed by Stanley Kubrick, is quite simply one of the greatest, funniest and most shattering motion pictures ever made. Kubriok casts a perceptive but jaundiced eye on a crazed U.S. Air Force general who is determined to save the world personally from an imagined Communist takeover and nearly starts a Third World War in the process. Peter Sellers plays three different roles brilliantly, and Sterling Hayden, portraying the general, gives the best performance of his career. A classic movie that makes a personal, pertinent and devastating statement about the U.S. military.

The Success (xxx), on 11 at 1. A well-acted 1965 Italian-made drama about a businessman consumed with the desire for success, who sacrifices personal hoppiness in his quest. Vittorio Gassman is excellent and he receives fine support from beautiful Anouk Aimee (A Man and a Woman) and Jean-Louis Trintignant.

The President's Analyst (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. An entertaining 1967 spy spoof which benefits greatly from the smoothness of James Coburn in the title role. the story offers some wild chases and amusing sequences with analyst Coburn becoming more and more paranoid, thanks to his delicate assignment as headshrinker to the President. The movie even lampoons the FBI.

Bend of the River (xx), on 13 at 8. James Stewart and Rock Hudson star in this sprawling 1952 western-adventure about pioneers and the various hardships they encounter while journeying by wagon train to Oregon.

Pete 'n Tillie (xxx), on 5 at 9. Carol Burnett and Walter Matthau star in this 1972 comedy-drama about a 30-ish spinster and a wise-cracking bachelor whose slow-starting romance blossoms into an 11-year-marriage—that begins to come apart at the seams. The story follows their battles, their reconciliations, and the eventual compromises to keep their marriage together.

Hud (xxxx), on 11 at 9. A superb cast makes this 1963 story about a ruthless young man who tarnishes everything, and everyone he touches, ring true from the start to finish. Paul Newman is perfect as Hud, the alienated youth out for kicks with no regard for the consequences. The drama is deepened by the bitter conflict between the callous Hud and his stern and highly principled father (Oscar winner Melvyn Douglas), and Patricia Neal, who makes all her scenes count in an Oscar-winning portrayal of the family's world-weary housekeeper. Excellent direction by Martin Ritt and fine on-location Texas photography.

The Wheeler Dealers (xxx), on 4 at 11. Witty dialogue and excellent supporting performances by comedy veterans highlight this 1963 farce about an oil tycoon who comes to New York to raise money for some drilling, and falls in love with a pretty stock analyst. James Garner and Lee Remick star with Jim Backus, Phil Harris and Louis Nye.

Man in the Middle (xx), on 12 at 11:30. This 1964 movie starring Robert Mitchum, Trevor Howard and Keenan Wynn, starts off well, but it soon turns into a muddled courtroom drama that can't make its mind up where to place the guilt. The story concerns an American sergeant stationed in India who shoots a British sergeant and causes a minor rift between His Majesty and Uncle Sam. The question whether the American soldier is sane or not becomes the crux of the case.

The Doberman Gang, on 7 at 11:45. No rating available on this 1972 comedy-drama about dogs trained to rob banks.

A King's Story (xxxx), on 2 at midnight. Orson Welles narrates this 1965 English-made documentary-style biography of the Duke of Windsor (former King Edward VIII) who renounced his throne to marry an American divorcee, Wallis Simpson. Some commentary is supplied by the Duke and Duchess with the voices of Queen Mary and Winston Churchill by Flora Robson and Patrick Wymark.

Calling Northside 777 (xxx), on 6 at midnight. A well-made 1948 drama about a reporter who begins to believe the prisoner he is writing human interest stories about is innocent of an 11-year old murder charge and sets about trying to prove his theory. A competent cast includes James Stewart, Richard Conte and Lee J. Cobb.

THE OLDTIMERS — Canadians in their 70s and upwards relive exciting moments from pioneer times in the new CBC-TV series, The Oldtimers, to be telecast each Monday at 10 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6. On the premiere episode (November 11) 86-year-old NWMP veteran Ernest Bavin (above) is among the oldtimers who reminisce about the vital role of the world-famous Northwest Mounted Police on the western and northern frontiers.

CBC-TV Profiles Pioneer Canadians

Remarkable Canadians in their 70s, 80s and 90s and over, draw on their rich store of experiences and memories to provide new insights into the growth of this young nation in the fascinating new CBC-TV series, The Oldtimers.

The eight half-hour programs, prepared by producers and crews from CBC production centres across Canada, will be telecast Mondays at 10 p.m. starting November 11. Executive producer is Donnalu Wigmore, whose 1973 one-hour CBC special, The Time of My Life, inspired the series.

Oldtimers interviewed on the programs are men and women who played real roles in building this country — people whose lives represent living Canadian history and whose experiences reflect the vigorous pioneer spirit that helped fashion the nation.

"These oldtimers are people who are full up with life. They're inspiring to know," says executive producer Wigmore. "This series is to remind us that the past, and a different Canada, are so close to today and tomorrow in this country. And it's being done by a group of first-class CBC production people who share this feeling who revere the past, regard the present, and respect the future."

Among the producers who headed top regional crews filming The Oldtimers are 1973 Wilderness Award-winner Mike Poole of Vancouver, Jack Emack of Edmonton, Bill Ryan of Saskatoon, Norm Bortnik of Winnipeg, Barbara Emo of Montreal, and Jack Kellum, Hal Andrews and 1974 Wilderness Award-winner Dave Quinton of St. John's.

The series premiere, 11 Nov. 11, is produced by Donnalu Wigmore and is subtitled The North West Mounted Police. The oldtimers appearing in this telecast evoke memories of the exploits of the famed NWMP who brought law and order to the Canadian frontier, helping to speed up the settlement process.

They include: Mrs. Rosie Davis, 100-year-old Blood Indian who was registered for the reserve treaty of 1877 and remembers the days when "there were no reserves; we just roamed around."

Fred Bard, 96, of Edmonton who can still speak the Blackfoot tongue he learned as a scout in the Porcupine Hills.

John Jamieson, 97-year-old resident of Vancouver, who recalls enlisting in the NWMP in Halifax in 1893 and being assigned to duty at the dusty prairie town of Regina.

Mrs. Percy Cutting, 92, a Mountie's wife who remembers prisoners being kept in a 'cell' in her kitchen at an NWMP detachment in the Cypress Hills.

NWMP veterans Ernest Bavin and William Grennan who recall battling barracks mosquitoes and prairie fires as part of their tours of duty.

Harry Stallworthy, veteran of 30 years service on the 'second frontier' — the Far North, recalls the terrible sense of isolation, and the problems of learning the Eskimo language and way of life in order to survive.

From the stories related by these oldtimers emerges a fascinating account of the settling of Canada's western and northern frontiers — settling them in a tradition of law and order perhaps unique in the history of such events.

VIOLINIST AT WOLF TRAP FOR CONCERT IN THE PARK

In Performance At Wolf Trap will present a concert by Yehudi Menuhin Monday, November 11 at 8:00 p.m. on KCTS-9.

Menuhin, one of the world's greatest violinists, will appear with the Wolf Trap-American University Academy Orchestra under the direction of Alexander Schneider.

The concert is part of a series of performances taped at Wolf Trap Farm Park for the Performing Arts under a grant from Atlantic Richfield Company.

Menuhin will perform Brahms' Concerto in D for Violin and Orchestra. The orchestra, which is composed of young musicians who are selected by Wolf Trap from across the country to study in Washington during the summer, will also play the overture to Fingal's Cave by Mendelssohn and Mozart's Serenade in G.

Menuhin, who has ranked among the world's great artists for nearly 50 years, made his debut with the San Francisco Orchestra when he was seven. Since then, he has appeared around the world, gives 120 to 150 concerts in a year, records phonograph albums, developed a major music festival and launched a school for young musicians.

Critics generally agree that Menuhin is one of the best-known and most-accomplished violinists in the world today.

LESLIE CARON
. . . on 5 at 3:30 p.m.

One Step to Hell (xx), on 13 at noon. A 1967 adventure film set in turn-of-the-century Africa about a police officer who pursues a gang of vicious killers. Ty Hardin and Pier Angeli star.

A Walk in Spring Rain, on 8 at 12:45. An excellent cast (Ingrid Bergman, Anthony Quinn and Fritz Weaver) highlights this 1970 drama set in Tennessee's Smoky Mountains, about an unhappy professor's wife and her involvement with a mountaineer.

Redhead (x), on 11 at 1. An English-dubbed 1965 German-made melodrama about an unhappily married woman's involvement with a vengeance-seeking adventurer.

Gigi (xxxx), on 5 at 3:30. Nine Academy Awards went to this entertaining, sumptious 1958 musical adaptation of French novelist Colette's story of turn-of-the-century Paris. The Lerner and Loewe score is delightful as is the fine cast that includes Leslie Caron, Maurice Chevalier, Louis Jourdan and Hermione Gingold. Elegantly directed by Vincente Minnelli (Oscar for Best Director).

Lillies of the Field (xxxx), on 12 at 7. A heart-warming 1963 drama highlighted by an Academy Award-winning performance by Sidney Poitier as an itinerant handyman who helps a group of refugee nuns build a chapel for their desert convent. Lilia Skala in the role of Mother Maria is equally fine.

Brief Encounter, on 8 at 7:30 and 5 at 8:30. (See today's highlights for details of this movie.)

Meet Danny Wilson (xx), on 13 at 8. In a close parallel to his own career, Frank Sinatra portrays an unknown who rises to become a top singer, in this 1952 drama, co-starring Shelley Winters and Alex Nichol. A big bonus for Sinatra fans is the long lists of standards he delivers.

All the Kind Strangers, on 4 at 8:30. An unpreviewed 1974 made-for-TV drama about two motorists held captive by a family of orphans who would do anything — even murder — to find themselves parents. Stacy Keach and Samantha Eggar star.

Donovan's Reef (xxx), on 11 at 9. What happens when a stuffy Boston girl arrives on a South Pacific isle in search of her father forms the basis of this light-hearted 1963 comedy, directed in high-style by John Ford. Art it isn't, but there is lots of fun, outrageously played in broad style by an excellent cast that includes John Wayne, Lee Marvin and Dorothy Lamour.

Screamer, on 4 at 11:30. A 1974 made-for-TV mystery movie starring Pamela Franklin as a young woman who fears she is being stalked by a rapist.

Mission Batangas (xx), on 12 at 11:30. Routine Second World War adventure, set in the Philippines, about an American pilot who stumbles on a plan to commandeer the Philippine covernment's stock of gold. Filmed in 1968 with Dennis Weaver and Vera Miles.

The Mating Game (xxx), on 7 at 11:45. Tony Randall steals the show with his zany performance as an Internal Revenue investigator who comes to check on an eccentric businessman who hasn't paid his taxes and ends up by falling in love with the man's daughter, in this 1959 comedy. Debbie Reynolds and Paul Douglas round out the competent cast.

Attack and Retreat (xx), on 2 at midnight. A sprawling 1964 European-produced Second World War story of Italian soldiers and their experiences on the Russian front. Peter Falk and Arthur Kennedy star.

Work Is a Four Letter Word (xxx), on 6 at midnight. A far-out, 1968 English-made fantasy about an eccentric young man who devotes his life to cultivating giant mushrooms, starring David Warner and British singer Cilla Black.

Jane Eyre (xxx), on 8 at midnight. George C. Scott and Susannah York star in this 1970 English-made movie adaptation of Charlotte Bronte's classic Gothic tale, beautifully filmed in the Yorkshire countryside.

The Hitler Gang, on 13 at 12:30. No rating available on this 1944 drama documenting the rise of the Nazi leader and his men.

The Young Warriors (xx), on 6 at 2. James Drury (The Virginian) stars in this 1967 Second World War drama which tries to analyze the effect killing has on a professional soldier and a young newcomer. It begins with some promise but the cliches soon take over.

Today's Highlights

Adrienne At Large, on 2 and 6 at 3:30. A repeat telecast of Adrienne Clarkson's visit to her Hong Kong birthplace, for a look at its people and their outlook on life. (30 mins.)

Hawaii Five-O, on 6 at 7 and 7 and 12 at 9. (60 mins.)

Movie Special, on 8 at 7:30 and 5 at 8:30. A 1974 made-for-TV adaptation of the 1936 Noel Coward play, Still Life. Updated and retitled, Brief Encounter, the drama stars Sophia Loren and Richard Burton in a bittersweet story of two unhappily married strangers who meet by change at an English train station, and fall in love. (90 mins.)

America, on 9 at 8. Alistair Cooke continues his award-winning series with tonight's focus on the westward migration by Americans. Cooke recalls the Louisiana purchase, retraces the 1804-05 expedition of Lewis and Clark, and discusses the impact of migration on the Indians. (30 mins.)

Evening at Symphony, on 9 at 8:30. Conductor Michael Tilson Thomas and piano soloist Misha Dichter combine their talents with the Boston Symphony Orchestra for a performance of Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 1 in D Minor. (60 mins.)

TV Violence Re-Examined by Experts

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR

NEW YORK — Like some festering sore, the issue of violence on television is given serious examination at monotonously regular intervals. The experts are summoned, the evidence is considered, the conflicting opinions are delivered, and all is forgotten until the next crisis of inflammation. This pattern has served the financial structure of television well. The programming status quo is threatened only briefly, continuing undisturbed after little more than minor adjustments and touchingly sincere promises.

For a variety of reasons, examination time seems to have rolled around again, but this time a growing number of influential voices are insisting that the sore has become malignant, that violence on TV presents an ominous threat to the social fabric, that there is a direct relationship between TV content and the fact that violent crimes in the United States are increasing at a rate four to seven times the growth in population.

This revival of concern is accompanied by a scattering of related developments.

Item: The Federal Communications Commission is struggling to meet a Dec. 31 deadline on a report requested by the House Appropriations Committee to outline "specific positive actions taken or planned by the commission to protect children from excessive programming of violence and obscenity."

Item: A San Francisco woman is suing NBC and its affiliate, KRON-TV, for $11 million on the charge that her 9-year-old daughter was "raped" by a boy and three girls, ages 10 to 14, in a fashion similar to the broomstick assault depicted in "Born Innocent," a made-for-TV movie about juvenile detention homes. The youngsters had seen the movie a few days earlier.

The issues are hardly open to simple solutions. While the history of the FCC may be a stunning tribute to burgaucratic ineptness, the commission's caution about moving into any area of program content represents understandable and perhaps even laudable concern about the spectre of government censorship. And television cannot be expected to completely ignor violence, to become a fantasy refuge for the more unpleasant facts of contemporary life.

Where, then, does this leave the issue of violence on TV or, more specifically, the effects of violent content on TV viewers, both young and old? There has been no lack of extensive studies, financed either by the networks or independent agencies. But generally the findings of one study, perhaps conducied by an independent agency, tend to be contradicted by the conclusions of another, quickly touted by a network. The result has been the cultivation of innumberable theories and inevitable confusion.

Now, Victor E. Cline, a professor of psychology at the University of Utah, is insisting that the latest evidence compiled by social science researchers leaves no room for doubt. In "Where Do You Draw the Line?" published by the Brigham Young University Press, he has edited an anthology of essays and reports carrying the subtitle, An Exploration into Media Violence, Pornography, and Censorship.

Among the essays chosen by Cline is Aggression in Childhood: The Impact of Television, summarizing the key research findings of Robert . Liebert, Emily S. Davidson and John M. Neale. After concludin from a large maks of evidence that television has a "demonstrably great impact on children from widely varied backgrounds," the authors do not argue that TV itself is bad for children.

Rather, they reach a more fundamental conclusion: any steady diet of television, regardless of content, can exert a powerful influence on children.

Obviously, television does not have a monopoly on violence. The commodity can be exploited anywhere, from tabloid journalism to an Alice Cooper rock concert to a Sam Peckinpah bloodbath film. All of these, however, can be expected to find their way onto a TV screen eventually. And, meantime, the product made specifically for TV remains generally deplorable.

The problem with American television is less the inclusion of violence than the exploitation of violence, an exploitation rooted either in gross stupidity or arrogant cynicism. The FCC is preparing its sensitive report, will probably revert to the familiar escape clause of self-regulation for the industry. If that regulation is to be in any way enlightened, the industry desperately needs advice from the public it supposedly serves. A good way to begin might be by turning off the TV set more frequently.

New PBS Series On 'The Blues'

By ELJOT WALD

The peculiarly American form of music known as the Blues originated in the cotton fields of the Mississippi Delta around the turn of the century. Spreading to the large Southern cities like Memphis and New Orleans, the Blues eventually followed the black migration up the Mississippi to Chicago.

Abstract. Academic. Boring.

The facts about the Blues, let's face it, have been talked to death. Blues requires no prior knowledge or experience: the music stands on its own. And when the right bluesmen are present, it does a lot more than just stand.

When the staff of Soundstage, the new PBS music showcase which premiers Tuesday, November 12 at 10:00 p.m. on KCTS-9, began assembling the elements for a tribute to blues legend Muddy Waters they soon discovered the combustibility of certain highly talented musicians when brought into proximity with other bluesmen. Muddy Waters himself is a full chapter in anyone's blues textbook.

Born McKinley Morganfield 59 years ago in Rolling Fork, Mississippi, he was discovered and recorded by the Library of Congress in 1941. Soon after, he came to Chicago where he recorded for Chess Records and put together what many buffs still consider the finest Blues aggregation of all time. Featuring Willie Dixon on bass, Little Walter on harp, Otis Spann on piano, Pat Hare and Fred Below on second guitar and drums, the group made music history at a South Side club called Smitty's Corner.

When all the musicians assembled, the chemistry really began. Between the people who see Muddy often and those who hadn't seen him in years, the taping session became part reunion, part idol worship, part party and part jam session. And what a jam session! With cameras rolling through arrivals, greetings, reminiscences, rehearsals and finally through the incredible performance itself, Soundstage came up with a final product exuding the sort of magic that only music at its best and most spontaneous can provide.

A feeling of spontaneity, intimacy and musical exploration will pervade all of Soundstage's 15 shows for the 1974 season. Not content with mere musical anthologies, Soundstage will endeavor to reveal the musicians beneath the melodies. And for its inaugural season, Soundstage has a basketful of stars worth examining. From singing storyteller Harry Chapin, to the delicious strains of Maria Muldaur, to the off-center genius of cult-figure Randy Newman to second generation legend Arlo Guthrie, the music will be both pleasing and worthwhile.

Prime Time Premieres on CBC-TV

Twenty years of playing professional hockey have left their mark on Eric Nesterenko, both physically and mentally. On Tuesday, November 12 at 10 p.m., on CBC television's new current affairs series Prime Time, he tells host Don McNeill what he thinks of it all now that he's retired from the game and searching for a new life.

Also on the show will be an interview with Moshe Dayan by Malka Himel-Cohen. The interview took place at Dayan's home in Tel Aviv last October 6, exactly a year to the day after the Yom Kippur war which saw war hero-politician Moshe Dayan fall from grace in the country he helped to build. He tells Malka what he thinks of it all now.

The third feature on Prime Time's debut is a film on the troubles of Britain, done by Martyn Burke. Burke describes it as an "affectionately satirical piece on all the un-British things happening there — the formation of private armies, soccer riots, the nanny industry crisis and racial strife. The entire economic situation in Britain is summed up in one minute and 12 seconds by a man who drives a Rolls Royce and lives in the country," Burke says.

The producers of Prime Time are Ralph Thomas, Martyn Burke and Larry Zolf. Thomas says "you can expect to see almost anything on the series." Upcoming on December 10 is a segment with magician Doug Henning, a Canadian who's getting raves in New York for his show.

Henning is considered by many to be the world's greatest magician. One of his magic feats is to levitate a girl on the tips of four sabres in New York's Central Park.

Another segment on the December 10 show is by Beryl Fox, who marks her return to Canadian television with a piece on "How To Fight With Your Wife."

Prime Time host Don McNeill is a veteran CBC-TV newsman, who, as Washington correspondent, covered the Watergate scandal. He now is stationed in Ottawa, reporting to CBC-TV news from Parliament Hill.

A native of Newfoundland, McNeill was a professional engineer and studied as a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford before he became a broadcaster.

Movies

A Matter of WHO (xx), on 13 at noon. A curious English-made 1961 mixture of comedy and drama starring Terry Thomas as an investigator for the World Health Organization (WHO).

Bye Bye Braverman (xxx), on 8 at 12:45. An excellent cast of comedy veterans (George Segal, Jack Warden, Alan King, Godfrey Cambridge, Joseph Wiseman and Sorrell Brook) highlights this offbeat 1968 satire on the mores of would-be Jewish intellectuals in New York City. The story centers on one day in the lives of a group of friends attending the funeral of a deceased comrade.

The Silver Spoon Set, on 11 at 1. No rating available on this 1965 Italian-made drama about the decadent life among offspring of the rich, and two outsiders who join their social circle. Claudia Cardinale stars.

The Nanny (xxxx), on 5 at 3:30. Bette Davis fans will enjoy still another in the star's growing gallery of sinister portraits — this one filmed in 1965. Miss Davis is cast as an English nanny whose sense of reality is clouded due to some deep dark secret in her past. Her charge, a 10-year-old psychotic (well-acted by William Dix) is wise to her, but he has trouble making anyone else believe him.

Thunder Bay (xx), on 13 at 8. High spirited 1953 adventure yarn about oil prospectors who clash with shrimp fishermen in Louisiana when their off-shore drilling operation interferes with the routine of a small fishing community. A good cast includes James Stewart, Joanne Dru and Dan Duryea.

The Gun, on 4 at 8:30. The controversial subject of gun control is at the heart of this 1974 semi-documentary that follows a .38-caliber revolver from its production in the factory through a succession of owners — all of whom have different aims for the weapon.

Popi (xxxx), on 8 at 8:30. Alan Arkin's flawless, luminous performance as a New York Puerto Rican widower who wants a better life for his two sons, is the highlights of this 1969 drama. He will win your heart as he comes up with an outrageous plan to set his boys adrift in a boat off the Florida coast in the hopes of their finding a better home with some wealthy people he is sure will rescue his children. The movie has charm and pathos in well-measured amounts, and is beautifully directed by Arthur Hiller.

Elmer Gantry (xxxx), on 11 at 9. Academy Awards went to Burt Lancaster and Shirley Jones in this excellent 1960 film adaptation of the Sinclair Lewis best-seller about an unscrupulous salesman who becomes a fire-eating preacher under the tent of a lady evangelist (Jean Simmons).

Night of Terror (xx), on 12 at 10. Donna Mills, Chuck Connors and Martin Balsam star in this 1972 made-for-TV melodrama about a syndicate killer's pursuit of a young woman unaware of his motive.

Shock Treatment (x), on 12 at 11:30. Sensationalized tripe best describes this 1964 melodrama about an actor who accepts a large sum of money to pretend he is insane. He has himself committed to an asylum, where he is supposed to obtain information concerning the whereabouts of some stolen money from a psychotic patient. A good cast (Stuart Whitman, Roddy McDowall and Lauren Bacall) is totally wasted.

That Certain Summer (xxxx), on 7 at 11:45. A ground-breaking 1972 TV drama dealing with the subject of homosexuality. The conflict is between a divorced homosexual and his adolescent son, who is slowly and fearfully learning why his parents split up. Sensitive performances are turned in by Hal Holbrook, Martin Sheen, Hope Lange and Scott Jacoby. (Emmy winner for his role as the boy).

The Naked Brigade (x), on 2 at midnight. A mediocre 1965 Second World War drama about a girl who joins up with Greek female guerillas when the country is overrun by the Nazis. Shirley Eaton and Ken Scott star.

Forever Amber (xx), on 6 at midnight. Linda Darnell, Cornel Wilde and Richard Greene star in this 1947 movie adaptation of the Kathleen Winsor best-seller about a barmaid who becomes a member of the court of Charles II. Once considered risque, the movie is tame by today's standards.

Strangers When We Meet (xx), on 8 at midnight. A glossy 1960 soap opera about an adulterous love affair between an unhappily married architect and a frustrated suburban housewife, starring Kirk Douglas, Kim Novak, Barbara Rush and Walter Matthau.

The Big Broadcast of 1936 (xxx), on 13 at 12:30. George Burns and Gracie Allen star in this entertaining mixture of radio-type comedy and songs.

The Minotaur (x), on 8 at 2:30. A 1960 Italian-made adventure about good vs. evil.

At Gunpoint (xx), on 6 at 2:55. A better-than-average western drama about a peaceful man who shoots an escaping outlaw, and is hailed as a hero, only to end up being stalked by the outlaw's vengeance-seeking gang. A competent east includes Fred MacMurray, Dorothy Malone and Walter Brennan.

Famed Journalist Profiles Six Giants

Six men of outstanding genius, whose lives spanned the story of Christendom; beginning where the Bible ends, will be the subject of six one-hour films in a series having its world premiere on CBC-TV.

Malcolm Muggeridge, journalist extraordinary to the English-speaking world, has written, will host and narrate the series titled A Third Testament, to be shown on the network Wednesdays at 9:30 p.m., starting Nov. 13.

This major series, 18 months in the making, on various locations in Europe, the U.S.S.R. and North Africa, is in the genre of Kenneth Clark's Civilization and Alastair Cooke's America. It has a tremendous range — as a TV history of Christian ideas.

Muggeridge has chosen as his subjects St. Augustine (to be televised Nov. 13), Blaise Pascal (Nov. 20), William Blake (Nov. 27), Soren Kierkegaard (Dec. 4), Leo Tolstoy (Dec. 11) and Dietrich Bonhoeffer (Dec. 18). The latter was the Lutheran pastor executed by the Nazis, perhaps better known in Europe than America.

In the introduction, Muggeridge refers to his subjects as "six characters in search of God." They were men, he says, all quintessentially of their time, but they had in common a special role — to relate their time to eternity.

"This has to be done every so often," says Muggeridge. "Otherwise, we forget that, when the lure of self-sufficiency proves too strong, or despair too overwhelming, men need to be called back to God to rediscover humility and with it, hope. Between the fantasy of the ego and the truth of love, between the darkness of the will and the light of the imagination, there will always be a bridge and a prophetic voice calling us to cross it."

Of his first "prophetic voice," St. Augustine, he says: "... like a later Noah, he was constrained to construct an ark — in his case, called Orthodoxy — wherein his Church could survive through the dark days that lay ahead."

Some ten centuries later comes Pascal, confronted with the Renaissance and the Reformation, "... avid to extend the frontiers of knowledge, standing on the threshold of science as we know it today, and aware, as no one among his contemporaries was, of the fabulous potentialities."

MALCOLM MUGGERIDGE with his "six characters in search of God," that make up the six-part, A Third Testament series premiering on Wednesday at 9:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6. They are clockwise from bottom left, Blaise Pascal, St. Augustine, Dietrich Bonhoeffer, Leo Tolstoy, Willam Blake and Soren Kierkegard.

Declares Muggerride: "We are all endlessly looking for reality, even when we try not to, or think we aren't. Of no English poet and artist is this more true than of William Blake."

He continues with Soren Kierkegaard, whom he describes as one of the oddest-ever of the prophets who appear on the earthly scene: "A melancholic Dane, a kind of clippety-clop, ribald Hamlet who from the middle of the last century, peered quizzically into this one, drily noting, before they happened, such tragi-comic phenomena of our time as universal sufferage, mass media and affluence abounding."

His last prophet is the Lutheran pastor Dietrich Bonhoeffer, who plotted to kill Hitler and died in a Nazi prison camp — "a man who wanted to be a murderer: a typically middle-class German who found fulfillment in prison among the lowest of the low; an erudite theologian who experienced the stupendous simplifications of dying on a scaffold like his Master."

Host of New Consumer Series Was a Former Police Officer

Terry David Mulligan

Earlier this month, the consumers of British Columbia gained a new ally in their struggles against high prices, inflation, business rip-offs, unfair practices and other such problems of the marketplace. The help comes in the form of a half-hour television program, Consumer Prepare, seen live, Monday through Friday mornings at 10:00 on BCTV. The man who holds the reins of Consumer Prepare is Terry David Mulligan. Because the program is broadcast live, Mulligan must be constantly alert and in firm control of his interviews.

Terry does not try to be an expert, in the field of consumer protection. Rather, he acts on behalf of his viewing audience, questioning consumer advocates and business representatives on topics that range from Landlord-Tenant Conflicts and Small Debts Court to Buying Antiques and Health Foods. A live open-line feature permits viewers to phone in and add their opinions and experiences to the discussions.

Consumer Prepare is a radical departure from the type of broadcasting work Terry David Mulligan has previously done, but it is surprisingly similar to a job he held years earlier. He was for three years a Royal Canadian Mounted Policeman.

Terry values highly his R.C.M.P. training. He says it taught him quick character analysis, the ability to assess someone's personality in a short interview. It also gave him the self-confidence which helped him pursue a career in show business.

The story of how Terry David Mulligan changed from policeman to broadcaster seems incredible, but Mulligan swears it's true. He was involved in a stake-out, secretly observing a suspected "house of ill-repute." The establishment under suspicion was next door to a radio station, the control room of which was an ideal vantage point for looking at the neighboring house. Terry spent three days in the same room as the disc jockeys. He says, "they were having so much fun, I knew that's what I wanted to do." A short while afterwards, Mulligan had traded in his badge and gun for a microphone, working at a small radio station on the prairies.

From Alberta to Saskatchewan to B.C., Terry worked for several years at CKLG, Vancouver, before getting his start on television. He appeared in three comedy series on CBC-TV, A Second Look, Piffle and Co. and Hey, Taxi. His next step was Toronto where Terry hosted the CTV musical-variety series Roq. He also found time to appear in several television commercials, including his most famous role: a "Foot-worm" selling paper towels.

Besides Consumer Prepare, Terry is now currently working on a new rock music series for the CBC radio network. The Great Canadian Gold Rush. In his spare moments he enjoys escaping into the back woods. The son of a game warden, Terry grew up in the bush, hunting and fishing.

CTV INVESTIGATES COSMETIC RIP-OFF

Canadians are spending well over half a billion dollars a year to wipe, spray, rinse and paste cosmetics and beauty aids onto their bodies and faces and all of this activity supports the idea there is youth and beauty in a jar. Jack McGaw and the Inquiry team, this time with the addition of Producer Jeff Fry and reporter Robert Reguly, take a serious look at the possible dangers of cosmetics as well as the claims and marketplace activities of cosmetics in The Big Put-On the next episode of A CTV News Inquiry airing Sunday, November 10, 10:00-11:00 p.m. EST on the CTV Television Network.

It is estimated that tens of thousands of North American women are suffering from cosmetic injuries serious enough to restrain their activities for at least a day. So, Inquiry is conducting a population survey to assess the extent of adverse reactions. "We are also surveying schoolchildren and teenagers. We've found many 7, 8 and 9-year-olds using cosmetics quite regularly," added McGaw.

Movies

Nightmare Alley (xxx), on 13 at noon. A fine performance by Tyrone Power highlights this absorbing 1947 drama about a carnival drifter who double-crosses everybody on his way to success. Coleen Gray and Joan Blondell co-star.

You Can't Win 'Em All (xx), on 8 at 12:45. Tony Curtis and Charles Bronson star in this routine 1970 adventure about two soldiers-of-fortune caught up in political intrigue.

Edge of Fear (x), on 11 at 1. An English-dubbed 1964 Spanish-made melodrama about a witness to a murder hunted by the killer, even though she can't identify him.

This Property Is Condemned (xx), on 5 at 3:30. Robert Redford and Natalie Wood star in this brooding 1966 drama, expanded from a one-act play by Tennessee Williams, about a restless Southern girl longing for adventure and romance. The film begins interestingly enough, but soon becomes as uneven as Miss Wood's Southern accent, however, Redford manages to remain credible as a railroad efficiency expert who comes to the small Mississippi town on business and remains for pleasure.

HAYLEY MILLS
. . . on 2 at midnight

Mister Corey (xxx), on 13 at 8. Slick direction, an excellent script and better-than-average performances by Tony Curtis, Martha Hyer, Charles Bickford and Kathryn Grant highlight this entertaining 1957 drama about a lad from the Chicago slums who rises to power in the gambling world.

Conquest of the Planet of the Apes, on 7 at 9. This fourth (1972) of the popular sci-fi adventures finds the apes ripe for rebellion against the humans who have enslaved them. The year is 1991, when the simian leader sets the stage for bloodshed. Cast includes Roddy McDowall and Don Murray.

The Odd Couple (xxxx), on 12 at 9:30. Better than the stage version, this 1968 movie adaptation of Neil Simon's marvelously funny comedy about two grumpy ex-married who take up housekeeping together, is one of the few times in Hollywood history where the film version has improved on the Broadway original — thanks to the flawless performances by Walter Matthau and Jack Lemmon.

Robbery (xxx), on 12 at 11:30. An interesting 1967 English-made crime-drama meticulously detailing the events surrounding Britain's spectacular mail-train robbery of 1963, starring Stanley Baker. This was the second of two films based on the much publicized caper; the other one which was better done, was made, curiously enough by West German film makers, and entitled The Great British Train Robbery.

Day of the Evil Gun (xx), on 7 at 11:45. Excellent performances by Glenn Ford, Arthur Kennedy and Dean Jagger highlight this slightly better-than-average 1968 western about a search for women kidnapped by the Apaches.

Whistle Down the Wind (xxxx), on 2 at midnight. A thoroughly entertaining 1962 British-made drama about a trio of children who find an escaped convict in their barn, and believe him to be Christ. Hayley Mills as one of the children and Alan Bates as the convict give flawless performances. Recommended.

The Naked Edge (xxx), on 6 at midnight. This 1961 English-made mystery is Gary Cooper's last film and offers a compact suspense plot about a blackmail letter to the wife of a wealthy businessman that leads her to suspect she has married a murderer. A fine supporting cast includes Deborah Kerr as Cooper's wife, Michael Wilding, Diane Cilento and Hermione Gingold.

Stairway To Heaven (xxx), on 8 at midnight. David Niven and Kim Hunter star in this British-made 1946 allegorical drama about a pilot about to crash who is suspended between this world and the next. Well-produced with an excellent supporting cast.

Morocco (xxx), on 13 at 12:30. Nostalgia buffs will enjoy this sexy early talkie (1930) starring glamorous Marlene Dietrich as a fallen woman who sacrifices all for the love of Foreign Legionnaire Gary Cooper.

Tobruk (xx), on 6 at 2:06. A 1967 account of an expedition by Allied troops to destroy a Nazi fuel depot during the Second World War, starring Rock Hudson and George Peppard. Well-mounted but you've seen it all before.

Fire Down Below (xxx), on 8 at 2:10. A shady lady (Rita Hayworth) comes between two fishing-boat partners (Robert Mitchum and Jack Lemmon) in this 1957 romantic adventure.

ABC Afternoon Playbreak, on 4 at 1:30. Kay Lenz and Clu Gulager star in this romantic 1974 made-for-TV drama about the romance between a young actress and a blind professor. (90 mins.)

Mike Douglas, on 12 at 2:30 and 7 at 6:30. Mike and co-host Cicely Tyson (Emmy winner for Miss Jane Pittman) welcomes guests Jerry Stiller and Anne Meara, top fashion model/actress Lauren Hutton and fashion designer Scott Barrie to today's show. (90 mins. on 12; 60 mins. on 7.)

Carol Burnett Show, on 2 and 6 at 8. Carol and her regulars Harvey Korman and Vicki Lawrence with tonight's special guests singer Helen Reddy and comedian-impressionist John Byner. (60 mins.)

Jacques Cousteau, on 4 at 8. Following in the steps of Darwin, Captain Cousteau and his crew travel the icy waters of the Atlantic off southernmost South America, crossing the Strait of Magellan and north up the Pacific coast—a voyage Darwin made in the 1830s. Highlight of the voyage is a visit to a Chilean village of Alacaluf Indians — once numbering in the thousands and now ravaged by disease and exploited by European settlements their population has dwindled to 27. (60 mins.)

The Waltons, on 7 and 12 at 8. Walter Cronkite's daughter Kathy makes her TV acting debut as a class-mate in John-Boy's writing class, in tonight's episode of this popular drama series. (60 mins.)

The Way It Was, on 9 at 8. Two of the finest teams in pro basketball are profiled as the program recalls the 1961-62 NBA championship series between the Los Angeles Lakers and the Boston Celtics. Joining host Curt Gowdy are Elgin Baylor and Frank Selvy of the Lakers. (30 mins.)

Mclear, on 8 at 9:30. The Land That Lost Touch with the Sea Correspondent Michael Mclear looks at the current depressed state of Newfoundland's fishing industry. (30 mins.)

Portrait: The Man from Independence, on 8 at 10. Biographical drama profiling Harry S. Truman in his younger days. Robert Vaughn is excellent in the role of the future President when, as an incorruptable and outspoken Missouri judge (circa 1929), the young politician faces personal danger and threats to his family as he tries to buck the local political machine. (60 mins.)

Wide World Special, on 4 at 11:30. Actor-comedian Dick Van Dyke talks about his career and his bout with alcoholism in a candid interview with host Dick Cavett. (90 mins.)

Dick and Dick

Recent Victoria Visitor In CBC Radio Drama

Actor-director John Neville, well-known for his stylish interpretations of classical drama on the English stage, first won recognition here when he toured with the Old Vic company in the late '50s. He returned in 1972 to direct Sheridan's The Rivals at the National Arts Centre, and last season was appointed artistic director for Edmonton's Citadel Theatre where he recently had his contract renewed for another three years.

Earlier this year he starred in a double bill at the NAC, and is presently touring The Rivals around Alberta.

Somewhere inbetween his hectic schedule, Neville found time to star in a 90-minute CBC Radio version of All Souls' Night by Irish short story writer and playwright, Joseph Tomelty. That production, directed by Fred Diehl, will be aired on CBC Tuesday Night, Nov. 12 at 8:03 p.m. EST (Thurs., Nov. 14 at 8:03 p.m. on CBC-FM).

The play was originally put on by the Ulster Group Theatre (which Tomelty helped found) in 1950, and later by Dublin's famous Abbey Theatre; it was also broadcast by the BBC.

The setting for the play is the home of a County Down fishing family, and shows a social system and a way of life that survive to this day. The eternal verities are illuminated in a conflict between a penny-pinching mother and a son who eventually sacrifices his life for a chance to buy a boat that would make life safer and easier.

Co-starring in this CBC Radio drama, is May Diver, who had an active career as an actress in Ireland before moving to Edmonton to teach handicapped children a couple of years ago. She approached her friend Tomelty for permission to tape this play. Others in the cast are Patricia Byrne, David Dunbar, Philip Whyte, Jack Warburton, and Hugh Swandell.

JOHN NEVILLE

CAPTAIN JACQUES COUSTEAU and his crew of the Calypso journey the route of Magellan and Darwin in search of a dying race of people on The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau, to be telecast on Thurday at 8 p.m. on Channel 4.

Canadian Commercials Cheaper—Fewer Fads

VANCOUVER — Canadian television commercials might not be as good to look at but they are made at half the cost of those produced in the United States, an advertising convention was told here recently.

Andrew Kershaw, president of Ogilvy and Mather Inc. of New York, told the American Association of Advertising Agencies that Canadian commercials are 10 per cent less attractive but because they are cheaper it was a good trade-off.

He said the American stress on thoroughness sometimes misses the point of the commercial by surrounding it with too much detail. Canadian advertising agencies tend to generalize which is a better approach.

"If we could practise the economies Canadian agencies adopt as a matter of course, our agencies in the U.S. would increase their profitability by at least one-third," he said.

Mr. Kershaw said "there is better esprit de corps within Canadian agencies; a more serious dedication to business-like performance, less faddism, fewer Madison Avenue excesses, less neurotic behavior . . . it is a great thing to have going for you."

He said the biggest criticism of Canadian commercials is amateurism in acting but decision-making is faster and mistakes are corrected faster than in the U.S.

He said Canadian agencies needed more foreign blood and more women in senior positions.

"In the U.S. at least half the best copywriters are women. Half the people we hire for account management training are women. To keep them in servitude is folly."

DRAUGHT BEER UP FIVE CENTS

Two bits will no longer purchase a nine-ounce glass of draught beer in the province.

The Liquor Administration Branch today announced a five-cent increase to 30 cents for each glass immediately.

LAB general manager Bill Bruce said the premises which offer entertainment may apply to the branch for further increases. The branch is also reviewing a breweries' request for wholesale price increases.

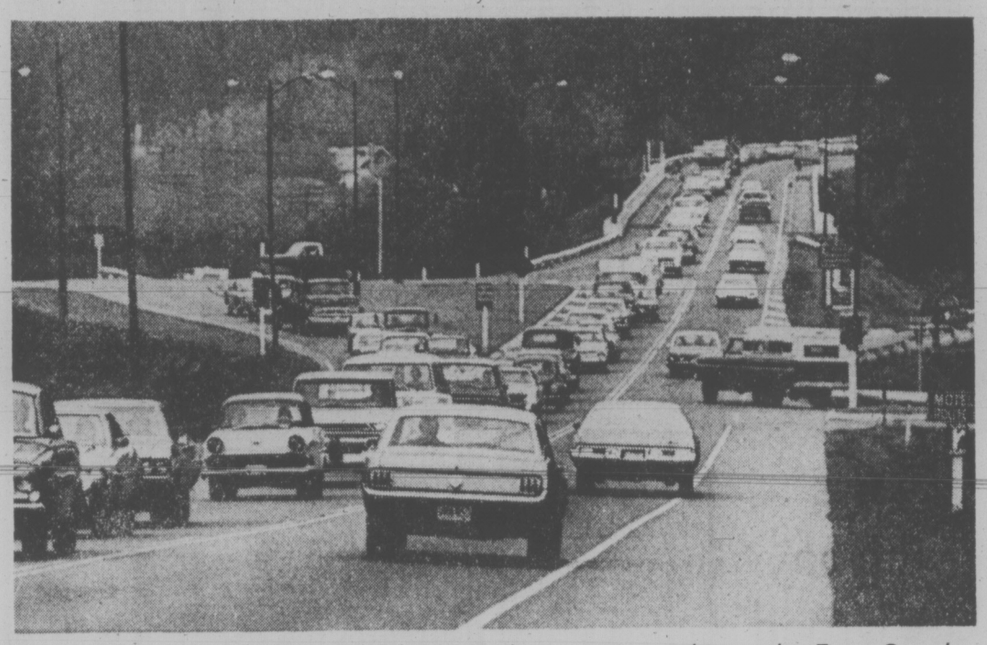
The 5-cent increase is not expected to please the B.C. Motel Association. The association earlier pushed for a floating price to cover increased costs of wages and taxes.

Commenting on the increase, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said, "Every decision we make is always based on economic facts, whether pleasant or unpleasant."

The price has not increased since 1971 when a glass of brew went from 20 to 25 cents.

DOUGLAS ST. TO THETIS LAKE

Trans-Canada Widening Set



Plans for a four-lane highway will remove this common sight on the Trans-Canada

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Work will probably start late next year on widening the Trans-Canada Highway between the Thetis Lake interchange and the Town and Country shopping centre, Highways Minister Graham Lea said Thursday.

But Lea said the widening of that section of the Trans-Canada from two to four lanes will be only an interim measure to handle traffic needs over the next five years.

His department is basing its long-term planning on the principle that the artery eventually must have at least an eight-lane capacity to cope with future growth irrespective of other transportation improvements such as a transit system.

When that stage is reached — and the minister didn't make any predictions on dates — the four central lanes will be reserved exclusively for "inter-regional" or through traffic and buses, with the flanking lanes handline local commuter and other traffic.

Lea said extensive land acquisitions will be necessary for a highway of such width, but those still lie some years ahead. In the meantime his department will "safeguard" the right-of-way by ensuring that no development in conflict with the plan occurs on land fringing the highway.

Dick Readshaw, director of highway designs and surveys in Lea's department, said the eight-lane capacity would have to be provided over the entire stretch of highway from the Town and Country centre to Langford, in the vicinity of the Trans-Canada-Spencer intersection.

At that location it would revert to the standard four-lane inter-regional route.

Lea, Readshaw and deputy highways minister Howard Sturrock were discussing in a Times interview the problems already affecting the Trans-Canada (see page 19), those stemming from continued residential growth over the next quarter-century and the possible remedies.

Lea said he agreed with the highway planners' view that this artery poses "probably the most unique and complex transportation problem in North America . . . because we have no other options open" (in the form of alternative transportation corridors).

"At the moment we feel we have only a five-year solution between Town and Country and Thetis, if we can get going next year with a start on our four-lane program," he added.

Readshaw estimated that if work could start on the widening project in late 1975 it would take at least another two years to complete.

Under the improvements, he said, the ramps at the Thetis Lake interchange and the intersections along the route — at Helmcken, Burnside and Tillicum — would be redesigned to ensure smoother traffic flow.

The light-controlled intersections would be upgraded to about the standard of those on the Pat Bay Highway, while other minor intersections would probably have to be eliminated because access from them to a four-lane highway would be too dangerous.

Readshaw said the roads in question are mainly those joining the Trans-Canada in the Portage Inlet area, and special "service roads" would have to be provided as a replacement.

Sturrock said the widening job would be co-ordinated with the other major project of extending Blanshard to line up with the Trans-Canada, via an 800-foot tunnel beneath the

Trustees Charge Pressure

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

School trustees in B.C. are charging the provincial government bowed to "pressure tactics", and illegal strikes by teachers in the emergency arbitration legislation introduced Thursday.

"The B.C. Teachers' Federation was clearly the ghost writer of the interim legislation," said B.C. School Trustees' Association president Eileen Madson.

She said the legislation shows the government has been "remiss in its duties to the children and taxpayers of this province."

The legislation was presented by Education Minister Eileen Dailly to solve the impasse in teacher-trustee negotiations for their 1975 contracts.

It first extends the deadline for conciliation by two weeks to Nov. 29 in the hopes more districts will reach settlements before the date for mandatory arbitration.

Secondly, it states that when the contracts finally go to arbitration, it shall be done on a district by district basis and no arbitrator shall be ap-

Emergency Wheat Limits Plan Agreed

Times News Services

ROME — Canada and other major grain-producing countries have agreed to consider an emergency plan limiting foreign wheat sales to make seven million tons available to ward off starvation in Asia and Africa over the next eight months.

Addeke Boerma, director-general of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, presented the plan to a closed meeting earlier this week of the principal wheat-exporting countries and some of their biggest customers.

Besides Canada it was attended by the United States, the Soviet Union, Australia, Argentina, the European Common Market countries and China.

Boerma asked for a response by next Tuesday.

A U.S. spokesman said that because of the large amount involved and low wheat stocks available, Boerma's plan obviously poses delicate problems.

The seven million tons needed until the 1975 harvest begins normally would cost $1.5 billion, including the cost of transporting it to the needy countries.

Sources at the food conference said Boerma in effect asked the exporting nations to limit supplies available to such major industrialized importers as Britain, West Germany, Japan and Italy and make the grain available on favorable loan terms or as outright grants to countries unable to pay for it.

The U.S. has decided to commit additional quantities of food assistance to Egypt, following earlier agreements on tobacco and wheat.

U.S. officials also said here Thursday that the Middle East countries are expected to receive about 15 per cent of the total U.S. food assistance package in this fiscal year.

Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz confirmed that he would fly to Cairo Saturday, see President Anwar Sadat, sign a new food-aid agrement and then go on to Syria for talks.

At the general conference meeting Thursday, China attacked the economic policies of the world's major trading powers.

Vice-Agriculture Minister Hao Chung-shih blamed the world food crisis on mass exploitation of developing countries by industrialized nations, principally the Soviet Union and the United States.

Without mentioning either country by name, he denounced "the ugly features of social-imperialism," and "superpower speculation and profiteering."

FOOD OR— DRINKS

ROME (UPI) — The delegate from Bangladesh stood up solemnly and warned the world food conference that mass starvation could lead to a cataclysmic degeneration of human society.

But only a smattering of delegates showed up at the conference hall to hear him. Many skipped the grim speech to attend a glass-clinking cocktail party hosted by Ghana in a room next door.

Bangladesh Agriculture Minister Abdus Samad Azad looked out at the nearly empty hall Thursday night and said failure to combat the threat of famine would be "a long-lasting crime against man and God."

"Looking beyond the immediate, one may discern that starvation and malnutrition are not only eroding the efficiency of the work force in the developing world, but are also leading to a genetic degeneration," he said.

Only about 50 of the more than 1,000 delegates showed up to hear Azad warn of a world with "two classes of human beings — one affluent, aggressive and authoritarian, the other depressed, servile and degraded."

Two Killed In Another Pub Blast

LONDON (Reuter) — Two men died and nearly 30 persons were injured, some seriously, when a bomb explosion ripped through a bar used by off-duty servicemen in southeast London.

Among those injured in the blast were two women soldiers and at least six other service personnel.

Red Flag 74 claimed responsibility for a series of bomb attacks recently, including two blasts at bars used by servicemen nin the south England town of Guildford in which five army recruits died and 65 people were injured.

A member of Scotland Yard's bomb squad said today it was believed that the bomb, weighing five to 10 pounds, might have been thrown through a bar window by two women and a man seen outside in a car.

A witness said the interior of the bar was devastated and strewn with broken bottles and smashed furniture.

"There was a young man with a hole in his stomach and others with horrible wounds in their faces and bodies," he said.

In England, 24 persons have lost their lives since February, 1972, in bomb attacks directed against servicemen.

$250M Fisheries Plan To 'Rehabilitate' Rivers

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Recreation and Conservation Minister Jack Radford said today the basic objective of a proposed $250,000-million federal fisheries program is to rehabilitate and restore the productivity of British Columbia's salmon streams and rivers.

Hatcheries are not a major factor in the program, he said.

"We would like to get our damaged rivers into shape in order to restore the salmon population to the levels of the 1800's," he said.

Radford was commenting on a federal fisheries department announcement that a program is being prepared to increase the production of spawning salmon from 25 to 50 million a year.

The minister said the program would have to be approved by federal and provincial governments, and if accepted, would be carried out over a period of 20 years.

He explained while the federal government had jurisdiction over commercial fisheries the province had jurisdiction over land surrounding rivers and streams and watersheds.

"There has to be a mutual agreement," he said. "We are prepared to co-operate in the implementation of such a program. We have ignored our valuable fisheries resource far too long."

Radford said in the long run, economically, the fisheries resource was as valuable, perhaps more so, than logging.

"Logging is renewable every 70 years," he said. "That is once you have cut the trees you have to wait 70 years for another crop. But salmon is renewable every two and five years."

"You don't have to spray them, protect them against fire and build costly roads," he said. "They are also a valuable source of protein."

Radford cited as an example the Adams River, north of Shuswap Lake, where more than one million salmon spawned this year.

Two internationally-known salmon experts said the federal fisheries program was a break through in the fight to save B.C. salmon streams and rivers.

Roderick Haig-Brown, a member of the International Salmon Commission, said the program was good as long as it didn't "deteriorate to building hatcheries and show pieces."

"It means money would be used to repair damage to such rivers as the Stellako, near Prince George," he said. "This is the river on which Williston allowed log driving, against the recommendations of the fisheries department, except the one he cooked up."

Howard English, a member of the commission's advisory committee, agreed with Haig-Brown that the program was "excellent."

"Rivers are the most economical way of producing fish," he said. "But apart from that — by preserving rivers, you preserve the quality of life."

Major Project Said Delayed by Bank

By ROB BULL

MONTREAL (FP) — The Star says a mammoth construction project by Canadian Pacific has been delayed at the request of the Bank of Montreal which it says is in financial difficulties.

The bank has denied it is having money problems.

Demolition of the downtown Laurentian Hotel scheduled for closing in mid-November, has been put off for 18 months, the paper said, at the demand of the bank which had planned to use part of the planned development as its new head office.

The newspaper says the bank is heavily committed to a $160 million project in Toronto, that its shares dropped from a high earlier this year on the stock market of $21 to $12, and quotes an analyst at Wood Gundy as saying the bank has a capital problem and would have difficulty raising money by a debenture issued today.

The Star also says there has been talk in the financial community of the bank's losses on its entry into the Master Charge credit card scheme.

The newspaper says further that the Bank of Montreal, like Lloyds Bank of England and the Franklin Bank of New York, has suffered heavy losses in foreign exchange dealings.

While both the bank and Canadian Pacific agree that no long-term commitment has been made between the two, a bank spokesman says "The bank's financial position has no bearing on these negotiations."

"The bank," he added, "has not suffered losses in foreign exchange in any manner whatsoever. That is categorical. We had, moreover, a $50 million debenture issue in August which was successful."

He said the Master Charge program was "away ahead of schedule" and had already obtained the number of cardholders and merchants for the plan which its organizers had previously postulated would belong in five year's time.

"There has been an acceleration of the cost of this program along with its accelerated growth," he said, "but I wouldn't call this losses."

BCAA To Quit Autoplan

Times News Services

The largest Autoplan dealer in the province, the British Columbia Automobile Association — which now handles 10,000 policies—is pulling out of the scheme at the end of the year.

According to an association spokesman, the rates offered as commission of policies for next year, which are the same as this, are "economically unacceptable."

No change will be made to the offer of an additional $2 fee for all new and renewal transactions over the 7 per cent commission on basic coverage and 10 per cent on extension coverage provided for in the existing business agreements between the individual companies and ICBC.

Commission on mid-term changes and special coverages remain unchanged.

Fines Proposed to Replace Prisons

OTTAWA (CP) — A radical system of fines, restitution and compensation which would see prisons become more of a last resort is proposed in the latest working papers of the Law Reform Commission of Canada.

The commissioners say the system would see the law for the first time give some real consideration to the victim of crime.

It would introduce fines based on income in place of unproductive imprisonment of non-violent offenders, a system that would make the burden of the penalty equal for rich and poor.

Where restitution was inadequate or impossible, such as when the offender is not caught, the government would step in with compensation in many cases — paying from a "reparation chest" into which the revenue from fines was placed.

The two papers, released Thursday, also introduce the concept of working in place of fines or restitution, but do not spell it out fully.

The concepts are radical and show the commissioners joining a growing number of experts who are finding prison is not theanswer to much non-violent crime and that the victim must have some consideration in law. In the case of the geared-to-income fines, the commission drew heavily from Swedish law.

The commission says it is nonsensical that the convicted offender rarely is made to pay for the damage he has done.

"Isn't it surprising that the victim generally gets nothing for his loss?"

The commissioners come to this conclusion: "If the lawless wilfully break the rules that protect our social values they ought to be held accountable and provided with the opportunity to restore the harm done to the victim and the social fabric."

They say attempting to reform the prisoner into a productive participant in society is a costly undertaking, the effectiveness of which remains in doubt.

So they make suggestions under which the perpetrators of most non-violent crimes, once found guilty, would be ordered to make restitution. This could cover psychological, physical or financial loss, and include an apology, monetary payment or work order.

When full restitution was not possible, state compensation would apply in cases of personal injury and property

- Congestion going to get a lot worse before getting any better for frustrated commuters
- 50-mile-an-hour speed limit on clogged highway is a humorless joke to put-upon drivers

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Whether you call it the Thetis Thrombosis, the Shawnigan Shuffle, the Langford Lineup or the Colwood Crawl is quite irrelevant.

The traffic congestion each weekday morning at southern Vancouver Island's most notorious highway intersection is really a combination of all those elements, plus others, and by any name it spells fuming frustration and delay for thousands of commuting motorists.

Highways Minister Graham Lea Thursday promised those harassed drivers that relief is in sight (see page 1) but at least three years away.

The intersection, called variously the Thetis Lake interchange, the Thetis overpass or the Colwood turnoff, is where the Trans-Canada Highway joins the Island Highway a mile or so north of Colwood Corners.

From Monday to Friday, between about 7:15 and 8:30 a.m. but especially in the hectic half-hour from 7:30 to 8, it presents a depressing picture of man's pathetic reliance on, total subservience to and failure to cope with the automobile.

Backed-up lines of vehicles stretch as far as the eye can see, as the heavy flow of traffic from Metchosin, Colwood and points west laboriously eases its way into the equally heavy flow down the Trans-Canada from Goldstream, Millstream and points north.

On the Trans-Canada itself the slowly-crawling line regularly stretches back up the highway to the Thetis Lake Park entrance.

on the Craigflower route into town. And it's not uncommon for that all-but-stationary line to reach beyond Parson's Bridge — a few hundred yards back in the Colwood direction.

Where the two streams actually converge, progress is painfully slow. It's only the remarkable tolerance of drivers already on the Trans-Canada, in allowing those from western areas to filter progressively into the line, that saves the situation from deteriorating still further into cut-and-thrust recklessness.

But even when the manoeuvre is completed the peak-hour commuter's highway hindrances are far from over.

Not only is the next 3½ miles a hopelessly inadequate two-lane stretch all the way to the Town and Country shopping centre, but it's riddled with feeder roads and traffic lights. The 50 m.p.h. speed limit over much of its length is a humorless joke to drivers who think it's a good morning if they can chug along at 30.

Then comes the evening rush hour and it happens all over again. On summer evenings and also Friday evenings the rest of the year, as the weekenders flee to up-Island haunts, camper trucks, trailers, motorhomes and cars towing boats and tent-trailers swell the throng to make the

As each year goes by, of course, the problem worsens. A Colwood resident who works downtown and moved to a new subdivision four years ago said he used to allow just over 20 minutes for the journey but now he has to allow at least 35 minutes to be sure of getting to work on time.

No up-to-date figures were available from the provincial highways department, which operates a counting station at Helmcken on a 24-hour, year-round basis.

But a spokesman said between 1966 and 1972 the average weekday traffic for March rose by a little over eight per cent per year, while during peak hours the annual growth rate was in the region of nine to 10 per cent.

In 1972, between Thetis Lake interchange and Burnside, the traffic count was about 1,100 vehicles per hour in the morning peak from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m. and 1,200 v.p.h. in the evening peak from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. — which includes other types of traffic besides straight commuter traffic.

Assuming those figures have risen by 20 per cent in the past two years, the morning peak is now over 1,300 v.p.h. and the evening peak close to 1,450.

The increase in traffic volume followed the outward population spread in recent years, as more and more people sought cheaper property, lower taxes and country living in areas to the west and north as far afield as Sooke, Shawnigan and Mill Bay.

In the 1971 census the Colwood-Langford-Metchosin area had a combined population of 19,278. Today, according to Capital Regional District estimates, the figure is 17 per cent higher at 22,743.

And that's only a forestaste of the growth still to come. The CRD's recently published draft regional plan, covering the period up to 1966, projects a population of close to 60,000 for those three western communities and the soon-to-be-developed Highlands area.

Some highway improvements have been carried out to meet the needs of this expanding population. For instance, Sooke Road is now four lanes in width between Royal Roads and the Metchosin turnoff, and extensively widened and resurfaced on other sections.

But the vital umbilical cord on which they all depend for their employment, shopping, cultural and other sustenance in Victoria's womb — the Trans-Canada — has remained unchanged and, increasingly, unable to cope.

That, then, is the problem. But who has the solutions and how long will it be before any improvements are visible?

Highways Minister Lea admitted Thursday his department has only a "five-year solution" — widening the highway between the Thetis interchange and Douglas from two to four lanes — in gestation at the moment.

The project could start late next year, be finished two years later and then cope adequately with its increased sponsibilities, particularly in determining which of them should initiate the real thrust of planning and co-ordinating transportation activities.

Broad Powers for Region

Peter Hammer, the CRD's boyish-faced planner, believes the regional district must assume this major role as catalyst and co-ordinator, in partnership with the senior government as the instrument of enabling legislation and funding.

The regional staff must include transportation planning capability, and this need not burden for only another two years after that. He sees it as merely a holding measure to stave off chaos while long-range transportation policies are worked out; policies that will include transit system planning as a key element.

Lea said his planners and highway designers are working in close co-operation with the provincial bureau of transit and Capital Regional District officials toward such a goal.

But the transportation plan's effectiveness may hinge on agreement between the various agencies involved as to a clear division of re-noted, the tendency used to be for local residential development to take place and then the request go out: "Okay, transportation guys, solve the problem."

The two functions are inextricably linked and interdependent, they agreed; one cannot be properly tackled without reference to the other.

Many of the critics who recently picked holes in the draft regional plan complained that it is not based on a transportation study. Hammer admits that to date there involve bureaucratic empire-building, he says.

A similar, but stronger, stance was adopted recently by the Greater Vancouver Regional District, in a detailed statement submitted to Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer.

"We contend that the regional district should have broad powers to plan, co-ordinate and fund transportation activities . . ." the statement said.

One one point Lea and Hammer emphatically agree: the day of divorcing land-use planning from transportation planning is over. As Lea have been only "some preliminary, very coarse simulations on future traffic volumes," but says a detailed study will follow the adoption of the plan itself.

Hammer says a worthwhile study must look at the "modal split" — in other words, what proportion of the total traffic volume will the various modes of transportation carry and over what period of time. What are the relative costs likely to be?

Because of the "physical constraints" of the present transportation corridors he foresees the inevitability of some form of transit system. Initally this could be a fast-bus service to various centres in the western communities, followed by a rail system using the existing rights-of-way.

The highways minister, too, sees transit as a certainty: "In the future and in any case by the year 2000, in order to handle the traffic loads we see, there is going to have to be a combination of highway facilities and some form of public transportation."

But those are merely planners' visions and even the short-term improvements lie at least three years down the road.

Meanwhile, to those unfortunates who use the Trans-Canada for peak-hour travel, it will continue to be the transfixed highway.

WHAT'S THIS? A word of caution, it seems, for anyone walking on their hands at Government and Broughton. Turning picture right side up — unlike sign — gives view of recent city roadwork along Government, where crews have replaced a storm drain main. Government-Old Town area, where work on underground utilities is in progress, and lower Blanshard road alignment scheme are two of the city's major crater-pocked areas these days.

PEDESTRIAN HAZARD INCREASES

Police Watch Crosswalks

Pedestrian crosswalks — intended to increase safety — don't make it happen by themselves, especially when up to 22,000 cars a day whiz over some of them.

So with winter bringing darkness earlier and stormy weather trimming visibility, Saanich and city police are out to make sure drivers and pedestrians co-operate.

Increasing numbers of drivers are failing to yield to pedestrians at crosswalks, said deputy police chief E. L. Avison, so Saanich police have launched an enforcement campaign.

Sgt. Bill Sommerville of the city police traffic division agrees that November weather increases the crosswalk hazard.

"You have to use a little extra care," he warns motorists.

Avison notes pedestrians have obligations at crosswalks too. It's against the law, for example, to step into a crosswalk in front of a vehicle so close the driver doesn't have a reasonable chance to stop.

Nine of 21 Saanich pedestrians injured in the first eight months of this year were hit at intersections.

Saanich police list the following crosswalks as the ones they consider most hazardous:

Saanich Road at the Town and Country entrance, where 12,500 vehicles pass each day and there are conflicting traffic patterns.

Shelbourne and Cedar, where traffic reaches 20,000 vehicles a day, children use the crossing in peak periods and a pedestrian operated signal at Cedar is being ignored by some drivers.

Trans-Canada Highway and Seaton, where up to 22,000 vehicles a day pass at high average speed and young children cross during peak periods.

McKenzie and Saanich, where the crosswalk is 46 feet long, there's poor sight distance on the crest of a hill and up to 15,000 vehicles a day pass.

Police note that both pedestrians and drivers are required by law to obey instructions of school patrols.

City Thieves Aren't Fussy

Thieves in Victoria over the past week have demonstrated wide-ranging tastes and a penchant to walk off with almost anything that isn't bolted to the floor.

Take these three reports released Thursday by Victoria police:

From the old Victoria Machinery Depot, broken into Wednesday, these items were missing: an IBM master clock worth more than $1,500, a saw, a chair, a table, a clock, a globe and a coat rack.

From a house at 1557 Oakland also broken into Wednesday: three cans of oysters, two cans of fruit juice, a can opener, a can of shrimp, two cans of sardines, one canned ham, three cans of soup, six packages of jelly powder, a bottle of vodka, nine bottles of beer, two serving spoons, two tableknives, and six tablespoons.

The thieves left behind 20 eggs — splattered on the walls and ceiling.

Gardom Votes For Gorst

Liberal MLAs think they have found the ideal job for Esquimalt NDP MLA Jim Gorst.

During legislature debate this morning, Housing Minister Lorne Nicholson said he is so bogged down with official openings for new government housing projects "we'll have to have a designated ribbon-cutter."

"Jimmy Gorst," Liberal MLA Garde Gardom shouted with glee.

Extra Ferry Sailings Out

The stand means there will be no extra sailings to accommodate the usual heavier than normal holiday traffic if it warrants additional trips.

Normal ferry service will not be disrupted, said Iain MacLean, chairman of the licensed component of B.C. Government Employees' Union marine services division.

A strike vote is being taken among the remaining 150 members of the unit, officers employed by the highways and forestry departments, but the majority of other members—500 employed by the ferry service—have voted 94 per cent in favor of strike action.

A strike could occur the weekend of Nov. 16, MacLean said.

The unit's executive will meet Thursday to consider action.

Matters at issue include wages, premium pay for statutory holidays and the right to refuse overtime assignments. Junior engineers are paid $856 and captains earn up to $1,400 a month for commanding stretched vessels.

As if to put salt in ferry users' wounds, the B.C. Ferries Island Princess blew her gaskets.

The engine trouble cancelled ferry service between Kelsey Bay, 50 miles north of Campbell River, and Beaver Cove for 24 hours.

To meet the emergency, the Queen of the Islands was taken out of refit at the Deas dock in Vancouver and after a hasty cleanup, despatched at 1 p.m., manned by a scratch crew, to Kelsey Bay.

She is expected to make the 11½-hour trip in time to take over for the first scheduled sailing Saturday at 7 a.m.

Increase Services With Less Taxes?

There was a rhetorical question from the audience for Oak Bay's aldermanic candidates Thursday night which summarizes a dilemma facing many of the political hopefuls.

How can you pledge on the one hand to try and hold the tax line, one listener asked at the all-candidates meeting, and at the same time undertake to increase municipal services?

"You can't," he said after hearing some of the candidates wrestle with the problem.

Nine of the 10 candidates were on hand at Windsor Park pavilion for the meeting, organized by the Windsor Park Neighborhood Group. Only veteran Ald. Douglas Watts was absent because of illness and he sent a written message.

But only 60 or so of Oak Bay's 11,575 voters were in the audience, which heard five-minute talks from each candidate before tossing its own questions.

Three council seats with two-year terms will be filled in the election Nov. 16 as well as one seat to complete the one-year term of the late Harry Graham.

Incumbents Shirley Dowell, Gohn Goult and Watts are seeking re-election and have been challenged by Neil Swainson, a political science professor at UVic, and Clifford Stretch, a realtor.

The other five candidates are all seeking the council seat with the one-year term remaining. They are school teacher Keith Palmer, retired ship's captain Godfrey Lomas, marine pilot John Horne, retired recreationist Isabel Craig and realtor Frank Butler.

Some platform points:

Dowell: wants continuing policies to retain and improve residential quality. Opposes spread of apartment construction and favors tighter building standards for them.

Goult: opposes spot zoning, will accept low-rise apartments in zones now established for them. Says council, conscious of 30 per cent of municipality's population is 65 or over, is now directing itself to services for people.

Stretch: believes in a minimum of growth for municipality, that municipality must live within its budget, and that some basic services, such as the water system, have been too long neglected. He's disappointed by some deteriorating streets.

Swainson: wants adequate residential housing, with attached dining facilities, for elderly who need it. Believes community's residential character can be maintained indefinitely if council displays courageous leadership.

Watts (through written message read to meeting): would appreciate another term to see recreation centre project through to completion and into efficient operation. Opposes any more apartment construction overlooking Willows Beach.

Butler: believes careful budgetting is vital with any major expenditure going to voters through referendum. Favors more incentives to stimulate construction of rental units for senior citizens.

Craig: called for co-operation between governments of core municipalities, said close relationship between aldermen and individual citizens in Oak Bay should be continued.

Horne: would keep constant vigil to maintain character of Oak Bay, supports present council policies and is disturbed by suggestions of enforced amalgamation.

Lomas: Believes municipality must hold line on taxes and pay for services as it goes, keeping capital expenditures to minimum. Opposes high rises, favors limit of three storeys on apartments.

Palmer: wants character of Oak Bay preserved, special consideration for elderly and those on fixed incomes, removal of school taxes from perperty levy.

THE WHIP-ER, THE WHIP-EE

Being the lone Tory in the legislature poses more than the obvious political problems. Conservative Leader Scott Wallace admitted Wednesday.

"When I take the role of party whip, all I ever get is backlash," Wallace told the house sparking a round of laughter.

"Before I did quite a bit of looking around — now I only have to look forward."

Wallace sits front and alone in the Tory ranks since defection of former Conservative MLA Hugh Curtis to the Socreds.

DRAUGHT BEER UP FIVE CENTS

Two bits will no longer purchase a nine-ounce glass of draught beer in the province.

The Liquor Administration Branch today announced a five-cent increase to 30 cents for each glass immediately.

LAB general manager Bill Bruce said the premises which offer entertainment may apply to the branch for further increases. The branch is also reviewing a breweries' request for wholesale price increases.

The 5-cent increase is not expected to please the B.C. Motel Association. The association earlier pushed for a floating price to cover increased costs of wages and taxes.

Commenting on the increase, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said, "Every decision we make is always based on economic facts, whether pleasant or unpleasant."

The price has not increased since 1971 when a glass of brew went from 20 to 25 cents.

Emergency Wheat Limits Plan Agreed

Times News Services

ROME — Canada and other major grain-producing countries have agreed to consider an emergency plan limiting foreign wheat sales to make seven million tons available to ward off starvation in Asia and Africa over the next eight months.

Addeke Boerma, director-general of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, presented the plan to a closed meeting earlier this week of the principal wheat-exporting countries and some of their biggest customers.

Besides Canada it was attended by the United States, the Soviet Union, Australia, Argentina, the European Common Market countries and China.

Boerma asked for a response by next Tuesday.

A U.S. spokesman said that because of the large amount involved and low wheat stocks available, Boerma's plan obviously poses delicate problems.

The seven million tons needed until the 1975 harvest begins normally would cost $1.5 billion, including the cost of transporting it to the needy countries.

Sources at the food conference said Boerma in effect asked the exporting nations to limit supplies available to such major industrialized importers as Britain, West Germany, Japan and Italy and make the grain available on favorable loan terms or as outright grants to countries unable to pay for it.

The U.S. has decided to commit additional quantities of food assistance to Egypt, following earlier agreements on tobacco and wheat.

U.S. officials also said here Thursday that the Middle East countries are expected to receive about 15 per cent of the total U.S. food assistance package in this fiscal year.

Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz confirmed that he would fly to Cairo Saturday, see President Anwar Sadat, sign a new food-aid agrement and then go on to Syria for talks.

At the general conference meeting Thursday, China attacked the economic policies of the world's major trading powers.

Vice-Agriculture Minister Hao Chung-shih blamed the world food crisis on mass exploitation of developing countries by industrialized nations, principally the Soviet Union and the United States.

Without mentioning either country by name, he denounced "the ugly features of social-imperialism," and "superpower speculation and profiteering."

FOOD OR— DRINKS

ROME (UPI) — The delegate from Bangladesh stood up solemnly and warned the world food conference that mass starvation could lead to a cataclysmic degeneration of human society.

But only a smattering of delegates showed up at the conference hall to hear him. Many skipped the grim speech to attend a glass-clinking cocktail party hosted by Ghana in a room next door.

Bangladesh Agriculture Minister Abdus Samad Azad looked out, at the nearly empty hall Thursday night and said failure to combat the threat of famine would be "a long-lasting crime against man and God."

"Looking beyond the immediate, one may discern that starvation and malnutrition are not only eroding the efficiency of the work force in the developing world, but are also leading to a genetic degeneration," he said.

Only about 50 of the more than 1,000 delegates showed up to hear Azad warn of a world with "two classes of human beings — one affluent, aggressive and authoritarian, the other depressed, servile and degraded."

Two Killed In Another Pub Blast

LONDON (Reuter) — Two men died and nearly 30 persons were injured, some seriously, when a bomb explosion ripped through a bar used by off-duty servicemen in southeast London.

Among those injured in the blast were two women soldiers and at least six other service personnel.

Red Flag 74 claimed responsibility for a series of bomb attacks recently, including two blasts at bars used by servicemen in the south England town of Guildford in which five army recruits died and 65 people were injured.

A member of Scotland Yard's bomb squad said today it was believed that the bomb, weighing five to 10 pounds, might have been thrown through a bar window by two women and a man seen outside in a car.

A witness said the interior of the bar was devastated and strewn with broken bottles and smashed furniture.

"There was a young man with a hole in his stomach and others with horrible wounds in their faces and bodies," he said.

In England, 24 persons have lost their lives since February, 1972, in bomb attacks directed against servicemen.

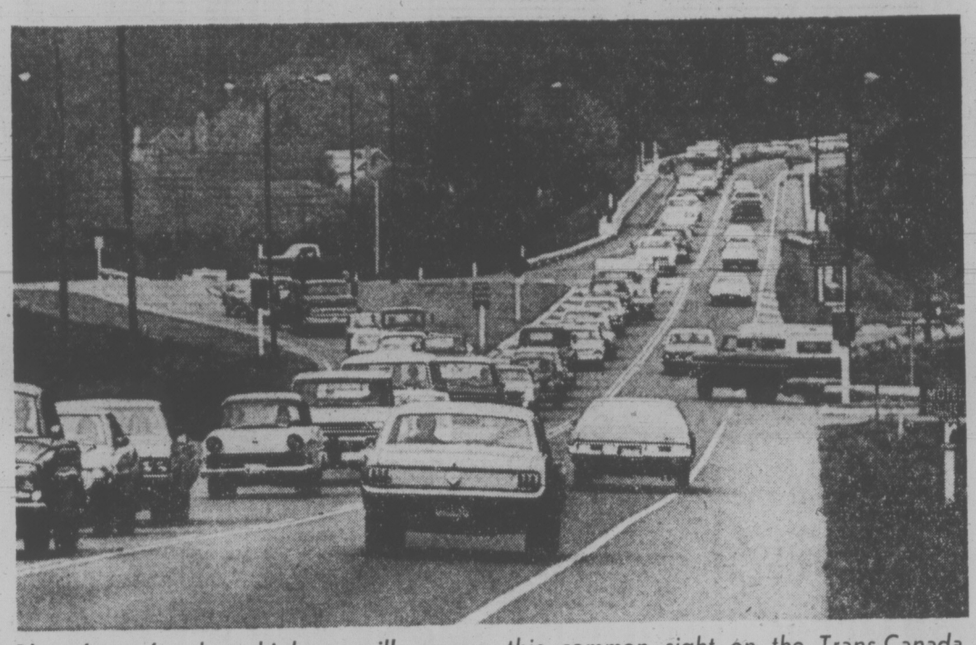
Trans-Canada Widening Set



Plans for a four-lane highway will remove this common sight on the Trans-Canada

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Work will probably start late next year on widening the Trans-Canada Highway between the Thetis Lake interchange and the Town and Country shopping centre, Highways Minister Graham Lea said Thursday.

But Lea said the widening of that section of the Trans-Canada from two to four lanes will be only an interim measure to handle traffic needs over the next five years.

His department is basing its long-term planning on the principle that the artery eventually must have at least an eight-lane capacity to cope with future growth — irrespective of other transportation improvements such as a transit system.

When that stage is reached and the minister didn't make any predictions on dates — the four central lanes will be reserved exclusively for "inter-regional" or through traffic and buses, with the flanking lanes handling local commuter and other traffic.

Lea said extensive land acquisitions will be necessary for a highway of such width, but those still lie some years ahead. In the meantime his department will "safeguard" the right-of-way by ensuring that no development in conflict with the plan occurs on land fringing the highway.

Dick Readshaw, director of highway designs and surveys in Lea's department, said the eight-lane capacity would have to be provided over the entire stretch of highway from the Town and Country centre to Langford, in the vicinity of the Trans-Canada-Spencer intersection.

At that location it would revert to the standard four-lane inter-regional route.

Lea, Readshaw and deputy highways minister Howard Sturrock were discussing in a Times interview the problems already affecting the Trans-Canada (see page 19), those stemming from continued residential growth over the next quarter-century and the possible remedies.

Lea said he agreed with the highway planners' view that this artery poses "probably the most unique and complex transportation problem in North America . . . because we have no other options open" (in the form of alternative transportation corridors).

"At the moment we feel we have only a five-year solution between Town and Country and Thetis, if we can get going next year with a start on our four-lane program," he added.

Readshaw estimated that if work could start on the widening project in late 1975 it would take at least another two years to complete.

Under the improvements, he said, the ramps at the Thetis Lake interchange and the intersections along the route — at Helmcken, Burnside and Tillicum — would be redesigned to ensure smoother traffic flow.

The light-controlled intersections would be upgraded to about the standard of those on the Pat Bay Highway, while other minor intersections would probably have to be eliminated because access from them to a four-lane highway would be too dangerous.

Readshaw said the roads in question are mainly those joining the Trans-Canada in the Portage Inlet area, and special "service roads" would have to be provided as a replacement.

Sturrock said the widening job would be co-ordinated with the other major project of extending Blanshard to line up with the Trans-Canada, via an 800-foot tunnel beneath the

Trustees Charge Pressure

By LINDA HUGHES

School trustees in B.C. are charging the provincial government bowed to "pressure tactics" and illegal strikes by teachers in the emergency arbitration legislation introduced Thursday.

"The B.C. Teachers' Federation was clearly the ghost writer of the interim legislation," said B.C. School Trustees' Association president Eileen Madson.

She said the legislation shows the government has been "remiss in its duties to the children and taxpayers of this province."

The legislation was presented by Education Minister Eileen Dailly to solve the impasse in teacher-trustee negotiations for their 1975 contracts.

It first extends the deadline for conciliation by two weeks to Nov. 29 in the hopes more districts will reach settlements before the date for mandatory arbitration.

Secondly, it states that when the contracts finally go to arbitration, it shall be done on a district by district basis and no arbitrator shall be ap-

$250M Fisheries Plan To 'Rehabilitate' Rivers

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Recreation and Conservation Minister Jack Radford said today the basic objective of a proposed $256,000-million federal fisheries program is to rehabilitate and restore the productivity of British Columbia's salmon streams and rivers.

Hatcheries are not a major factor in the program, he said.

"We would like to get our damaged rivers into shape in order to restore the salmon population to the levels of the 1800's," he said.

Radford was commenting on a federal fisheries department announcement that a program is being prepared to increase the production of spawning salmon from 25 to 50 million a year.

The minister said the program would have to be approved by federal and provincial governments, and if accepted, would be carried out over a period of 20 years.

He explained while the federal government had jurisdiction over commercial fisheries, the province had jurisdiction over land surrounding rivers and streams and watersheds.

"There has to be a mutual agreement," he said. "We are prepared to co-operate in the implementation of such a program. We have ignored our valuable fisheries resource far too long."

Radford said in the long run, economically, the fisheries resource was as valuable, perhaps more so, than logging.

"Logging is renewable every 70 years," he said. "That is once you have cut the trees you have to wait 70 years for another crop. But salmon is renewable every two and five years."

"You don't have to spray them, protect them against fire and build costly roads," he said. "They are also a valuable source of protein."

Radford cited as an example the Adams River, north of Shuswap Lake, where more than one million salmon spawned this year.

Two internationally-known salmon experts said the federal fisheries program was a breakthrough in the fight to save B.C. salmon streams and rivers.

Roderick Haig-Brown, a member of the International Salmon Commission, said the program was good as long as it didn't "deteriorate to building hatcheries and show pieces."

"It means money would be used to repair damage to such rivers as the Stellako, near Prince George," he said. "This is the river on which Williston allowed log driving, against the recommendations of the fisheries department, except the one he cooked up."

Howard English, a member of the commission's advisory committee, agreed with Haig-Brown that the program was "excellent."

"Rivers are the most economical way of producing fish," he said. "But apart from that by preserving rivers, you preserve the quality of life."

Major Project Said Delayed by Bank

By ROB BULL

MONTREAL (FP) — The Star says a mammoth construction project by Canadian Pacific has been delayed at the request of the Bank of Montreal which it says is in financial difficulties.

The bank has denied it is having money problems.

Demolition of the downtown Laurentian Hotel scheduled for closing in mid-November, has been put off for 18 months, the paper said, at the demand of the bank which had planned to use part of the planned development as its new head office.

The newspaper says the bank is heavily committed to a $160 million project in Toronto, that its shares dropped from a high earlier this year on the stock market of $21 to $12, and quotes an analyst at Wood Gundy as saying the bank has a capital problem and would have difficulty raising money by a debenture issued today.

The Star also says there has been talk in the financial community of the bank's losses on its entry into the Master Charge credit card scheme.

The newspaper says further that the Bank of Montreal, like Lloyds Bank of England and the Franklin Bank of New York, has suffered heavy losses in foreign exchange dealings.

While both the bank and Canadian Pacific agree that no long-term commitment has been made between the two, a bank spokesman says "The bank's financial position has no bearing on these negotiations."

"The bank," he added, "has not suffered losses in foreign exchange in any manner whatsoever. That is categorical. We had, moreover, a $50 million debenture issue in August which was successful."

He said the Master Charge program was "away ahead of schedule" and had already obtained the number of cardholders and merchants for the plan which its organizers had previously postulated would belong in five year's time.

"There has been an acceleration of the cost of this program along with its accelerated growth," he said, "but I wouldn't call this losses."

Fines Proposed to Replace Prisons

OTTAWA (CP) — A radical system of fines, restitution and compensation which would see prisons become more of a last resort is proposed in the latest working papers of the Law Reform Commission of Canada.

The commissioners say the system would see the law for the first time give some real consideration to the victim of crime.

It would introduce fines based on income in place of unproductive imprisonment of non-violent offenders, a system that would make the burden of the penalty equal for rich and poor.

Where restitution was inadequate or impossible, such as when the offender is not caught, the government would step in with compensation in many cases — paying from a "reparation chest" into which the revenue from fines was placed.

The two papers, released Thursday, also introduce the concept of working in place of fines or restitution, but do not spell it out fully.

The concepts are radical and show the commissioners joining a growing number of experts who are finding prison is not the answer to much non-violent crime and that the victim must have some consideration in law. In the case of the geared-to-income fines, the commission drew heavily from Swedish law.

The commission says it is nonsensical that the convicted offender rarely is made to pay for the damage he has done.

"Isn't it surprising that the victim generally gets nothing for his loss?"

The commissioners come to this conclusion: "If the lawless wilfully break the rules that protect our social values they ought to be held accountable and provided with the opportunity to restore the harm done to the victim and the social fabric."

They say attempting to reform the prisoner into a productive participant in society is a costly undertaking, the effectiveness of which remains in doubt.

So they make suggestions under which the perpetrators of most non-violent crimes, once found guilty, would be ordered to make restitution. This could cover psychological, physical or financial loss, and include an apology, monetary payment or work order.

When full restitution was not possible, state compensation would apply in cases of personal injury and property

Swimming Title Retained by Mt. Douglas

It was Mt. Douglas in front again for the second straight year, but there were a few surprises when the Greater Victoria High School Swimming Championships were held Thursday at the Crystal Pool.

Paced by club swimmers Karen and Cathy Rushcall and Rob Grundison, Mt. Doug smashed 10 records and tied another one while racking up a total of 452 points in boys' and girls' "A" and "B" events.

Oak Bay was second with 331 points, after a strong showing by the school's "B" division swimmers, and Belmont-Fisher was third.

But the big surprises came from St. Michael's University School, which scored 20 more points than Mt. Doug to take the boys' team title, and from Dunsmuir, which finished a strong fourth over all with 271 points, although it is competing in senior high school competition for the first time this year.

St. Michael's was led by Bill Hope, who set a record in the 200-metre individual medley and finished second over 100 metres in butterfly, backstroke and freestyle.

Karen Rushcall set three records while winning the 200-metre individual medley, the 100-metre butterfly and the 50-metre butterfly.

Sister Cathy broke records in the 100-metre backstroke and 50-metre freestyle and was second to Karen in the 200-metre individual medley.

The other Mt. Doug records came in the 100-metre mixed relay and the "B" girls' 400-metre freestyle relay. As well, Freya Cook of Mt. Doug tied a record in the "B" girls' 50-metre backstroke event.

Doug Portelance of Belmont and Briony Penn of Norfolk House also gave fine individual performances at the one-day meet. Portelance set records in the "A" boys' 50-metre and 100-metre backstroke events while Miss Penn set a record in the 50-metre backstroke.

A double winner in girls' "A" events was Judy Newman of Oak Bay. She took the 50-metre and 100-metre breaststroke races.

It was only the second time as runner-up for Oak Bay in the 25-year history of the swimming championships. Mt. Doug snatched the title for the first time last year after Oak Bay had been champion for 23 years in a row.

Barbara Packford of Vic High smashed two records in the girls' "B" events, setting new marks while winning the 50-metre freestyle and the 50-metre breaststroke. And Leslie Shumka of Claremont also set a record in the girls' "B" 50-metre butterfly.

The "A" events were for swimmers who are members of local clubs and Mt. Doug took that title with 229 points, with Belmont second, 47 points behind. The "B" events were for "novice" swimmers who don't compete for clubs and Oak Bay won that section by 11 points over Mt. Doug.

It's Hockey Show-Time Down at the Ice Rink

The organ plays, the beat goes on, and it's fight-night and show-time all rolled into one down at Memorial Arena. The Cougars pick up the tempo and win another hockey game, and new-found fans come from near and far to pay homage to new idols and new heroes.

But you've got to get there early. That's when the ritual begins.

Two attractive young figure skaters, each carrying a flag, Canada's and B.C.'s, slowly circle the teams, stand at attention at centre ice while the anthem is being played, and then demurely skate off.

It is a dignified scene, quiet, peaceful, patriotic, and completely belies what is to follow.

Because once the puck is dropped the mass hypnosis begins.

Pat Ginnell is putting on his best seller from centre stage and those who have answered the call are the object of his attention. This is hockey's strong man of the west in action. He came from Flin Flon with the promise that people here would like what they would see, but he didn't say the Cougars would do it all to music.

There's a pause in the play, and the organist takes the cue, he touches the keys, the chords respond. On the bench arms waving, Ginnell picks up the beat. Faster and faster plays the organist. Ginnell responds. The crowd begins a rythmic clapping . . . faster and faster . . . louder and louder . . . then play recommences. The organ is silent.

The Spell That Lingers

The effect is tremendous. The clapping stops almost as quickly as it had begun. An eerie din remains. But now the crowd is alive, and vibrant, spoiling for action. A good play brings appreciative handclapping, a rousing check, a yell of delight, and an honest-to-goodness fight, a mighty roar of approval. The fans have been caught in the frenzy. They can't let go.

Again there is a pause, a line change, and the organist misses nothing. He begins slowly and quietly at first, but increasing the tempo with each bar: Ginnell follows suit, openly appeals for fan response, gets it, the puck is dropped, and the sound track stops as abruptly as before.

Repeat this scene 20 or 30 times an evening and you've got the newest game in town on Cougar game night.

For Ginnell, the hypnosis is self-inflicted, and just as obviously he is seeking to mesmerize his players as he exhorts them to greater efforts. By his actions and incantations on the bench, he is simply imploring the fans to further pledge their faith.

"Come on, folks, and join the crowd. Let it all hang out. Let the kids know how you feel. Show them some gratitude for putting Victoria back on the hockey map." That's the tune.

Sure, it's Ginnell's show — even if he doesn't wave the pompoms and wear a grass skirt — and it was likely perfected when he was at Flin Flon, a built-in winner for a Saturday night mining town, and every act a rousing success. No wonder it has been tough for other clubs to win back there.

Now, he's brought his own personally conducted and personally-directed presentation to our town and already the people are screaming back "we believe".

Not Every Act a Hit

Not everywhere though. Sometimes Ginnell out-psyches himself. Such as the night at Medicine Hat he pulled his team off the ice, didn't get the players back in time and the referee called the game. There may have been extenuating circumstances, but this type of act is uncalled for, and totally inexcusable and indefensible. Besides it is not a model of control or direction for the players and shouldn't be condoned.

So that's the danger, but then that's the man's lifestyle. He is totally immersed in his job. And despite heavy fines, repeated suspensions and dire warnings, he shrugs off criticism. It is fair to say he is an advocate of intimidating hockey, one way or another, hopefully all Cougar foes being reduced to eventually fighting at long range and with extreme care. To him this approach is his way of selling the game, the team and his particular brand of hockey.

And if he just happens to get a winner selling it, so much the better. Besides being a tribute to his coaching ability, wasn't that the overall plan in the first place?

So the Cougars belong, and if Ginnell's methods are sometimes questioned, even violently disputed — moralists will never agree — down at the arena the organ plays and the beat goes on. And if a noisy rink is aiding the Cougars it also sounds grounds for belief that Saturday's game against Flin Flon could be a complete sellout.

Because that's where Pat's brand of "show-time" all began.

Sparkling Effort By Flyer Goalie

Goalie Ken Stanton came up with a spectacular effort Thursday night to lead Fuller Lake Flyers to a 4-2 decision over Esquimalt Buccaneers in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game Thursday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

In another league game, Juan de Fuca Gulls tripped Victoria Nixons 5-3 at memorial Arena.

Stanton made a total of 54 saves, including 24 during a furious second period, to hold off the league-leading Buccaneers.

Mike Gernaghan scored what turned out to be the winning goal at 9:41 of the third period and Gene Wrigglesworth connected with his second goal of the game at 15:09 to supply the insurance tally.

Doug LaFleur was the other Fuller Lake marksman. Gary Bechtold scored both goals for Buccaneers.

PHIL'S SHAKEUPS WORK FOR CANUCKS

KANSAS CITY Coach Phil Maloney did some third-period shaking up here Thursday night and it paid off as his Vancouver Canucks pulled out a 6-4 victory over the stubborn Kansas City Scouts.

It was the Canucks' fourth straight win — equalling a club record set at the tail-end of last season — and moved them out of a tie with Chicago Black Hawks and into first place in the National Hockey League's Smythe Division.

The win also maintained the Canucks' near-perfect record on the road this season. They now have four wins and a tie in enemy territory.

Maloney made several late changes, including sending goalkeeper Gary Smith on to replace Ken Lockett for the final 14 minutes.

Vancouver blew three leads before Smith came in with the score tied 4-4.

Bob Dailey and Paulin Bordeleau scored for Vancouver in the first four minutes. The teams swapped goals by Jim McElmury of Kansas City and Gerry O'Flaherty of the Canucks but the Scouts tied it up at 3-3 on power-play goals by Bart Crashley and Robin Burns.

After a scoreless second period, John Gould made it 4-3 for Vancouver only 46 seconds into the final period but Ed Gilbert tied it up again a couple of minutes later.

"I had to shake things up," Maloney said later. "I told the guys that we play 80 games and there are some nights when some fellows aren't playing as well as they might. It's my job to find out who isn't, and not play them as much. As it turned out, it helped."

Slipping Days Over, Golden Don a Threat

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — For the first half of the 1974 racing season, Golden Don was slipping on dirt tracks and so was his career record.

Three races after taking over the big four-year-old colt, trainer Kay E. Jensen had seen enough. He decided to campaign Golden Don in turf races, and a streak of 14 races without a victory came to an end.

Three triumphs in six grass starts earned Golden Don an invitation to the $150,000 Washington, D.C. International and he could be a threat to defending champion Dahlia in Saturday's 1½-mile turf race at Laurel Race Course.

After winning a division of the Brighton Beach Handicap and the Manhattan Handicap, Golden Don was two lengths behind Dahlia while finishing fourth in the Man o' War on Oct. 12.

Three entries in Saturday's 23rd running of the International were sired by former participants in the race. They include Margouillat, by Diatome, the 1965 winner; Marduk, by Orsini, a 1958 starter; and Mistigri, whose sire Misti competed in both 1961 and 1963.

Jockey Ron Turcotte of Grand Falls, N.B., has the ride aboard Marduck.

Dushinski Has Mission

REGINA (CP) — Coach Eagle Keys and defensive end Bill Baker of British Columbia Lions probably feel they have something to prove when they enter the Western Football Conference semi-final at Taylor Field Sunday, but Ted Dushinski of Saskatchewan Roughriders is in the same boat, Dushinski, a veteran defensive back, returned to the Roughrider lineup this season after the Lions couldn't make a deal for him.

"They didn't offer us anything we could use," Saskatchewan general manager Ken Preston said Thursday night. "I'm glad they didn't because he's been playing extremely well since he came back."

Dushinski was so certain he would wind up with B.C. that he moved to Vancouver. Now he is a regular in the defensive backfield beside Lorne Richardson. "Yes, I would think Ted feels he has something to prove," said Preston.

Another perennial returnee to the lineup is offensive tackle Clyde Brock, who often retires under pressure of work only to return when lured by playoff money and old loyalties.

"Clyde always plays well," said Preston. "He's been back about five weeks and his experience is a big plus."

Saskatchewan has a big advantage, both in years of service and in playoff experience, but even more important is the physical condition of the Roughriders.

"We're using the same lineup as against Montreal in the final game of the season," Preston said. "We have no major injuries and few minor ones."

The Lions aren't so lucky. Quarterback Don Moorhead is a doubtful starter. Even if he can play, he probably will have to share the work with Peter Liske, the former Calgary quarterback who has been absorbing the Lions' system for only a few weeks.

Running back Lou Harris is expected to be in top shape after resting an injured ankle for two weeks, and defensive end Baker is likely to return following an ankle injury.

Baker spent several seasons with the Roughriders. He and coach Keys both feel the Lions are ready to win, although they concede Saskatchewan quarterback Ron Lancaster is perhaps the toughest playoff competitor they know.

A full house is expected for the game, to be televised nationally on the CTV network.

"We've sold more than 19,000 seats," said Preston. "Capacity is about 22,000."

ROBERTS CLEARED TO REJOIN CATS

Gordie Roberts, embroiled in a jurisdictional dispute between Victoria Cougars of the Western Canada Hockey League and Sudbury Wolves of the Ontario Hockey League, is now free to rejoin the Cougars.

Ellis Achtem, the Cougars' lawyer, confirmed this morning that an injunction allowing Roberts to play pending the outcome of the dispute had been approved by a Toronto judge Thursday.

He also said Roberts' east-west transfer was expected to be completed today.

This means the Detroit-born Roberts will be able to don a Cougar uniform again in time for the game at 8:30 p.m. Saturday against Flin flon bombers in Memorial Arena. The dispute has kept Roberts out of action for almost three weeks.

Capitals Just Gawk As Bruins Run Wild

By The Canadian Press

The fledgling Washington Capitals were "just in awe" of the National Hockey League powerhouse Boston Bruins, says Jim Anderson, coach of the expansion team.

Terrorized might have been a better word. The Bruins downed the Capitals 10-4 in Boston Thursday night. It was the eighth straight loss for Washington.

Bobby Orr scored three goals, assisted on three others and ran up his league-leading total to 28 points. Phil Esposito had a goal and three assists to bring him up to 25 points.

"The team was just in awe of them," said Anderson. "Playing the Bruins, playing in Boston Garden, a kid like 19-year-old winger Mike Marson watches those guys pass the puck around and he's just in awe.

"I know what it's like. I've played against these guys myself."

In other games, Philadelphia Flyers blanked Minnesota North Stars 2-0, Los Angeles Kings beat Pittsburgh Penguins 5-3, and Vancouver Canucks defeated Kansas City Scouts 6-4. The league "expanded too fast," said Anderson, and "it's going to take three or four years for these kids to do anything."

"If the organization stays together without cutting its throats up, it's going to come together."

The Los Angeles victory at Pittsburgh extended the Kings' unbeaten string to seven games and gave the Division 3 leaders a seven-point lead over second-place Montreal Canadiens. And it extended the Pittsburgh winless streak to eight games.

Penguins winger Lowell MacDonald was ejected from the game during a second-period fight, which also resulted in major penalties against Pittsburgh Syl Apps and Mike Corrigan of the Kings.

At Philadelphia, goalie Bernie Parent had to make only 18 saves for the shutout over Minnesota while Rick MacLeish and Bill Barber supplied the scoring.

Minnesota goalie Fern Rivard was taken to hospital for x-rays after he was knocked against the goal cross-bar, injuring his back in the second period.

Sub Powers Rockets

By The Associated Press

Cliff Meely of Houston Rockets thinks he is good enough to be in the starting lineup. Maybe so, but he also is valuable as a reserve.

The 6-foot-8 forward, who earlier Thursday complained of being demoted to the bench and asked to be traded, entered the game in the second quarter with his team trailing 40-28 and picked up 11 points before half time to lead Houston to a 103-93 National Basketball Association victory over Milwaukee Bucks.

Milwaukee, which battled Boston to seven games in the NBA final last year, has just one victory in its first 10 outings, the worst record in the league except for the expansion New Orleans Jazz, 0-10.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Atlanta Hawks edged Phoenix Suns 109-108 and Seattle SuperSonics beat Golden State Warriors 104-93.

Wonderful World Of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

Dear Dr. Miller: It's a kicks watching this tiny kitten walk up to Jumbo's dish and start eating his dog food. Jumbo backs off and stands there waiting anxiously for Tiny, who's a slow eater, to finish. When she finally does walk away, then he dives into his food and it's gone in seconds. The funny part is if a kitten will ignore cat food in a dish a few feet away, or anywhere else, then Jumbo does too. Does this mean dog food is better? — T.S.

Dear T.S.: No, not for cats, and even less so for kittens. Cats actually require almost four times the dietary protein dogs do. Kittens require an even higher percentage of protein than adult cats. Cats also need more vitamin B complex than some some of the other vitamins, so dog food would tend to be deficient in these areas, and perhaps in vitamins as well. A good dog food then, is not a good cat food. Whether Jumbo helps you or not, you have to train Tiny to eat her food, not his.

Dear Dr. Miller: I live in the city and don't have any good places to play with my dog. What's the best way to play with a big dog in a big city, anyway?—D.K.

Dear D.K.: Citified conditions contribute to canine claustrophobia. Ponderous pooches are particularly prone to this problem. The "best" way of exercising such a dog — which is to seek out the least crowded nearby area and exercise him there (on a leash of course) — is usually woefully inadequate. The difficulties of keeping a large dog contented in congested areas should be carefully considered beforehand. While many smaller dogs can adapt, particularly where the owner has adequate time to spend with them, play and exercise problems increase in proportion to size, varying considerably among breeds. A lean, 50-pound Afghan or Airedale might require several times the amount of exercise necessary to satisfy a 50-pound basset. When you already have the dog, of whatever size, you obviously do the best you can. You can't really make up for lack of adequate activity, though a maximum amount of attention helps some. So does a careful measuring of your dog's food to avoid obesity by providing minimum caloric requirements.

Dear Dr. Miller: Our cat Mamoona is a Siamese and has always been vociferous. This has never bothered us until recently when her breath has become unbearable. She is 12 years old, apparently healthy, but unless we can remedy her problem I'm afraid the family will vote to take away her house keys and she will spend her remaining years outdoors. — E.I.

Dear E.I.: As long as she has the breath to carry on a conversation it is unlikely Mamoonia will ever stop talking. Siamese seldom do. But a lock-out is not the answer to your mutual problem. Aside from the mutual loss of companionship, the hazards, stresses and strains of a sudden shift to an outdoor environment would probably mean Mamoonia would not have any final years to look forward to. She probably would not last very long. The answer then is "bearable" breath, or better. Her doctor can probably accomplish this. Since most felines of this age (and younger) require dental work to avoid halitosis, it is reasonable to assume her hang-up can be reversed with a proper amount of care. (There are other possible causes for bad breath, of course, but dental troubles in this age group are most common.)

By AB KENT
Times Staff

This is a requiem. For a hamburger. And for chili con carne in a hot earthenware pot, for lemon and hot mince pies, for a clean counter, glistening cups of fresh-brewed coffee, quick and friendly service.

This is goodbye to the Jolly Friar.

For more than 25 years the innocuous little lunchstand at Blanshard and Cormorant served a devoted clientele which sang the Friar's praises around the civilized world.

On Nov. 30 the Friar retires with no prospect of reopening.

Its architecture — simple white cement blocks outside — was unique inside, best described as mud-Tudor and burnt beams, enhanced by a modest collection of memorabilia, artifacts of bygone times often on loan from customers long since gone.

It had a warmth — except in the coldest winter winds — that seemed to exude as much from the walls themselves as from the dented copper boiler and the old black grill with its flickering blue gas fire.

From that sturdy sheet of boiler plate came the most succulent short-orders known to that most critical of diners; the noon luncher. The menu was brief but beautiful, the prices still within sight despite the cost of beef, cheese, pastry and coffee.

A few of the customers have been eating there since the door opened in 1949, and many have made it their steady lunchbreak for more than a decade.

Some dream and drool about Beef Burger a la Friar in exotic corners of the earth and even casual visitors make it a point to eat there at least once during a stay in Victoria.

The Jolly Friar may be the only Pacific Coast diner to fill orders for Toronto and overseas. A cheeseburger was once air-mailed to the U.K. for a homesick client. A Toronto man who stopped in often would take two home with him by Air Canada to share with his wife.

The blackened wood for the beams was salvaged by the original owner, Herb Woodhead, from the Willows arena fire; the recipes for relish, sweet mustard and chili were homemade; the 16 stools were hard.

Woodhead, how retired, says the Friar is operated today just as it was when he erected it, patterned after an Elizabethan pub in the village of Yarm, which was near the airfield where he served in the RCAF during the Second World War.

But today the style is so non-conforming the health inspectors would not permit removal or reconstruction, and Wally Connorton, who bought the place in 1962, plans to let it fall under the wrecker's hammer when the site is cleared for a new office block.

Like some of the customers, manager Ordie Schmidt has been with the Friar a long time — 24½ years last month. Number two girl Doreen Moreau has been there 10 years.

They indicate they'll be glad for the rest, and Ordie philosophically says she'll find something else to do. But you get the impression they worry a little about where their customers will eat when the notice runs out Dec. 1.

You see, there are places that promote their food, their atmosphere and service but don't mean it. The Jolly Friar means it and never mentions it.

In lands no less enlightened, heroes have their tombs. Somewhere in Victoria there must be a crevasse to enshrine a Jolly Friar Spanish Beef Burger.

Soviet Weekly: Nyet to Smoking

In a striking attack on smoking in this country, where antismoking advertisements are infrequent, Krokodil devoted an entire 16-page issue to the question. It disclosed that smoking had grown four times as rapidly as population since 1970.

Domestic cigarette production this year, according to Vladimir A. Kholostov, chief of the tobacco administration of the food industry, will hit 373 billion — enough for everyone over 14 to smoke 100 packs a year even without sizable imports from Bulgaria, Cuba, Yugoslavia and the United States. By comparison, the average American aged 18 or over is smoking over 200 packs a year.

The rise in Soviet cigarette production since 1970 has been 15.5 per cent, while the rise in population has been just under 4 per cent.

The Krokodil article confirmed what almost any Soviet citizen will tell a visitor that smoking is increasingly fashionable and popular especially among women and young people, despite the introduction of more expensive brands.

The rough-cut Primas, cheapest of all, still sell for 14 kopecks (18 cents) a pack. The more popular Stolichnye or Rossiskiye cost 40 kopecks (52 cents), and some people will pay 60 kopecks (78 cents) for Yava Longs.

Krokodil, deploring the typical Soviet practice of citing bad examples in the West whenever trying to combat harmful practices at home, notes the timidity of articles by doctors quoting findings abroad on the harmful effects of smoking. "In a word, all these terrors take place somewhere in far-off lands or in the countries of capitalism," Krokodil says. "And our smoker is left with the brave hope that this does not affect him personally."

Another target is social pressure, especially from elders and superiors. Krokodil criticizes stars of stage and screen for using smoking as a device to cover any situation, blames teachers for setting bad examples for students and chides parents for encouraging their youngsters to start the habit.

A cartoon portrays a group of boys smoking near the rest room in their school while smoke clouds pours out of the teachers' room down the hall. The caption reads: "Our teachers are just like children."

A cartoon, unusual for the Soviet Press shows God in heaven wearing a gas mask as protection against rising clouds of smoke from earth and muttering, "There's only one way out — we'll have to have another flood." Elsewhere a cartoon shows the serpent in the Garden of Eden offering Adam and Eve a pack of Soviet cigarettes.

In many public places signs are posted forbidding smoking except in special rooms. Korkodil observed that the signs are widely ignored and acknowledged:

"Such a sign hangs in our office too, but you cannot see it for the smoke."

NO MORE STATIC WITH BOYFRIEND

Work done at the Health Sciences Centre has allowed her to insulate herself from the problems created when her boyfriend's ham radio equipment triggered her artificial arm into uncontrollable action.

Miss Iverson is the first recipient in Canada, and possibly the world, of an experimental transmitter which was implanted in a muscle to control simple functions by her artificial forearm.

As yet another result of space-age technology, the ceramic-encased transmitter replaces bothersome electrode attachments to her arm, a system which could be influenced even by fluorescent lights.

The flesh acts as an insulator and effectively eliminates outside influences on the electronic impulses.

The transmitter, known as a myotelemetry implant, is the most sophisticated of its kind to be developed in Canada. Measuring about ¼-inch by ⅝-inch, it was implanted in an operation Sept. 6 by Dr. F. R. Tucker, director of the rehabilitation engineering department at the centre.

Miss Iverson, a 24-year-old honors student at University of Manitoba, was taught through therapy to control a specific muscle in the below-the-elbow stub of her right arm. Activation of the muscle stimulates the transmitter which sends impulses to the artificial limb.
